"Not all?" exclaimed Buckley.

"No, I got my foot into some'n' else. Jest after I landed in town I come down here, but you wasn't about. Then, as I had nothin' to do an' remembered that I had promised Major Cranston to come in an' give 'im an estimate on movin' several hundred acres o' tan bark on some o' his mountain land, I went down thar. He's a sick man. They got 'im propped up in a big chair in the settin' room, an' his wife an' daughter are nussin' him like a baby. But he wanted to see me, an' they made me come in. His gal is a beauty, George—but you know that—an' I never seed a body seem so much worried over a sick pusson as she was over her daddy. She loves every hair o' his old, white head. Whenever he'd have a spell o' coughin' she'd actually turn pale an' run fer his medicine. Well, when I got through with him I started out, but she follered me out on the lawn. She wanted to ax me, she said, ef I really thought her pa looked bad. She said she was afeard the doctor was keepin' back some'n' ur was behind the times an' hadn't diagnosed the case right. I could 'er all I could, laughin' at her fears tell she sorter got in a good humor, an' then in a roundabout way, 'fore she knowed what was on foot, I led up to my trip to Atlanta, an' "—

"Heavens, Truitt, you didn't tell her that?" George—

"Yes, I had to, George," said the old man, his eyes averted. "Some say she's thinkin' o' marryin' that man beca'se her sick daddy wants her to, an' I'd never be satisfied ef I let a woman marry a thing like that, believin' he was honorable an' brave like her daddy an' like somebody else I know. No; I would thank anybody to tell a daughter o' mine sech a thing, an' I felt like it was my duty."

George bit his lip and stifled an exclamation of irritation, but he met the old man's look presently with a steady stare.

"What did she say, Truitt?" he asked finally.

"Say? I hardly know," said Truitt. "Her face got the purtiest color I ever seed, an' while I was talkin' she kept sayin', 'Go on, go on, Mr. Truitt, go on!' an' right in the middle o' some things she'd jest laugh out an' kiver 'er mouth with that white hand o' her'n, but she kept sayin', 'Go on, go on!' an' looked like she jest couldn't wait fer me to git through. An' when I finally got to whar I lifted 'im by one o' his side straps out o' his chair she jest hollered: 'No, you didn't rallly, Mr. Truitt. Did you do that to the governor o' Georgia?' I told 'er I certainly did, an' she laughed like she'd bust. She followed me clean to the front gate. You may think she's a purty woman, but I'll bet she never looked as purty to you as she did then. The wind was devilin' her hair, an' her cheeks looked like ripe peaches. Seemed like she'd sorter tuck a likin' to me, fer once or twice she forgot 'im' put her hand on my arm. Then she said, 'Mr. Truitt, I believe I kin trust you with a secret, an' I want to tell you some'n'.'

"I told 'er I was a graveyard itself when it come to keepin' secrets fer women folks, but she sorter hung fire. Her face got serious, an' she wouldn't look me in the eye like she had been a-doin'. I told 'er not to be afeard o' me, an' she started in ag'in, but stopped. 'No,' says she, 'I believe I won't tell you after all. Men are the very dickens to tell tales.' Then I reminded 'er that I was a old Confederate soldier an' that women an' the'r private matters was sacred to men that had fit for the south an' its honor, an' that sorter fetched 'er. 'Well,' says she, 'you do look like a man a woman could trust, an' ef you'll give me your word that this won't go no furder I'll tell you.'

"'I'll do it,' says I.

"'Will you swear it?' says she.

"'Not only that,' says I, 'but I'll cross my heart.'

"'Well,' says she, 'that's all a woman could ax, an' I'm sorry I have to be so particular, but I'd rather die than have a single soul know what I'm goin' to tell you. I want to tell you to show how much I appreciate what you did on that Atlanta trip.' Then she swallowed once or twice, an', lookin' me in the eye, an' p'intin' across the yard, she said: 'Mr. Truitt, I was settin' in that summer house t'other night an' heard Governor Telfare insult George Buckley, an' I'm glad—glad—glad—you done what you done. As Governor Telfare was visitin' my house an' as father's health is so bad I couldn't do more, but I tried my best that night to show preference to Mr. Buckley, but he misunderstood me an' went off mad.'"

"She said that?" George exclaimed, his face aglow, his eyes flashing. "And did she say anything else?"

"Yes, she did, George, an' I got awfully sorry fer 'er. She told me her pa had set his heart on her marryin' Telfare, an' that she was afeard, since his father had died'rt distarte, to run contrary to his wishes. She said she was afeard the disappintment od actually kill 'im. I didn't know what to say. I tried to think o' some'n' comfortin', but couldn't, an' so I jest come off an' left 'er thar at the gate. The Lord does a sight o' things that is beyond our ken, but why he makes women like that un suffer is more'n I kin account fer. I reckon he knows his business, but it conflicts with my notions like ripe. Ef I was at the head o' this whirlin' universe I'd not let men like Telfare lord it over better folks; but the Almighty made the skunk, an' the feller may be so perfect, in his way, that he's actually pleasin' to an omnipotent eye. The truth is, Telfare may be stuck up thar to l'arn us contentment. I know I'd ruther be a cornfield nigger an' split rails in the brillin' sun 'an to be the sort of a governor that man is an' know it—like he knows it now."

Without another word Truitt turned and left the office. George sat a moment as if dazed by a sudden realization that had come to him from the old soldier's recital. He was recalling Lydia's appearance and manner as she came into the parlor that evening with the flower in her hand.

"God bless her!" he said reverently. "She was right, then, trying to show her contempt for Telfare's conduct, and I was brute enough to misjudge her."

CHAPTER XXV.

"I THINK the Lord had a hand in puttin' me next door to Mrs. Dugan," said Mrs. Hillyer to George that evening after supper. "When my sperits sink way down to zero I go out in the yard an' give 'er a chance to come over an' talk. No; I never go over thar. All I got to do is to let 'er see me, an' she's on me like a duck on a June bug. She'll talk yore head off, but she'll help you out of a tight whenever you give 'er the wink. Me an' her together worked Hortense as fine as split silk t'other day. You know, Jim Kenner's jest about crazy to pay his attentions, an' she holds off an' won't let 'im set in. I made up my mind six months ago that I'd make a match out o' that material, but beyond gittin' Jim to foller me all over creation an' her to fairly lap up all I had to say about 'im that was as nigh as I come to doin' business. It puzzled me right sharp, fer I knowed the gal had marry on her mind, an' I knowed Jim Kenner was jest the thing fer 'er. Finally I dropped on to the difficulty. You know, a steady gal like Hortense Snowden sometimes has a regular horror of a goody goody feller, an' I seed she thought he'd jest escaped bein' a preacher by a hair's breadth an' was not goin' with gals because he was afeard of 'em. I let Mrs. Dugan in on my racket, an' I 'lowed she'd have a fit, she was so tickled. She got her sewin' an' come over, an' we tuck chairs nigh Hortense, an' Mrs. Dugan begun. You'd 'a' thought she was on the courthouse stand swearin' in a murder case, she was so serious. She led up to it as gradual as a man drivin' a school o' fish upstream into a net. I think she give ever'body in Darley a slap or a dab in passin'. Finally she said it was the men that laid low an' that ever'body thought was so steady that was the regular devils on the sly. 'Now, thar's that long, slim shanked Kenner,' said she, flappin' out the sheet she was hemmin'. 'Folks thinks he's so innocent; but, la me, he's the terriblest flirt in seven states. He buys cotton all over the country an' has a gal in every town he hits.'

When life's autumn comes, women, worn out by the burdens of motherhood, yet shrink from that second "change of life" which will banish these burdens forever. They fear a change in form, in feature, in personal attractiveness. Such fears are largely warranted by the effects which this change produces in many women. But no woman need let these fears fret her.

Those who have used Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription do not suffer from the change of life either in face, form or feelings as do other women. This fact is due to the intimate connection of the general health with the health of the organs peculiarly feminine. By preserving the health of these organs, and relieving the system from the debilitating drains, ulcers and inflammations which sap its health, "Favorite Prescription" paves the way for this natural change to come in Nature's way, without the loss of capacity to please others or personal inability to enjoy life.

"Your 'Favorite Prescription' brought me safely through that difficult period, called 'change of life,'" writes Mrs. Mary Bumbaugh, of 344 E. Ankeny St., Portland, Oregon. "This change made a very unpleasant disturbance through my entire system. I had hot and cold flashes, sick headaches, backache and dizziness. Sometimes I was so irritable. My appetite was fitful and for days I was unable to eat a fair meal. My aunt recommended me to try Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and it made a great change for the better. Within two months the unpleasant feelings had disappeared. I have a husband and seven children so have had a practical experience, and was able to attend to my home duties without any more trouble. I can recommend your 'Favorite Prescription' as a grand medicine for women."

You may be willing that somebody else shall say that their baby is "just as good as Baby's Own," but you don't want that baby substituted for yours. Mothers buy what they know from other mothers' being "just as good" but don't let them substitute anything for "Favorite Prescription." It is absolutely unequaled.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

FROST'S
DIAMOND HALL, PETERBOROUGH

MR. M'WILLIAMS IN MONAGHAN.

Splendid Meeting in the Town Hall, Last Night.

Mr .F.D. Kerr and the Candidate Give Stirring Addresses—Government's Record Reviewed.

The Liberal campaign in North Monaghan, was opened by a meeting last night in the Town Hall, which, despite counter attractions, was unusually well attended. The chair was taken by Mr. Lynch, and the speakers were the candidate and Mr. F. D. Kerr, no one being present to represent the Opposition. There is every evidence that the Liberals will make an excellent showing in this township, and a noticeable feature of the election is the manner in which the young men are coming forward to assist the young candidate.

Mr. McWilliams in an address of an hour, reviewed the main issues in this election, and stated his own position on the various questions. He asked for the judgment of the electors of the riding on the administrative record of the Government, and declared that he had no fear of the verdict that would be given upon any impartial consideration of that record. The resources of the province had been preserved, and the lands and timber disposed of in a manner that brought to the province a revenue of over $30,000,000, every dollar of which had been spent in education, in agriculture, and in the maintenance of the public institutions. The Government had instituted new taxes upon the estates of deceased persons of wealth, upon the banks, loan companies, and other large corporations, upon the brewers and the distillers, and were about to add to the taxes paid by the railway companies; and in these ways had added to the moneys available for the purposes of the province nearly half a million dollars a year.

Mr. McWilliams stated his personal position upon the charges of corruption and upon the temperance question, and concluded by urging the Liberals to organize their forces and take a majority out of the hitherto Conservative township.

Mr. F. D. Kerr opened his remarks by congratulating the riding on the excellence of the candidates now before them, and on the absence of unpleasant personalities. He reviewed the record of the Government, showing in detail the saving which this administration has meant to the county of Peterborough, amounting to over $900,000, which would otherwise have had to be met by direct municipal taxes, if the services were to be had at all. The development of New Ontario was the greatest problem the Government of the province had to deal with, and Mr. Ross and his colleagues had shown an energy and foresight in this regard, which deserved the warm support of the people of the whole province. It is of the greatest importance that our new lands shall be developed, not only for the riches that lie hidden there, but also that homes may be provided for our young men, whose energy will thus be gained, instead of lost, to the province.

Mr. Kerr then dealt in some detail with the administration of the Agricultural Department, showing the splendid results that had followed the direction of these matters by a practical, expert farmer, instead of by lawyers and doctors, as in the old days of the Dominion; as a result of which the position which Ontario's Agricultural College and similar institutions now hold, is superior to those of any province or state on the continent. In the intelligent care which had been shown the interests of the farmers, as well as in the prudent management of the finances, in the Crown Lands, and Education Departments, the members of the present Government have displayed a statesmanship which entitled them to a renewed term of office, with a substantially increased majority.

In Mr. McWilliams the Liberals offered a candidate of unusual ability and unquestioned integrity, who had already shown himself possessed of the qualities which would make a capable and creditable representative of this riding, and he urged the electors to give him their hearty support.

MARK STREET CHURCH

Services in Mark Street church were unusually interesting and drew large congregations. The sermons by Rev. Mr. Lewis were very appropriate for the day and were listened to with closest attention.

The anthems by the full choir under the able leadership of Mr. Miller were deeply impressive and most suitable for New Year's day while Miss Courtney was never heard to greater advantage or with greater pleasure. The church was highly favoured in having a distinguished soloist, Mr. H. Whorlow Bull, of London, England, who has been a singer in Westminster and St. Paul's Cathedral choirs. Last Sabbath he sang in Great St. James Methodist Church, Montreal. He sang Sunday morning "Nazareth" by Gounod and in the evening "Abide with Me" by Liddle. The accompaniments were played by Mrs. Mowat. His singing was highly enjoyed by all and keenly appreciated by those with cultivated musical taste. Mr. Bull has exceptional musical talent and a voice of great compass and sweetness and has received training of the highest order. He is no doubt, one of the most attractive and efficient soloists that has visited our town in some time. Mr. Bull is visiting at the home of Rev. Mr. Lewis, Mark street.

Ald Adams was seen to-day with reference to what would be the next steps taken in connection with his bylaw concerning the payment for granolithic walks which bylaw was voted upon favourably by the electors on Monday last. Nothing further can be done beyond the drafting of the proposal to be submitted to the Legislature to be ratified at the next session of that body likely in the spring.

HOCKEY.

Two fast City League games are promised for this evening. The four strongest teams in the league will meet and the result will materially affect the standing of the different teams. At 8 o'clock the T. A. S. and the Farriers will meet in what promises to be a splendid contest while at 9 o'clock the Karnots and Colonials meet. The Young Nationals will not accept the challenge of the Aberdeens until they earn a reputation for themselves. The Nationals have defeated them twice this season—Monday, Dec. 26, 1-0 and Jan. 2, 1-3 and are out hunting for faster company.

In the opening game of the senior O. H. A. series, the St. Georges beat the Wanderers by 11-3 last night.

THE RING.

A good night's sport will be pulled off at Bradburn Opera House on Saturday evening, January 7th, when the following men will clash:—Geo. McDonnell, of Toronto; various Bon Longs, of Peterborough, will wrestle at 120 pounds, best two out of three falls. Two well-known local boys will wrestle for the 125 pound championship, of Peterborough, best two out of three falls. The chief wrestling bout of the evening will be between George Gauthier, of Peterborough, and Roy Bain, of Hamilton, at 168 pounds, best two out of three falls. Able Harris will box D. Christie eighteen rounds at 115 pounds. Harris has appeared in Peterborough before and has always made a showing. A good bout will be between J. Edwards, the hard-hitting 132 pounder of Buffalo, N.Y., and Pete Darkins, of Toronto, the Canadian champion, 15 rounds at 132 pounds.

In regard to the challenge of Nick Collins to Pete Barry, the latter writes the Examiner as follows:—

Sporting Editor of Examiner:

"I wish to say that I will meet Collins within four weeks after I give the Englishman whom I recently knocked out, another chance, as he claims that the knock-out was only a chance blow and that he knocked out his thumb in the first round. Collins will have to put up a forfeit with the sporting editor of the Examiner just to show that he means business. I will gladly meet Collins in a fifteen round bout, the purse to be divided whatever way suits him and any referee will do me. I think that is a fair deal if he is willing to fight me. I remain,

TEA AND CONCERT A GREAT SUCCESS

Splendid Programme at Fairmount Last Evening.

Charlotte Street Choir and Mr. C. Brown Assisted—A Successful Affair.

A tea and entertainment was held in the Methodist church, Fairmount, last evening, and proved to be one of the most successful events of this nature that has ever been held in connection with the church. Despite the fact that the affair had been postponed for a week on account of the bad condition of the roads, the attendance was very large, the church being crowded to over-flowing. Several bus loads from Peterborough, drove out for the occasion, including the Charlotte street church choir, and Mr. Charles Brown, who assisted in the programme. The numbers by the choir were well rendered, while Mr. Brown's Irish numbers were very popular.

The tea was a bountiful one, and met the high expectation of all present. The programme was one of much interest and the audience, which was most attentive and appreciative, considering the crowded condition of the building, showed their pleasure by encoring almost every number. Rev. H .V. Mounteer, the pastor of the church, was in the chair and opened the programme with a few welcoming remarks.

The Charlotte street choir sang as an opening number "First Christmas Morn," which was followed by a humorous Irish reading by Mr. C. Brown. A duet, "Tell us, Merry Birds," by Miss Ciara Bellegham and Mr. R. N. Jolliffe, was the next number, after which Mr. G. W. Jones recited a "medley," which was well received. The Charlotte street male quartette, Messrs. R. Freund, R. N. Jolliffe, G. W. Jones and E. H. Jolliffe, sang "Cornfield Medley," in popular style. The choir then sang "While Shepherds watched their Flocks by Night." A reading by Rev. Mr. Clare, Millbrook, was next on the programme, after which Mr. Jones gave a violin solo, and was recalled. Miss Bellegham and Mr. Jolliffe sang "No one in this World Like You." An address by Rev. Mr. Yule of Springville, contained many helpful thoughts. After another recitation by Mr. Jones, the male quartette sang a humorous number, "Obituaries," which was followed by another Irish reading by Mr. Brown, who was encored. The closing number was an anthem, "O, Zion, that bringest Good Tidings."

After the programme an autograph quilt was sold, Mr. R. Neill proving to be a capital auctioneer.

Miss M. Clarry was the accompanist for the evening.

Unexpected legal difficulties having arisen in regard to entering the State of Ohio, the Manufacturers Life cancelled their contract with Mr. J. W. Garvin, and have appointed him instead "Chief Inspector of Agencies." In 1905 Mr. Garvin will have long journeys to make in getting acquainted with the company's agencies. It is probable that he will continue to live in Peterborough. Mr. Garvin leaves to-night for Montreal and other cities in Quebec province.

POLITICS IN A NUTSHELL.

The Quebec Legislature has been called for Feb. 9. It is expected the session will be a short one, as the Government has not any important measure.

Henry Carscallen, K.C., was renominated for the Legislature Wednesday evening by the Conservatives of East Hamilton. Hon. Dr. Montague and Ald. Main were both nominated, but they withdrew, and Mr. Carscallen's nomination was made unanimous.

At a Conservative convention, held Wednesday in Spencerville, G. Howard Ferguson of Kemptville, was chosen as the candidate for Grenville in the coming election. There was a convention a year ago at which Mr. Ferguson was nominated, but R. L. Joynt, the sitting member, claimed it to have been unfair and demanded a new convention. It was held Wednesday, when Mr. Ferguson won out by five votes over Mr. Joynt. There is a little uncertainty as to whether Mr. Joynt will abide by the choice that has been made.

Douglas Shoe Store

At no time in the history of the shoe trade of Peterborough have the buying public been offered such a chance for money saving and worthful merchandise for the season as this opportunity presents. We well know that in order to reduce this mammoth stock to the minimum point just before inventory, cost cannot be taken into consideration and nothing will so quickly convert merchandise into cash as destructed prices. You and I have often read newspaper advertisements announcing great things, but when the searchlight of investigation has been turned on the facts of these so-called great bargain sales, have any of us ever found them to be true to detail? We say no, most decidedly so. It may be they will show you a certain line at a bargain, but if you desire to buy, it will just be discovered, and with much sorrow expressed, that they are out of the size wanted.

RUSSIA STRIKES ANOTHER SNAG.

Rojestvensky's Battleship Struck Rock and Foundered.

DISASTER FOR THE RUSSIANS

Japanese Lost 80,000 Men in Taking of Port Arthur—
—Stoessel and Nogi Meet and Confer together—
Rapidly Systemizing Affairs in Port Arthur
—Japs get 48,000 Russians at Port Arthur.

Paris, Jan. 6.—The St. Petersburg correspondent of the Paris edition of The New York Herald telegraphs that Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's flagship, the battleship Knias Souvaroff, has struck a rock and foundered.

The latest report from Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron was contained in a despatch dated Tamatave, Island of Madagascar, Jan. 2, in which it was stated that the Vice-Admiral's division of the Russian second Pacific squadron, consisting of five battleships, three cruisers, two transports and a hospital ship, had anchored on that day in the roadstead of Sainte Marie, an island on the east coast.

The Knias Souvaroff was built at St. Petersburg in 1902, and was of 13,516 tons displacement. Her length was 367½ feet, her beam 75 feet, her draught 26 feet, and indicated horse power 16,000. Her armament was of the Russian Krupp pattern and consisted of four 12-inch, 12 6-inch, 20 3-inch, 20 3-pounder and six 1-pounder guns. She had six torpedo tubes. Her complement of men was 740.

St. Petersburg Unisformed.

London, Jan. 6.—There is no confirmation here of the report from St. Petersburg of a disaster to the Russian battleship Knias Souvaroff. According to a despatch to The Daily Mail from Mahe, one of the Seychelle Islands (about 1,000 miles east of Zanzibar), Jan. 5, both divisions of the Russian second Pacific squadron were proceeding in the direction of Diego Suares. Merchantmen who passed Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's division report that the squadron keeps good stations and appears to manoeuvre well.

Japs Lost 80,000.

Che Foo, Jan. 6.—The statement of the censored despatches from correspondents with Gen. Nogi's army that the Japanese lost only 50,000 men in taking the fortress is declared to be absurd by Russian naval officers here. Their lowest estimate, they say, based both on personal observation and on stories told by the prisoners, is that the Japanese lost 80,000.

Stoessel Meets Nogi.

Headquarters of Third Japanese Army, Jan. 5, via Fusan.—A meeting between Gen. Stoessel and Gen. Nogi took place yesterday at Shushi village. The hour fixed for the meeting was noon, but owing to a misunderstanding of time, Gen. Stoessel arrived at 10.40 o'clock, and was received by a lieutenant. General Stoessel remained at Plum Tree cottage until 11 o'clock, when General Nogi arrived with his staff. The two generals met in a room of the cottage, and after an exchange of greetings held a long conference. When they emerged from the cottage the two generals shook hands and General Stoessel mounted his horse and rode away.

To Fortify the Fort.

Che Foo, Jan. 6.—Advices from Japanese sources say that the condition of Port Arthur is chaotic, but that Generals Nogi and Stoessel are rapidly systemizing affairs there. Gen. Nogi is prepared to put a horde of Chinese coolies at work in the fortifying of Port Arthur immediately the Russians are disposed of.

Marshalled Thursday.

London, Jan. 6.—Special despatches from Tokio say that the Port Arthur garrison was marshaled at 9 o'clock Thursday morning at Yahutsui, in accordance with the terms of the supplementary agreement.

JAPS GET 48,000 RUSSIANS.

There Are Also About 16,000 Sick and Wounded in Garrison.

Tokio, Jan. 6.—A report received yesterday from Gen. Nogi's headquarters largely increases the figures of the surrendered garrison, and intimates that the force handed over to the Japanese at Port Arthur will be 32,000, exclusive of 16,000 or 16,000 sick and wounded, making a rough total of 48,000.

The report is as follows:

As previously reported, the transfer of objects mentioned in article 2 of the capitulation compact took place on Jan. 4, and the transfer of the forts and batteries has been completed.

The prisoners will be assembled at the place appointed on Jan. 5, but the investigation relating to these prisoners is so complicated that the result cannot be reported at present.

Reports received up to date are as follows:

Generals	8
Admirals	4
Colonels and majors	57
Captains and commanders	100
Army captains and lieutenants	581
Naval lieutenants and officials	200
Army officials	99
Surgeons	109
Rank and file of army	22,484
Rank and file of navy	4,562
Army non-combatants	5,645
Naval non-combatants	620
Total	32,807

Besides these there are about 15,000 or 16,000 sick and wounded in the hospitals.

The volunteers are chiefly included in the list of non-combatants.

One hundred saddle horses and 1,870 draft horses were surrendered.

To Court Martial Stoessel.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 6.—Few incidents of the whole war have aroused more bitter criticism than the blunt announcement officially issued by the general staff that Gen. Stoessel will have to come home to stand court-martial for surrendering the fortress of Port Arthur. The Novoe Vremya, despite the example made by the suspension of The Russ Wednesday, says:

"By all means, let us have a court-martial and make it, if possible, severe. The cruel judge will, perhaps, deal leniently with those who have given their blood and lives for their country. Perhaps, also, the court will determine why a fortress known to be threatened with blockade is not supplied with necessary food, and munitions, to enable it to hold out. Perhaps such a court will bring to light many dark, hidden things and expose the creeping, underground enemies of Russia who are infinitely more dangerous to the nation than the foe who fights in the open."

Civil Officials Freed.

Tokio, Jan. 6.—A Port Arthur supplementary agreement published yesterday, provides for the appointment of commissioners to superintend the enforcement of the provisions in the capitulation compact and deals with the treatment of officers and men. The Commissioners meet at noon on Tuesday next.

Civil officials not connected with the army or navy shall follow the officers. Those who have not served as volunteers shall be released without parole.

Persons who are necessary to effect the transfer of the fortress buildings, warships, etc., must wear an emblem given by the Japanese authorities.

Private property carried by officers and officials shall be subjected to inspection, and must be limited in weight.

The agreement further provides for the transfer of hospitals, the immunity of non-combatants, their freedom of action, and the removal of private property.

It promises to facilitate the movement of families of officers and officials, but reserves the right of removal of objectionable persons and the release of Japanese prisoners.

RUSSIA'S DECISION.

Second Pacific Squadron Will Return to European Waters.

London, Jan. 6.—The most important effect of the fall of Port Arthur on the general military situation in the Far East became apparent yesterday in the decision of Russia to recall her second Pacific squadron. A despatch from St. Petersburg announces that the squadron will return to European waters.

The Emperor of Russia has returned to Tsarskoe-Selo from Minsk, and it is reported that an extraordinary council is to be held, at which the Empire's whole situation is to be reviewed, both as relates to the war and present internal affairs. The revolutionary leaders are apparently taking every advantage of the Government's position to compel the summoning of a national assembly, while the press is criticising bureaucracy with increasing savageness and boldness.

In fact, yesterday's despatches indicate that the internal situation is so grave that the conclusion of peace with Japan may be compelled in order to deal with it. The decision of the general staff, that Stoessel must return and face a court-martial for surrendering Port Arthur, even though it is a form compelled by army regulations, is also serving as a text for bitter criticism by the Russian papers.

British Ambassador's Denial.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 6.—Sir Charles Hardinge, the English Ambassador, has taken the unusual course of calling Foreign Minister Lamsdorff's attention to the statements of The Novoe Vremya, Jan. 3, to the effect that it had authoritative news that British warships were following Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron and reporting its disposition and movements to Tokio from each cable port reached, which the Ambassador declared to be false. Sir Charles particularly denied the imputation that British warships were committing breaches of neutrality by communicating Admiral Rojestvensky's movements to Japanese agents.

The Nigretia Condemned.

Nagasaki, Jan. 6.—The British steamer Nigretia has been condemned as a prize.

Clearing Away the Mines.

Tokio, Jan. 6.—The work of clearing away the mines in Port Arthur harbor commenced as soon as the Russian charts provided for in the capitulation agreement were delivered to the Japanese. The foreign attaches entered the fortress Wednesday.

Offer of Assistance Refused.

Wei-Hai-Wei, Jan. 6.—The first-class British cruiser Andromeda, which sailed from here Wednesday morning for Port Arthur with hospital stores and surgeons to assist the sick and wounded, returned here yesterday, not having been allowed to make a landing at Port Arthur. The cruiser proceeded to a small bay ten miles north of Port Arthur, where she met with some Japanese. The latter refused all offer of assistance or stores of any kind and declined to allow the ship's officers to approach closer, the reason given being the presence of unlocated mines.

COMMANDER OF MIDLAND BATTERY

Lt. Col. Machachtan Praised by Military Gazette.

What he has Done to Raise the Standard of 14th. Midland Field Battery.

The 14th Midland Field Battery, during the last few years, has attained to considerable prominence in Canadian militia affairs, and its commander, Lt.-Col. N. F. MacNachtan, of Cobourg, was the subject of the following personal sketch in the current issue of the Canadian Military Gazette:—

"Lt.-Col. N. F. MacNachtan, commanding the 14th (Midland) Field Battery, with headquarters at Cobourg, is to be heartily congratulated on the success of that Battery which heads the list in the general efficiency return of Canadian Field Batteries for 1904. Colonel MacNachtan is an enthusiastic militia man and an efficient officer. For thirty-four years he has faithfully served his country in the ranks of the militia, devoting his time mainly to th artillery branch of the service. He probably knows more than any other artillery officer in Canada about the technicalities of that branch, being in fact, the author of quite a valuable treatise on the subject entitled "A Guide for Field Artillery," issued this year. In camp, Colonel MacNachtan is a worker from start to finish. A peep into his tent at midnight, or even later, would most likely discover him poring over the latest edition of "Field Artillery Training," or laying plans with one or more of his officers for to-morrow's drill. Col. MacNachtan is a believer in uniform gun laying, and his success in firing is due to the fact that he personally instructs his layers. Consequently he takes his post as battery commander at the ranging flank with a supreme degree of confidence in his gunners, knowing that his guns will burst precisely at the given ranges."

PUBLIC OWNERNHIP.

Whatever merits there are in public ownership, the Ross Government has been the first to practically appreciate their importance. By planning and building the Temiscamingue Railway from North Bay to Lake Temiscamingue and thence Northward to connect with the Grand Trunk Pacific and ultimately to Hudson Bay, the Ross Government has not only put into practice the main principle of public ownership, but has made practicable, plans and possibilities for opening up to settlement, and developing the resources of, an area of country greater in extent than old Ontario. Not only has this line been built by the Government in the public interests, by the utilization of the resources its construction makes valuable, but in connection with it special provision has been made for protecting provincial interests and applying the principle of public ownership. All probable town sites along the line of the Government railway in its over 300 miles, when completed, are reserved by the Government, to be divided into lots, and sold, the price to go into the treasury of the province. This is far preferable to permitting speculators to gain possession of such sites and hold the property for advance in values through surrounding improvements and thus not only ultimately enriching themselves at the public expense, but obstructing progress and growth of population.

A similar policy is applied to water power sites to prevent them from becoming the spoil of speculators, and protect the public interests.

The attitude of Mr. Whitney and the Conservative Opposition, in relation to the immense power development at Niagara Falls is in striking contrast. The Government has granted charters to three companies to develop 375,000 horse power of electricity. The charters involve the arrangement that a rental is to be paid to the province of $375,000 per year, as much as a capital of five and a half millions would yield at 5 per cent. This was a good arrangement to make, for the province could not reasonably undertake the development and operation of this particular water power without doing the same for all parts of the province. This would demand an expenditure of money, which the province, with an annual revenue of about four millions, could not undertake, for the present works, when completed, will cost twenty-five millions. Development of water power, for commercial purposes, seems to be the point where public ownership in the public interest, could, with advantage to the public interests, give place to private enterprise.

The policy of the Government, as applied, brings in a revenue of $375,000 a year for the Niagara Falls power privileges. What is Mr. Whitney's policy or, rather, plan, in this regard? At a bye-election in Welland, in 1900, Mr. Whitney, who is now posing as the apostle of political purity, to gain, no doubt, a few votes for his candidate, to secure the votes of the electors of the people of Niagara Falls, for his candidate, proposed to abolish the rental and make Niagara Falls power "free as air," thus at the same time, if that was his object, unduly influencing the electors by a bribe of free power, and betraying the interests of the province; for, if his intention had prevailed, the province would have been deprived of a yearly revenue of $375,000. Here is an instance of where Mr. Whitney, the missionary of public purity, was willing to, and actually did, for the sake of getting political support, make a corrupt bid for votes and, at the same time, was willing to sacrifice $375,000 of yearly revenue, and prevent it from reaching the treasury of the province. Two hundred and seventy-five thousand dollars a year was a pretty stiff price to pay for a few votes. Yet Mr. Whitney, with this tragic act unrepentant of, has the assurance to ask election, as a champion of electoral administering the affairs of the province. Is he a safe man?

LOOK AT THE TWO PICTURES

"I have now shown by way of preface what we have done, and only very partially. Now, let us look at the attitude of our opponents. It is well to look upon this picture and then on that. We are entering now on our ninth campaign as a Government, and our opponents are entering their ninth campaign, too. They have carried on the war against us almost as long as the war of the Spanish Succession and almost as useless a war. (Hear, hear.) Now, do you suppose that the people of Ontario are such idiots that if our opponents in this ninth campaign had something better to present to them than we had that they would not have taken them up long ago? They had an opportunity. Sir Matthew Crooks Cameron was their first leader, and he deserted the army that he led. Sir Wm. Meredith was their second leader. He went through four or five campaigns with them, and he abandoned the contest. Mr. Marter followed for a short time. He was not satisfactory to his party, for they retired him almost forcibly, and Mr. Whitney has been at it now for about six or seven years. So near and yet so far. (Laughter.) Now, that is a simple proposition. If our opponents were unable in all these eight campaigns under such leaders as I have mentioned to submit an alternative policy to the people of this country which was more acceptable than ours, surely the people would have accepted it before now."
—Premier Ross at Temple Banquet.

Our Position in Education.

"Education is not perfect in this or in any other country, nor never will be perfect in accordance with the ideas of some people; but we know where we stand," said Premier Ross at the Toronto banquet. "We took the first position at the World's Fair, and we take the first position in the estimation of visitors from abroad who examine our schools. The products of our schools and universities take first positions with the products of other universities. (Applause.) You had an example here in Toronto the other day in the person of Dr. Oster, who has been transferred to first place among the positions of Great Britain. (Renewed applause.)

THE TWO PARTIES ARE CONTRAST D

What Serves the Conservative Opposition for a Policy'

The Ross Government's record is before the country, and the people of Ontario are not likely to overlook the important fact that its administration is not being attacked by the Opposition. No more convincing proof could be given of the soundness of the Government's policy, and the thorough way in which Provincial affairs are administered, than this failure of the Opposition to offer criticism. Hundreds of millions of dollars have been expended, and the Opposition would, if they could, find fault with the way it has been handled — would show, if they could, that there is political favouritism in the disbursing of public funds. They attempt nothing of the kind. The opponents of the Ross Government would, if they could, show that the policy of the Administration is not what it ought to be, and would point out ways and means whereby the public welfare could have been promoted, but was not. But the Opposition is absolutely unproductive of criticism, and by that course concede that the administration is not open to attack.

It is on the conduct of elections only that the Government is being assailed. Fault is found with the way an occasional supporter has won his election, not with the administrative use Mr. Ross and his colleagues have made of office.

According to the writers and speakers of the Opposition, the voters have little to do with keeping the Government in power—this they say is done by machinery, although the people throughout Ontario know better. The voter, viewing his own constituency, knows very well that one party follows precisely the same methods as the other in striving for success. He knows that there is as much zeal among the honest people of one side as among those of the other. He knows there are men on both sides who, if they could, would win without much caring how they did it. He knows, too, that in his own constituency the majority of men on both sides are firmly opposed to improper practices. Perhaps it is possible to convince this man that elsewhere—in other constituencies—men are of a different kind, and that candidates can be elected without having public opinion behind them. This is what the Opposition has set out to do. This is its only policy. For several years it has been shouting without ceasing against the election practices of the Liberal party. And yet, with all the outcry that was made along this line immediately after the general elections of 1902, what resulted from the election trials in which the campaign practices of the two parties came under scrutiny of the law? Twenty-one protests went to trial; four Conservatives were unseated, and only two Liberals. The whole country rang with charges, it being said that nearly every Liberal member would have a protest filed against him, so "awful" was the work of "the machine." All this outcry dwindled and died away, and four representatives of the purity fund party lost their seats, while only two members of the "wicked" party were unseated. The significance of this will not be lost on the

CHAOS AND RECONSTRUCTION

Where Paternalism was Desirable and Proved a Profitable Investment—True Story of the Soo.

In 1895 the first concession was made to Mr. F. H. Clergue for the establishment of Pulp Works at the Sault. Out of this, involving originally an investment of about $1,000,000, there grew the following industries:

Chloride Pulp Works, Nickel Reduction Works, Car Shops, Veneering Mills, Steel Plant, The Algoma Central Railway.

These industries involved the expenditure of about $33,000,000. The financial stringency in the United States in 1902-3 so crippled the industries that they had to suspend operations, and as a consequence about 5,000 men were thrown out of employment.

In October an appeal was made to the Government to advance the wages due the employees, as winter was approaching and their families were dependent upon their daily earnings. In fact, a riot was threatened unless some relief were afforded. The Government met this condition of things by an arrangement with the Banks whereby the sum of $260,000 was paid as the arrears of wages to employees of the different Companies concerned. The Government was protected in this advance by the land grant promised the Railway, inasmuch as no part of the land grant had been transferred. The advance made to the Banks was, therefore, a lien on the property of the Company. Already nearly one-half of this advance has been repaid and the Government holds the guarantee of the Company that the remainder will be paid on or before the 1st of February next.

REVIVAL OF THE INDUSTRIES.—The payment of the wages, although affording a measure of relief, still left the Company under a mortgage of $4,500,000 to Speyer & Company, of New York, and as the mortgage was overdue, Speyer & Company declared their intention to foreclose and sell the property at public auction. From such sale certain consequences disastrous to the industries might follow. (1) The Company, besides the Speyer mortgage, owed different creditors $1,800,000; of this sum $1,200,000 was owing to Canadian creditors. If the mortgage were foreclosed all these creditors would be shut out and many of them could ill-afford the loss. (2) It was generally believed that if the property were transferred the Algoma Central Railway, which the Province had subsidized with a grant of 7,400 acres of land per mile would not be completed, and as the railway traversed valuable mineral, agricultural and timber districts, its extension to the Canadian Pacific was considered of great importance. The permanent failure of the Sault industries also involved the failure of the railway. This was undesirable. (3) It was well understood that if the Speyer mortgage were foreclosed, the United Steel Trusts that were the expected purchasers, and that had an option on the Works, would not operate the steel plant. This Trust, which controlled all the Steel industries of the United States, was anxious to prevent the manufacture of steel rails in Canada. By getting possession of the plant at the Sault, in which about $7,000,000 were invested, they would hold the Canadian market for their American industries. The effect of this would be to prevent the development of the iron mines on the Eastern shore of Lake Superior and to crush one of the greatest industries ever launched in Canada.

In this crisis an effort was made to re-organize the Company on a new basis, and the Government was assured that if the bonds of the new Company were endorsed to the extent of two millions of dollars a reorganization could be effected. After the most careful consideration of the responsibility involved and the advantages to the Province from the re-establishment of these industries, the Government agreed to endorse the bonds, as already stated to the extent of two millions of money, on the condition that the railroad should be completed. The securities of the Government for this endorsement were: (a) the land grant already earned amounting to at least 600,000 acres, estimated by Mr. Whitney in 1901 at $8 an acre; (b) 160 miles of railroad already completed; (c) a subsidy of $240,000 earned from the Dominion Government, but not paid over; (d) a first mortgage on all the property of the Company, the first cost of which was $30,000,000. With such ample security, the Government had no hesitation to pledge the credit of the Province for the sum of two millions of dollars for a period of two years, and the results have amply justified its confidence in the undertaking, as the following facts show:—

(1.) The Steel Plant is producing 500 tons of steel rails per day, which, at $28 per ton, earns $14,000 per day.

(2.) The Pulp Mills produce 100 tons of pulp per day, which, at $15 a ton, earn $1,500 per day.

(3.) The Helen Mine is producing 1,000 tons of iron ore per day at $3.25 per ton, earning $3,250 per day.

The earning power of the other industries cannot be so accurately estimated, but may be put at $200 per day.

On the 1st November there were employed in these various industries 3,613 men. The pay roll for the month of October was $130,668.49.

Mr. Whitney, in an address at Mr. Borden's meeting in the Massey Hall, [illegible] $5,000,000 given in aid of the Sault industries might as well also been thrown into Lake Superior. This is Mr. Whitney's idea of the duty of a Government in a great crisis.

A GOVERNMENT THAT DOES THINGS

People of Ontario Want a Government That Can and will do Things—If the Needs of the Province Require Action for Which There is no Precedent Ross Makes the Precedent, in Doing What is Needed.

A GOVERNMENT THAT DOES THINGS.

The People of Ontario Want a Government That Can and Will Do Things—If the Needs of the Province Require Action for Which There Is No Precedent Ross Makes the Precedent in Doing What I Needed.

The Soo industries, Mr. Ross continued, fell into difficulties. The stock speculators in the United States practically impoverished some of the men who were at the back of the industries. They had invested $23,000,000 in plants of various kinds. The turn had been reached where, if the Government did not assist the industries, the steel trust of the United States, that practically had a mortgage in whole, would close those industries. "We were not going to bend the knee to the Americans," said he, "in allowing the interests of the Province of Ontario to be sacrificed by the millionaires of Wall street. We said to the Legislative Assembly: 'We will endorse the bonds of this concern to the extent of $2,000,000 on everything they owned. They will pay the interest and redeem the bonds in two years.'" Proceeding, Mr. Ross said this action, taken in spite of the Opposition, had resulted in reviving the Soo industries; 4,000 men in round numbers were being employed, and $130,000 a month, or $1,500,000 a year, was being paid in wages. These men were being fed and supplied from older Ontario, were getting pork, bacon, wheat and flour and the produce of the dairy from Lennox among the other older counties. The first six months' interest on the bonds guaranteed by the Government, $50,000, and on the mortgage bonds, $250,000, had been paid when the money recently fell due. Nearly all the creditors, 1,800 in all, had been paid a sum of $2,700,000. About twenty-five or thirty thousand dollars yet remained to be paid, and he believed this would be paid before the beginning of the new year. He spoke of the large contracts given by the Canadian Pacific, the Intercolonial and the Temiskaming Railways as proof of the prosperity and bright future of the Soo works, and incidentally referred to the legislation providing that no one should be employed on works aided by the Government who came from countries where there is an alien law against Canadians.—Premier Ross at Barrie.

IS IT TIME FOR A CHANGE?

Conservatives say it is time for a change in Ontario. The Liberals said so in 1896 in regard to Ottawa. The difference lies in the fact that the Liberals in 1896 proved there was need for a change. They not only made charges but they proved them. McGreevy was in jail—Langevin driven from public life—and abuses of public office for gain were proved up to the hilt. Finally the belt of part of the Cabinet against Premier Bowell showed the country the truth of the Liberal charges that the Conservative Government at that time was unfit to govern and that it was "time for a change."

Have any charges of contract breaking, of dishonest management of the public funds or resources been proven or even specifically made against the Ontario Government?

Premier Ross said at Napanee:—

I want this note to go to the country—that every member of the Liberal Administration, that has been in power since 1871, is able to stand before the most critical court in the land, before any committee of the House. As I have often done in days gone by, I challenge our opponents to show that the Administration has been corrupt, that we have traded in our position for political support, that we have bartered public contracts for election funds, or that we have done anything that will bring a feeling of shame to the most sensitive conscience. That is our challenge to the country to-day. (Loud cheers.) We say that after 34 years' service it is a challenge you will admit that I can make with some pride. So that when we said in 1896 it was time for a change we made out a case. There is no case made out in the present instance. (Cheers.)

The Finances Were Safe.

Mr. Whitney, Hon. G. W. Ross said, at the Temple banquet in Toronto, wanted an audit of the finances. The Province of Ontario had an auditor with the same powers as Mr. Lorne Macdougall at Ottawa, and he thought the finances were safe in his hands. There was also a Public Accounts Committee on which twenty-four Conservatives sat every session. Still Mr. Whitney did not think the public accounts were well enough known to the people, and proposed putting them in the churches and schools. If his (the speaker's) pastor, Rev. Dr. Milligan, were to open a copy of the public accounts in church on Sunday and proceed to preach a sermon from it, he thought he would have to be excused, go home and read Milton's "Paradise Lost" or "Paradise Regained."

"The very childishness of these proposals," said Mr. Ross, "shows the extremities to which they are driven. They have no larger scheme to appeal to the imagination, nothing to do anybody substantial good. I do not claim to be equal in capacity to those of my predecessors who gave you much of that legislation. We have done a little good in the last five years. But I have given you the record of the Liberal party and it is our ambition to keep that high level during the term of our administration." (Applause.)

NOT A DOLLAR MISPLACED

Not a Dollar Misplaced.

"We assisted in the construction of 2,800 odd miles of railway, and to this moment our opponents are not able to say that we misplaced a dollar or aided in the construction of a single mile of useless railway. (Applause.) We set ourselves to supply the necessary public accommodation for normal schools, for public institutions, asylums, Central Prison, and so on. We had to erect Parliament Buildings for the necessary accommodation of the Legislature. In thirty years we have spent $9,518,571 ob public buildings. Let any one of you sit down to see what that involves—the drawing of plans, the managing of contracts, and so on—and you will see that some of the large enterprises which I have named, and will name in a moment, required considerable effort on the part of the Government. There the buildings are. No architect will condemn them. They are perfectly arranged, so far as sanitary accommodation and everything else is concerned. The money was paid out of the Public Treasury, and no man can place his hand on one single dollar paid for blood money, for political purposes, or misapplied in any way, so far as the Government is concerned." (Applause.)—Premier Ross at Toronto Banquet in his honor.

IT IS NO TIME FOR A CHANGE NOW

The Liberal Government had collected $124,000,000 and spent $121,000,000 of it, and on the day the House was dissolved there was cash on hand of $2,950,000. (Cheers.) "Fancy the Conservative party in power for thirty years and having any capital!" remarked the Premier. "The thing is unthinkable, and if you give them a chance, in five years they will not have much in the treasury, but somebody will have it, and it is to this forced distribution that I am so decidedly opposed." The record of the Government's administration was unimpeachable.

GRAPPLED WITH LARGE QUESTIONS

"In the last 30 years we have grappled with great problems and we have accomplished, or rather we have achieved, success in regard to every one of them. You cannot put your hand upon any great enterprise to which the Liberal party addressed itself, or upon any great measure it undertook to dispose of, and I am proud to say that it had the courage to grapple with great measures, without finding that each and all of these have resulted in advantage to the country and credit to the party." (Applause.)—Premier Ross in Toronto.

Nervous, Sick Headache.

Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for a long time with headaches, which would come on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. I tried headache powders and quiet cures, which did no good. About eight months ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I have not been troubled with headache since."

SYNDICATE METHOD PAYS

On Its Adoption Manufacturers Spent $100,000 On Improvements, With a Decidedly Notable Advance in Quality of the Product—Making of Fodder Cheese—Prof. Ruddick and Hon. Sydney Fisher.

Brockville, Jan. 6.—The sessions of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Convention yesterday were attended by an increased number of delegates who evinced keen interest in the proceedings. G. G. Publow, chief inspector for Eastern Ontario, presented an exhaustive report of the past season's result of syndicate work, and addressed the members on the subjects of "Cheese Making," in the course of which he stated that since the adoption of the syndicate method nearly $100,000 had been invested by manufacturers on improvements in cheese factories, and that the cheese product of the two months ending the past season showed a marked improvement over the product of the same season in prior years.

Much to Be Done.

G. A. Putnam, superintendent of farmers' institutes for Ontario, stated while much advance is perceptible in the dairy industry a great deal more remains to be done, for fully 15 per cent. of the factories of the Province are away below the standard that ought to be maintained. He also noticed that 95 per cent. of Ontario's farmers exhibit apathy in getting into touch with agricultural organizations. Farmers needing instruction should be visited in order to get them into touch with progressive methods, and the opportunities of instructors should be enlarged.

A general discussion followed, in which Prof. Robertson suggested that syndicate instructors, on finding conditions showing progress, should give the greatest publicity to the facts.

Farmers Responsible.

In answer to a speaker, who attempted to make it appear that instructors were to blame for encouraging the manufacture of fodder cheese, Prof. Publow said that the persons responsible are the farmers who produce the milk. Instructors do not go out until after May 1 of each year. He also remarked that the greatest percentage of rejected and poor cheese put upon the market at Montreal came from Brockville district. One great reason for this is the existence of many small, poorly equipped factories.

Mr. Breese of Delta, advocated the grading of cheese in order that the best factories and best makers may obtain the best prices.

Prof. Ruddick Speaks.

The most important address at the afternoon session was delivered by Prof. Ruddick, chief of the dairy division, Ottawa, on "The Cool Curing Question." He recommended a temperature of 60 degrees as the best for the curing of cheese, and pointed out that the saving effected by a cool curing room was about 1 lb. per box in the season. He gave results of the Government Cool Curing Stations, and figured out that to factories patronizing the Brockville Station the past year there was a profit of about $1,000.

M. Ballantyne, A. W. Grant, A. Ferguson, and others, representing the Montreal Merchants' Produce Association, discussed the cheese question in its various aspects.

Dr. Connell, Kingston; Prof. Dean, Guelph; Hon. John Gould, Ohio; C. C. James, Deputy Minister of Agriculture, and Hon. Sydney Fisher, Ottawa, took part in the evening exercises. A committee appointed to report upon the advisability of licensing cheese factories recommended that the matter be postponed for another year, which was adopted.

The convention closes to-day.

Irish Stock Raisers Alarmed.

London, Jan. 6.—(C. A. P.)—The growing agitation for the admission of Canadian store cattle to Great Britain is viewed with alarm by the Irish stock raisers who interpret it as involving the total ruination of their industry. The agitation against the removal of the embargo is growing day by day. Special stress is laid on Lord Onslow's former declaration that Ireland is supplying the deficiency caused by the act of 1896, and that now the price of store cattle is lower than the days of free imports. William Field, M.P. (Nationalist), is championing the case of those opposed to the admission.

LIBERALS AROUSED

Premier Ross Gets Enthusiastic Reception at Ingersoll.

SUCCESSION OF OVATIONS

Liberals "Have Their War Paint On" and Gave Mr. Ross a Great Demonstration—Hon. A. G. MacKay Nominated Amid Enthusiasm At Owen Sound—Mr. Whitney Talks At Paris.

Ingersoll, Jan. 6.—If Liberalism in South Oxford was temporarily aroused at the last election it is now awakened and fighting as it probably never fought before for the principles which have nearly always been dominant in this county and which will, unless all signs fail, array themselves again in the election of Mr. W. A. Dowler. The coming of Premier Ross to Ingersoll last night occasioned a great demonstration, such as Liberals can give when, as he describes it, "they have their war paint on." It was a succession of ovations from his arrival at the station until his return to the hotel after the meeting, and if surface indications count for anything Mr. Donald N. Sutherland may well send for reinforcements, as he has already done, in billing Mr. Whitney for a meeting here on Saturday night. The Premier's speech covered some of the old ground in new form, and was marked by further pointed queries as to why the Opposition, whose record was one of mistakes, should be substituted for the Government, whose administrative record was without blemish. He was met by a query about J. B. Jackson, and he promptly denounced the act of that gentleman and took no responsibility for his appointment to public office. The speech of Mr. Dowler was most creditable, showing him to be an excellent candidate whose worth commends him to every elector, especially to a riding of such high intelligence and standing as South Oxford. The meeting was crowded to suffocation and hundreds cheerfully stood throughout the entire time and cheered the popular Premier as he proceeded.

Hon. A. G. MacKay Nominated.

Owen Sound, Jan. 6.—Hon. Alex. Grant MacKay, Commissioner of Crown Lands, was for a third time the unanimous selection of the North Grey Liberals yesterday. The town hall was filled to the doors with what was without doubt the most representative delegation ever gathered in Owen Sound at a political convention. The event was marked by an intense and contagious enthusiasm, and there were incidents during the afternoon that make the convention a memorable one, but the most inspiring moment was undoubtedly when sixty delegates of mature years, representing the best citizenship of Meaford and St. Vincent, marched to the front of the hall and took their seats amid the applause of their fellow-delegates from other parts of the riding. The ardor of the St. Vincent and Meaford delegation was not cooled by their mid-winter drive of twenty miles, and indicated admirable loyalty to their candidate and to the Administration which has managed so well and so long the affairs of Ontario. It was a subject of comment that the convention was made up of the party's ablest gentlemen whose places in their respective communities were unquestioned, and whose moral standing spoke volumes for their unshaken faith in Ontario's grand old man, in a constituency where vilification is the order of the day and an honest discussion of public affairs the exception. The hall was not elaborately decorated, but the importance of the event was given significance by an arrangement of flags and banners, on which the following mottoes were conspicuous: "Remember Ross," "MacKay for North Grey," "Keep Ontario in the lead," and "The Ross Government and Progressive Ontario." Mr. MacKay dealt with the issues of the day, especially the local matters, in a masterly manner.

Mr. Cameron in Halton.

Milton, Jan. 6.—Mr. D. O. Cameron of Oakville, barrister, was the unanimous choice of the Liberals of Halton yesterday, to contest the riding in their interests, in opposition to Dr. Nixon, the Conservative candidate. His was the only name proposed, and the popularity of the candidate was evidenced by the enthusiastic temper of the meeting.

Mr. Pringle Will Run.

Belleville, Jan. 6.—The West Hastings Reform Association held its annual meeting yesterday afternoon, and Henry Pringle, who was on Dec. 22, offered the Liberal nomination in opposition to Mr. Morrison, formally accepted the same.

Hamilton Liberals.

Hamilton, Jan. 6.—The Liberals last evening nominated, for the Legislature, Ald. George S. Kerr in West Hamilton and Dr. Griffin for East Hamilton. The one convention made the nomination for both ridings.

Mr. Whitney at Paris.

Paris, Jan. 6.—Mr. J. P. Whitney addressed a large meeting held in the Opera House here last night in the interests of Mr. J. H. Fisher, Conservative candidate for North Brant. The Opposition leader was received as he entered the hall with prolonged applause and some cheers. He was accorded a kindly hearing, as were also the other speakers. Mr. Whitney dismissed the Napanee incident in a sentence or two unlike Mr. Cockshutt who preceded him and who devoted some time to the matter. As to coalition, Mr. Whitney practically repeated the statement made in his address at Cornwall on Tuesday night. The newest point in his address was an expressed desire to know if the money standing in the banks to the credit of this Province was obtained from the sale of the Temiskaming Railway bonds.

BOND OF THE MAIL CARRIER.

Which Is Said to Disquality Member-Elect For West Huron.

Ottawa, Jan. 6.—At the Postoffice Department yesterday a reporter was shown the bond of Thomas Gundry, mail carrier at Goderich, which is alleged to disqualify E. N. Lewis, barrister, and A. M. Polly, gentleman, all of Goderich, in the sum of $400 for the carrying of the mail from the Grand Trunk station to the Goderich postoffice. The bond was witnessed by John Galtor, affidavits to the securities were sworn before W. Lane, J.P. It is dated Feb. 18, 1903.

The Annapolis Counter Petition.

Halifax, Jan. 6.—The counter-petition of S. W. Pickup, M. P.-elect for Annapolis County, for the disqualification of the defeated Conservative candidate, claims that with the consent or privity of the respondent an agreement was entered into with David Russell and Hugh Graham of Montreal and other persons, whereby they were to furnish or cause to be furnished, sums of money to be used as campaign funds for the Liberal-Conservative party; also that an agreement was entered into with James Crathern of Montreal, and other persons, by which sums were to be collected from parties interested in the Liberal-Conservative party to be paid to agents, committees, or political supporters of the party at the election.

Mr. Wm. S. Crape, of California, Md., suffered for years from rheumatism and lumbago. He was finally advised to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did and it effected a complete cure. This liniment is for sale by all druggists.

SUNDAY SCHOOL'S HAPPY EVENING.

Entertainment in Connection with St. Luke's.

Tea for the Little Folks—Good Programme—Distribution of Prizes.

The annual Christmas entertainment in connection with St. Luke's Sunday School was held last evening. A very large number of scholars were present besides many friends of the school, and the affair could hardly have been more successful or more enjoyable. The severity of the weather seemed to have but little effect upon the attendance, the school room being well filled.

In the early part of the evening, the members of the junior class enjoyed a tea which was served by the teachers, after which a programme of much merit was given. A very interesting feature of the evening was the distribution of prizes and honour certificates to those whose attendance and conduct during the past year merited these gifts. Rev. E. A. Langfeldt was chairman and in a few remarks at the opening of the programme he made reference to the splendid progress which the school had made during the past year and expressed the hope that the present year would be a banner one in the history of the school.

The programme opened with a Christmas Carol by the children of the school. Recitations which were received most heartily were given by the following young people: Lizzie Mannece, Reta Gaskins, Wilhelmina Gaskins and Alex. McAllister. An instrumental duet was contributed by Miss M. Sawyer and Miss E. Dawson, a piano solo by Miss Katie Leary, a vocal solo by Miss Lulu Scott. A song by Prudence Long, a member of the Primary Class, was one of the most popular numbers of the evening. A kindergarten drill by pupils of Miss Williamson was most interesting.

Upon the conclusion of the programme a large number of prizes were distributed by the Rector. There were four grades,—those entitled to the honour roll by reason of the attendance for 50 Sundays during the year; the first prize pupils, who attended from 46 to 50 Sundays; the second prize pupils who attended from 45 to 46 Sundays, and the third prizes who attended from 40 to 45 Sundays. Of course proficiency in the lessons is also requisite. The prizes consisted of story books, prayer and hymn books and Bibles. Mr. D. H. Curtis received a handsome Bible, because of his being the teacher who had served the longest in the school. His record is ten years of faithful service. Several teachers were remembered by their classes. Mrs. Warde and Mr. Fred Kelly were the recipients of literary works from the members of the Bible Class.

The superintendent of the school, Mr. David Spence, is deserving of congratulation upon its flourishing condition.

The names of the children who received certificates and prizes are:—Ella Curtis, Ruby Quartermaine, Albert Whittaker, Addie Mitchell, Ethel Pakenham, Violet Whittaker, Doris Donaldson, May Curtis, Mabel Mackey, Pearl Smith, Annie McLean, Ada Adams, Hazel Crane, Viola Smith, Gladys Whittaker, Willis Colquhoun, Harold Adams, Wilfrid Adams, Arthur Lipsett, Eunice Curtis, Ada Morris, Eva Crane. These received a certificate of honourable mention.

GUN FATALITY AT CORDOVA

Coroner's Inquiry Into Cause of Death of the Lad Duval

Evidence Taken Before Coroner Gray—High County Constable Cochrane's Investigation.

Yesterday, at Rockdale school house, Belmont, the inquest into the cause of the death of James Duval, some of the particulars of whose death, have already been published in the Examiner, was held, and considerable evidence was taken before an adjournement was made to next Wednesday at Cordova, to conclude the inquest.

The event was one which proved an attraction to the residents of that section, and the school was filled with a large number of spectators, or, at any rate, as many as the building would hold, and a number of ladies were among those present.

The body of the boy, who was killed last Saturday, was buried in a cemetery adjoining the school house, and it was exhumed yesterday to allow the members of the coroner's jury to view the remains,, which they did prior to the evidence being taken.

County Constable Cochrane, to whom the event was reported, had investigated the circumstances of the case, and had the principal witnesses on hand to give evidence.

The jury empannelled was as follows: John Brown, foreman; Adolphus Brown, Absolom Brown, Thomas McLaughlin, William Thomas, John F. Purdy, Wm. E. Young, Stewart Crossing, Jas. G. Covert, Eliahu Youmans, William Stenborough, Alex. Lawson, Jas. Freeman, Wilfrid William Ellis.

The only witnesses examined yesterday were John Sisson, the half-brother of the dead boy, and the one who fired the shot that killed him, Herman Sisson, a twelve year old boy, the brother of the former, and Mr. Cochrane.

The facts in connection with the case, as brought out in the evidence, are substantially the same as have been already reported in these columns.

It appears that last Saturday morning about eight o'clock, John and Herman Sisson, who are half-brothers of the deceased boy, their mother having married William Duval, started out on a porcupine hunt, from their home at the Ledyard mine, about half a mile from the Cordova mines. The elder boy, John, carried a Marlin 38.55 rifle, and the younger an air rifle. The boy, Jas. Duval, who was about nine years of age, started to follow the older boys, but his mother, according to the evidence that was submitted, told him not to go, and his older companions also told him the same, John saying that he had better not go, as he might get shot in the woods. He still followed some distance, and at last the younger of the two Sisson boys, Herman, went back to take young Duval back to the house, but before he reached him, a shot from the rifle carried by John, killed the young boy, the bullet entering his head from the front and emerging at the back of his head. John, who by the way, is a rather remarkable character for a boy of his age and opportunities, gave his evidence in a manner which many men would have found it difficult to assume. He apparently had learned thoroughly what he wanted to say, and told the story of the shooting in a graphic way, omitting no details, and using splendid English. He was entirely composed, in marked contrast to his younger brother, who also gave evidence, and his step-father, who was a spectator, and who was visibly nervous.

The witness told of sending the boy back, and of turning around as he stood in the snow, and the trigger of the rifle catching in his trousers leg, as he supposes, set off the gun, the bullet striking his young half brother as already described.

The stories of the two boys fitted in fairly well together, but Mr. Cochrane's version changed things considerably. He said that if the gun were fired off as the boys said it was, the bullet instead of striking James Duval would have gone off in an opposite direction, and this part of the evidence was the determining factor in leading to the adjournment, the purpose of which was to allow the members of the jury to visit the spot and see for themselves whether or not the accident could have happened in the identical way that John Sisson says it did.

No one connected with the Crown suggested that John Sisson deliberately shot his half brother, but there are certain phases of the case suggested by some of the facts, which seem to indicate that the circumstances are not just what they would seem at first sight.

THE EVIDENCE.

Herman Sisson was the first witness, and after being sworn said he was a son of Mrs. Duval, the wife of William Duval, who had one child before witness' mother married him. He remembered the day on which the shooting occurred, and reviewed the circumstances as recounted above. He had never known of any quarrel between the two boys.

John James Sisson was the next witness and told how he and his brother Herman, started out on a porcupine hunt, and when they started out James Duval followed them. He told him to go back, and he started to do as he had told him. Witness stood with his body facing deceased, and the rifle also pointing towards him. As he turned to go on the rifle trigger caught, and the ball was discharged, entering James' head and killing him. Herman called to him that James was dead and he then ran to him to pick him up.

Witness had thought that the rifle was at half cock. His step-father and uncle had told him always to carry it that way, but he now thought that it must have been full cocked. He did not know what caused the gun to discharge. His mother did not hear the shot and did not know what had happened until his brother told her.

Mr. Cochrane in his evidence told how he had gone over the ground with John Sisson on Wednesday, and he had been shown the respective positions of the two boys when the shooting occurred.

John was standing at least four feet below where James Duval was and if the former had stood where he said he was with the gun in the position he mentioned, the ball would not have killed young Duval in the manner stated.

At this point the inquest was adjourned to meet next Wednesday

GREAT ANDERSON RALLY AT ZION.

Addressed by Hon. J.R. Stratton and Mr. R.R. Hall M.P.

Enthusiastic Meeting of Mr. Anderson's Supporters Last Night.

A large and enthusiastic meeting in the interests of Mr. Anderson, the Liberal candidate was held at Zion, Otonabee last night, and he should be well pleased with the hearty reception recorded.

The attendance was not only large but enthusiastic. Mr. Dickson, occupied the chair and spoke briefly in reference to Mr. Anderson, eulogizing him for the excellent services he had rendered the township as Reeve for many years and the county as Warden. He was sure that he would make an equally good representative and he felt sure Otonabee would do its full share in placing him at the head of the poll on Jan. 25th.

Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., the next speaker, dealt with several phases of the splendid administration given by the Liberal Government for a quarter of a century. So good and satisfactory had been this administration that the Opposition did not venture to offer any criticism of it. Either as regards the past of the present. In default of grounds for criticism the Opposition had resorted at various times to various "cries" to distract attention from a Government's record which they could not criticise and one that appealed to the people of the province. He felt sure if the people decided the question of the future administration of the affairs of the province upon the merits of that given by the Ross Government, the latter would be returned by a larger majority, and Mr. Anderson would be the representative of East Peterborough.

The next speaker was Hon. Mr. Stratton, who entered fully into the public questions relating to the administrative and legislative record of the Government. He dealt with the splendid administration the finances of the province had received at the hands of the Liberal Government, and with the satisfactory and efficient administration of all the various departments of the Government. He referred to the advanced legislation designed to meet the wants of every interest of Ontario. He pointed out how exceedingly effective and comprehensive had been the administrative and legislative record of the Government, and to the extent that little, except some matters of detail which were a part of the Liberal party's platform, was lacking. The Opposition did not seriously attempt to find fault, from the simple fact, that with trifling exceptions, no fault was to be found. Mr. Stratton inquired what improvement the Opposition would suggest? As a matter of fact, they could suggest none. Then, what was the Opposition clamouring for? What legislation has the Government passed that was not for the benefit of the province? What legislation had been neglected? What interest of the people had not received attention? What was wrong with the legislative and administrative record of the Government? Liberals and Conservatives alike, admitted that the record in both respects was a good one. What then did the Opposition propose? They were not prepared with a better policy, nor, in fact, with anything that could be dignified with the name of a policy. When the Opposition presented a policy better than that which the Liberal Government had applied and was ready to apply, to the up-building and development of the country, their claims for office — which seemed to be all they wanted — would be entitled to consideration.

The addresses were enthusiastically received, and the meeting was a very satisfactory and very encouraging one to Mr. Anderson, who finds as the campaign advances that the prospects improve for his being returned by a largely increased majority.

CARD TO ELECTORS.

To the electors of the town of Peterborough,—

Ladies and Gentlemen: — The Trades and Labour Council wish, through this medium, to thank the electors of the town generally, for the splendid support accorded the three aldermanic candidates representing this Council in the last municipal elections. We feel that the splendid record made by them in this election is sufficient proof of the wisdom displayed in placing them in the field, and we may assure their supporters that during the year they will use their efforts to advance such legislation as will benefit all sections of the town, and fill their duties so faithfully that when they come for re-election they will be returned by even larger votes than those which secured their election.

George Sloan,
President Trades and Labour Council.

WHAT CAUSED HIS DEATH

Coroner's Inquiry Into Christian Science Treatment.

Young man Dies From Typhoid Fever —Former Resident of Peterboro'.

The remains of the late Wallis H. Goodfellow, whose death occurred in Toronto on Wednesday, will be brought to Peterborough for interment, which will take place to-morrow, as the deceased was formerly a resident of Peterborough. Regarding the particulars of his death, the Mail and Empire says:

"Coroner Cotton will open an inquest at No. 3 police station, this afternoon to determine the cause of, and fix the responsibility for, the death of Wallis Goodfellow, a young man who lived at 61 1-2 Vanauley street, and who died while under treatment by Christian Scientists. The young man who was married only a month ago, was employed as a clerk in the G.T.R. freight offices, and took sick shortly before Christmas. His parents, being Christian Scientists, removed their son to their house, No. 61. The other clerks in the G.T.R. freight offices related the facts of the case to Dr. Riordan, and he called on Goodfellow on Dec. 24th. The doctor found that the young man was suffering from congestion of the lungs and typhoid fever. Dr. Riordan stopped the hemorrhage of the lungs, and advised that Goodfellow be removed to some hospital as he was in a very low condition. Dr. Riordan called again the next day and found that none of his instructions had been followed. No medicine had been purchased and the patient was getting worse. On Dec. 27th, Dr. Riordan again visited the house, and was met at the door by Goodfellow's parents, who stated that they would not allow the doctor to see their son. He insisted however, and found the young man down stairs, dressed in his every day clothes, sitting on a sofa, with a temperature of 103 and a pulse of 130. His parents said he was doing nicely and did not need a doctor. Dr. Riordan then stated that the young man would certainly die if he was not given medical attention. He then wrote to the Crown Attorney, giving the facts of the case and advising that some action be taken. He then saw Mrs. Goodfellow, and related the circumstances of the case to her, and told her that her husband was going to die. The patient's parents then enquired if they could get another doctor, and Dr. Riordan advised them to call Dr. Cotton, saying that he was a coroner and would soon be needed. Dr. Riordan heard no more of the case till yesterday, when Mrs. Goodfellow came to him and told him that her husband had died yesterday morning. Chief Coroner Johnson was notified, and the issuing of a warrant for the inquest followed.

When seen last evening Mrs. Goodfellow was almost overcome with grief. She stated that when her husband took sick she wanted to keep him in his own house, but his parents insisted upon removing him to their house and having him treated by Christian Scientists. Mrs. Goodfellow did not know the names of those who had treated her husband. She was, however, of the opinion that a thorough investigation should be made, and had asked that the inquest be held.

Neither of the young man's parents would talk concerning the death of their son."

THE FRIEND OF LABOR

Is He Who Brings to the Worker the Opportunity to Work.

Sometimes there is a surplus of labor in one town and a deficiency in others. What would greatly relieve the difficulty and greatly contribute to the easy running of the labor market would be the establishment of some central labor bureau, where statistics can be kept of the number of workingmen in any town and the number for whom there is employment, so that when, say, ten men are needed in any particular trade employers may write to the central bureau and learn where they may get them. Such a bureau would help to facilitate the steady employment of men, would improve the relations between capital and labor, and such a bureau, Mr. Ross said, he would be glad to see established under the control of the workingmen themselves. (Applause.) The Government did not want to interfere between capital and labor in any form as a Government, but might contribute a small sum towards the maintenance of such a bureau and let the workingmen manage it for themselves.

Increased Products of the Farm.

"My hon. friend Mr. Dryden, the second in succession in the Department of Agriculture, has grappled with the great problem of finding out the value of soil and atmosphere in regard to their effect on the products of the farm. What do our opponents say in regard to his success now? Commendations on every hand from those who once voted against him. Is it a small thing—I am dealing tonight with stern realities—is it a small thing that a Government in this Province can so direct the energies of the farmer as to increase threefold, fivefold, yes, twentyfold in some cases, the products of the farm; to advance among the farmers a great desire to perfect this, one of the noblest of Canadian callings; to brighten their own homes, and to bring to the markets of the world of their products that which will stand the severest test, until to-day in England we stand second in the matter of cheese and third in the matter of butter, while at St. Louis our horses, cattle and sheep carried off high honors? (Applause.) It is only the other day, too, that I read that our fruit growers had carried off one of the first prizes at the Horticultural Exhibition at London, England. Everywhere there is evidence that this work is not superficial; everywhere there is evidence in the improvements of the farms, in the larger bank accounts, in competition with other people, that the work of the Department of Agriculture is honestly and efficiently done, and that it has brought to this country extraordinary rewards."—Premier Ross in Toronto.

"GLENCOE AND ROSS"

Premier's Old Constituency Royally Endorses Him.

ELECTRIFYING NOMINATION

Liberal Convention At Mount Brydges a Gathering Which Strengthens Faith in Humanity — Demonstration Which Will Be Felt Indirectly All Over the Province—Reply to Gamey Charges—Mr. Ross' Speech.

Mount Brydges, Jan. 5.—"Glencoe and Ross forever" was the slogan shouted at the West Middlesex Liberal Convention yesterday and taken up by the entire delegation. The campaign for the return of Hon. Geo. W. Ross was given an impetus that no wave of misrepresentation and abuse can impede. For the eleventh time the great Liberal leader was unanimously nominated by the friends of his youth, who have stood by him for a generation, and who yesterday manifested an even greater enthusiasm and devotion than ever before. Thirty-two years as the "war horse for his riding only confirms him in his leadership over all other horses pitted against him, either in the county or in the Province. The convention yesterday was one of those gatherings which strengthen faith in humanity, where a son of the soil returns to the friends of his youth, is taken at his true worth without jealousy, and is given a demonstration which will be felt indirectly throughout the Province. Doubtless Mr. Ross, if he were asked, would say that a triumph such as this was worth more than money or the highest political honors which have fallen to him. The feeling of the meeting was one of spontaneous electrifying enthusiasm, which found vent in roars of cheers and exclamations.

Reply to Gamey Charges.

If a course other than ordinary were sought to explain the unbounded spirit of the workers it was the appearance of R. R. Gamey at Glencoe Tuesday, where a speech of abuse against the Premier in his own riding was followed at the close by a assault of cheers for Mr. Ross himself. There were in yesterday's gathering men who had attended all of Mr. Ross' conventions from 1872 to the present, and the lines of the stalwart Scotch and English Liberals who filled the Caradoc township hall were of the same sterling stock from which their distinguished representative himself came. Their fighting blood was up, and nothing can stay their efforts now until election day. One of the old-timers was Mr. J. W. Kaiser of Delaware township. He recalled yesterday the day of Mr. Ross' first nomination when he, a tall young man of 31, approached Mr. Kaiser modestly, but with the same spirit he adopts to this day, and said: "Well, do you think we can make it hot for the Tories around here?" Mr. Ross' speech yesterday was brief, but full of strong fighting quality, and when the meeting closed the platform was overrun with people, and it was then half an hour before he could get away to spend the night with his son, Mr. Duncan C. Ross, at Strathroy.

The Premier's Nomination.

The nomination was made yesterday afternoon at a meeting presided over by Mr. A. P. McDougall, the new President of the riding association. The motion was made by Mr. Malcolm McGugan, ex-M.P., who looked to the Premier's election by as large a majority as he ever had. (Voices—Larger, and you can't satisfy a Grit.)

Mr. J. M. Kaiser, in seconding the motion, spoke as an advanced temperance man, and added: "When I think of Whitney breaking the law himself and taking his Scotch whiskey after hours—(laughter)—how, as a temperance man, can I support a man that would support the Opposition leader?"

The question, "Are there any further nominations?" was answered with cries of "None, none," and the nomination was unanimously tendered to Premier Ross, amid a storm of cheers. There were renewed cheers as he rose to speak.

THE MEETING OF PARLIAMENT.

The Speaker Designate Making Arrangements For the Session.

Ottawa, Jan. 5.—The new Speaker, Mr. R. F. Sutherland, is in town and has already begun to make his arrangements for the session. The choice of Deputy Speaker lies between Mr. Charles Marcil and Mr. Geoffrion. Odds are believed to be in favor of the former. Hon. Raoul Dandurand and Hon. J. P. B. Casgrain are both in the running for the Senate Speakership. The former seems to have the most friends.

The Address in the Senate.

As already announced, Senator David will move the address in reply to the speech from the Throne in the Senate. It was expected at first that the seconder would come from the West, but Hon. R. W. Scott, leader in the Senate, has asked Senator Black of Amherst, N.S., to second the address. Now that Sir Richard Cartwright is in the Upper House the debates will be even more interesting than formerly.

What Mr. Lewis Says.

Goderich, Jan. 5.—Yesterday E. N. Lewis, Conservative M.P.-elect for West Huron, made this statement: "You may say that there is nothing in it. They have got the wrong man. They have been trying to rake up something of the kind for a long time." This is in relation to the report that he is disqualified.

Mr. Lewis says he is Gunder's bond only as a witness to his signature, but A. M. Polley says Lewis and are the sureties. The matter seems in doubt and there is no means of verification.

THIRTY-TWO YEARS IN THE SADDLE

At the Head of the Procession all the Time, and Still Leading.

32 YEARS IN THE SADDLE.

At the Head of the Procession All the Time and Still Leading.

One of the Toronto papers, Mr. Ross went on, printed regularly a cartoon of a war horse that had been 32 years in the saddle. Well, suppose he has. He is as good a war horse now as when the saddle was first put on him. (Laughter.) It is a horse that has never lost a Derby race yet. It has always been a winner. (Applause and laughter.) Now and again in a side steeplechase or hurdle race or something of that kind it may sometimes have had a tumble, but in the great races of the season the war horse has always won, and it is going to win this time. (Loud applause and cries of "You bet.") But the other horse has been in the saddle 32 years also. The Opposition horse has been on the race course for 32 years and has never won a race yet. (Laughter.) I do not know that he is likely to for some time. He has had many jockeys. (Renewed laughter.) There was Sir Matthew Crooks Cameron for two years and he lost. Sir William Ralph Meredith, an estimable man, ran him for twenty years and gave up the job to take one on the Bench, which he adorns. Then Mr. Marter ran him for a year and a half. There was too much prohibition in that horse, or something—(laughter—and he was retired. He did not retire; he was retired, and for the last seven years my esteemed friend Mr. Whitney has been running that horse without any better success. He came within two or three points of winning last time, but it was so near and yet so far—(applause and laughter)—and he has now called to his assistance in the grooming of that horse a list of men such as Mr. Gamey. (Cries of "Oh," and groans.) In fact, he has a lot of grooms, and the other day he called a conference to see if there was any chance for this 32-year-old animal to win, and they came to the conclusion that the horse might win. They have always been saying that. They have lost money on that every time. (Long continued laughter and applause.)—Premier Ross at Napanee.

Dragging Children.

"I had in my charge at one time," said a prominent New York doctor, "a child who had almost lost control of the muscles of one of the legs, a difficulty brought on, as I firmly believe, by the habit the other children had of taking the little thing out with them and hurrying it along in order to keep up with the other youngsters with whom they were playing. They had strict orders not to leave the baby or to let go of its hands, and as a consequence it was dragged and pulled along in the most frightful fashion. I believe that a great many cases of rickets are brought on by this habit of pulling children by the arms. It necessarily is a strain on the spine and must be productive of unpleasant if not dangerous results."

Do Not Suppress a Cough.

When you have a cough do not try to suppress it, but remove the cause. The cough is only a symptom of some disease, and the disease is what you should cure, then the cough will stop of itself. The most common cause of coughing is a cold. Anodynes will promptly suppress the cough, and preparations containing chloroform, opium, etc., are used for that purpose, but they do not cure the cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy on the other hand does not suppress the cough, but relieves it by removing from the throat and lungs the mucus which obstructed the breathing and allaying the irritation and tickling in the throat. It also opens the secretions and effectually and permanently cures the cold as well as the cough. For sale by all druggists.

Valorous, But Discreet.

Belgrade, Dec. 27.—The newspaper Oppositia came out yesterday with an editorial vigorously demanding that the regicides of King Alexander and Queen Draga be executed, as were the murderers of Prince Michael in 1868. The paper was promptly confiscated. Its editor writes articles from the safe vantage point of Zemlin, Hungary.

"There is no remedy in my opinion that can act more promptly than Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine. It cured my son of croup absolutely in one night. We gave him a dose when he was black in the Lemon Marmalade.

Lemon marmalade is liked as a change from the customary list of preserves, and a good way to prepare it is as follows: Slice twelve good lemons and remove the pips, lay the sliced fruit for twelve hours, or till the next morning, in six to seven quarts of water, and boil this all gently together for two hours, and again, let it stand till next day. Then weigh it, add an equal weight of sugar for each pound of pulp and boil all together till clear and beginning to set, when it should be potted and tied down at once while hot.

CANTERBURY CATHEDRAL.

Only One English King, Henry IV. Has Been Entombed There.

The ancient cathedral at Canterbury shelters the remains of only one English king, Henry IV. That this particular monarch should have been entombed there is the more remarkable since he breathed his last in the Jerusalem chamber of Westminster abbey, and it might naturally have been supposed in the circumstances that he would have been laid to rest in the abbey, where so many other of England's kings sleep their last sleep. It seems, however, that Henry before his death gave orders that he was to be buried in the cathedral at Canterbury opposite the tomb of his uncle, Edward, the Black Prince.

For hundreds of years a story was current that on the way down the river a hurricane arose and that the people on board the vessel, convinced that the storm was caused by the fact that a king's body was on board, cast the corpse into the water in the dead of night and, filling the coffin with rubbish, brought it with all pomp and circumstance to the cathedral. Some years ago the dean and chapter resolved to get at the truth of the story.

So they opened the royal tomb and the king's lead coffin. For one brief moment dean and chapter gazed upon the kingly lineaments of that monarch whom Shakespeare describes as "sky aspiring Bolingbroke." Only for a moment, however, as the body crumbled to dust almost at once. But Canterbury now knows beyond all doubt that an English king rests within its walls.

DID HIS BEST.

He Brought the Only Cant Hook That He Could Find.

If the report of the Fulton Gazette is true a Missouri farmer, accompanied by several of his hired men, went into the woods one morning in the fall of the year to cut down some trees. When about to begin work it was discovered that the cant hook had been left behind. Turning to one of the men, an Irishman not very long over, the farmer instructed him to drive back to the barn for the missing tool. The Irishman did not know what a cant hook looked like, but was averse to exposing his ignorance, so drove off on his errand, trusting to find some one at the farm who would enlighten him.

At the barn, however, there was no one to help him out of his dilemma. Casting his eyes about the place for the thing that would be most likely to bear the name of "cant hook," he saw a mulley cow with never a sign of a horn upon its head and concluded it was what he had been sent for.

Procuring a rope he fastened the cow to the rear end of his vehicle and exultingly drove back to the woods.

"What the Sam Hill have you got there?" shouted the farmer on seeing his messenger and the cow. "I sent you for the cant hook to use in moving the logs. What have you brought that cow for?"

"Be jabers, boss, divil another thing could I see around the barn that can't hook but this."

Dog's Memory of a Bee Sting.

"Something must have stung your dog," said a resident of this city to a suburbanite, whom he was visiting a few days ago, as he noticed the antics of a large collie which, after snapping frantically at a flying insect, lowered his head and carefully licked his right forepaw.

"No," replied the owner of the dog, "that is only a little delusion of his. When he was a puppy a bee stung him on that foot you see him attending to, and ever since he has cherished a standing grudge against flying insects Apparently the sight of one not only arouses his anger, but recalls most vividly his first experience with one, for each time after running after one, whether he catches it or not, he stops and tenderly licks the place where he was stung two years ago. As far as I know he has never been stung since then."

Uneasy money in the pocket of the respectable, anxious owner immediately becomes easy money when he meets the holdup man.

SERVICEABLE SCREEN.

Cover a Hinged Frame With Burlap and Daintily Decorate It.

One of the prettiest ways of getting up a screen is to have a carpenter make a plain, strong wooden frame, with its three "leaves" separate, and then to cover it yourself with burlap in colors that fit in with the general color scheme of the room. The burlap should be tacked on neatly and smoothly, without a wrinkle, then the leaves joined by little brass hinges and the whole screen decorated. One girl gave herself a constant reminder of the woods in autumn by painting autumn leaves in rich glowing colors on her dull green screen. Another chose blue and painted in outline work a row of little Dutch figures clear across the top.—Philadelphia North American.

The Ball That Can't Tangle.

Those who knit and crochet know the trouble caused by the ball of yarn or floss falling and rolling about the floor. This trouble is easily obviated if the yarn is wound so that it can be used from the inside of the ball instead of in the ordinary way. Unrolling from the outside is the cause of the ball's rolling propensities. First wind the wool or silk six or eight times over the outstretched fingers of the left hand, giving as great a length as possible to the windings and keeping in mind the fact that these windings are to be pulled from the center when the ball is finished. With these first windings always protruding at the top and bottom, proceed as usual, winding very loosely. When the skein is wound the outside end is tucked in securely, and the first is pulled out. After once using and experiencing the satisfaction of a nonrolling ball the knitter will never go back to the old method of working from the outside.

The Lovable Girl.

To be placed in the corner of a young girl's mirror and read while she is making her toilet:

She cultivates reserve.
She thinks, then acts.
She speaks ill of no one.
She is loyal to her friends.
She lives in her mother's faith.
She cares for her body as God's temple.
She writes nothing she may regret.
She knows there is nothing more undignified than anger.

Why Do Women Worry

AND THEREBY EXHAUST THE NERVOUS SYSTEM AND RUIN HEALTH?

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

The worry habit is an unmitigated evil.

Worry is by far the most frequent cause of nervous disease.

Because of the multitude of household and family cares, and because of the nature of their employment, women are especially liable to give way to worry and anxiety.

The result is wasted nerve force, weakness and disease.

It may be nervous headaches, sleeplessness, irritability, indigestion, discouragement and melancholy, or weakness and irregularities peculiarly feminine.

The only way to restore health and strength is by increasing the nerve force in the body, and this is best accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food.

Make a test of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food by noting your increase in weight from week to week while using it.

Notice the improvement in your appetite, and how much better you rest and sleep.

The fact that an army of women who have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is the best proof of what it will do in the way of steadying and strengthening the nerves, rounding out the form and replacing weakness and disease with new strength and spirits.

Mrs. M. A. Sharp, 846 Dublin street, Peterborough, Ont., states: "For some years I was troubled with indigestion, which developed into nervous dyspepsia, and besides suffering from nervousness, strange dizzy spells would come over me. Hearing of the good results obtained from Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I decided to try it. After a pretty thorough test of this medicine, I can say that I never used anything that did me as much good. It seemed to be the very treatment that I needed, and as a result of the use I am quite restored to health."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food 50 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

The Substitute

By WILL N. HARBEN,

Copyright, 1903, by HARPER & BROS.

"'You are off thar,' said I. 'I know better'n that. He's one man that don't care fer women.'

"'Tell that to the marines,' Mrs. Dugan sneered. Then she reeled off a tale she said Bob Hanks' wife told 'er about a bet Jim Kenner an' a whole passle o' fellers had made, that they was goin' to kiss a certain gal whether or no. She said the gal was kinder saft, anyway, fer they all got a whack at her, but that when Jim Kenner got through with 'er she had the backache an' said he was the wust she'd ever seed. I was a-watchin' Hortense out o' the corner o' my eye. She got fust white an' then red, but she kept 'er ears open. I don't know all Mrs. Dugan didn't say, but the best thing was when she said no ordinary woman could make any impression on a man o' that stamp. I seed Hortense sorter bite 'er lip an' straighten up like she was makin' a resolution. And after Mrs. Dugan had gone home she set around like she was out o' j'int all at once. You know a woman will kinder count on a man's regard, an' feed on it, an' jest drift without lookin' ahead. Ef she's shore o' his admiration she'd a heap o' times ruther have 'im at arm's length than to be cookin' an' scrabbin' fer 'im ur his brats. That's whar Hortense was at. She's knowed a few married men an' had noticed how plumb crasy they was about the'r wives after the honeymoon was over. But nothin' ain't smooth in this world, an' why should married life be an exception? An' then Hortense hates to be called a old maid. Well, to cut my tale off, Hortense jest come out flat that evenin' an' said, 'When you see Mr. Kenner you may tell 'im he kin come.' An' while you was out home last Thursday night they had the parlor to the'rselves. Me an' Mr. Hillyer set on the front veranda. Jim Kenner hain't no slouch. He kept 'er laughin' all evenin' at his tales, an' when she come out after he'd gone she said he was the most agreeable man she'd ever met. Not a word's been said about marryin' betwixt 'em, but I'll talk to 'er about 'er things inside of a week, now see of I don't. Seems like lots o' Darley folks is under the weather here lately. That's Lawyer Trabue. They say he's awfully sick. George Buckley, I may look light hearted, but I've got a sight to trouble me. I worry about Mr. Hillyer mighty nigh constant."

"I suppose you do," answered Buckley, meeting her glance sympathetically.

"I worry about him beca'se he hain't open with me," she went on. "You know thar's one matter that we never mention betwixt us, an' I jest have to guess at how he feels in his different moods. Now, I'm bothered over the way he's actin' about Trabue's sickness. Why should he git excited over that? But he is. When we fust heard it he didn't seem to pay no more attention to it than if the report had been about any other citizen, but all at once, while he was readin' the Advocate at the lamp, he put the paper down quick an' got up an' went outside. I went to the door an' heard 'im axin' Jake how Trabue was, an' when Jake told 'im he wasn't no better he come back in the house pale an' nervous, an' last night he hardly slept at all. Do you know of any important dealings he's had with Trabue, George?"

"No, I do not, Mrs. Hillyer," George replied. "I can't understand it."

"I sorter thought at fust that it was beca'se him an' Trabue is about the same age, an' it sorter made 'im reflect on the end we all have to come to. You know, George, Mr. Hillyer's great trouble has made 'im more afeard to die than most men—men o' that sort seem to dread the end, like they think some special punishment is in store fer 'em. As fer as I'm concerned, I don't believe Mr. Hillyer 'll be punished at all. He's suffered ten times too much already."

Later that evening Hillyer took George into his confidence as they were smoking on the lawn together.

"George, I'm in a sight o' trouble," he said. "And it's the old thing. You remember I told you Trabue was payin' Mrs. Hambright a pension through me?"

"Yes, I remember that," George said.

"Well, Trabue is mighty low, and if he was to die, George, an explanation would have to be made. She'd have to be told that her allowance wasn't coming from the government, an' maybe she'd upbraid me an' impoverish 'erself to pay all of it back. Oh, George, I'm awfully miserable! I went to talk to Trabue in private, but the doctor won't let a soul see 'im. George," he said, under his breath, "if Mrs. Hambright was to throw up my crime to me at this late day—bowed as she is with age and as nigh as she is to God—I'd never git over it, I tell you—never!" And throwing his half smoked cigar away, Hillyer strode off in the darkness.

A little later, as George stood near the gate, Jim Kenner came up dressed in his best suit, a flower in his buttonhole. "I reckon you think I'm a purty thing goin' to see gals at my time o' life," he said, with a sheepish laugh as he opened the gate.

"I was wondering if I ought not to tell Hortense something about your dark past," George laughed.

"I wish you would blacken my record a little," returned Kenner. "The truth is, Mrs. Hillyer says Hortense doesn't exactly take to the goody goody preachy sort o' chap, an' to hear me spout you'd think I was a slight wuss'n I really am. Oh, I've been a few gaits in my time, but I hain't bad! It's a God's fact, though, that a heap o' woman ud rather have doubts about a man 'an to know positive that he's a angel in pants. Hortense is that away, an' what I'm workin' on her right now might be called the 'hold-in' plan."

"Not a word's been said about marryin' betwixt 'em."

"The 'hold-in' plan?" George echoed wonderingly.

"Yes, the 'hold-in'," answered Kenner. "You see, ef I was to tell her right out that my past record was as black as a stack of black cats she'd not believe it, but when she comes right at me an' accuses me o' all manner o' devilment I simply hold in or change the subject. A man cayn't never make a woman believe he's bad by tellin' her he is, any more'n he kin make 'er believe he's good by the same process. The 'hold-in' racket fills the bill exactly. A woman is sech a mystery herself that she likes what she don't understand. Thar, I see Hortense on the veranda! George, she's a daisy, ef I do say it. She's jest the woman I've always wanted. I joke a lots, but that's the truth, my boy."

CHAPTER XXVI.

It was the first of May, and the annual reunion of the Confederate veterans was being held in Atlanta. It was the gala week of the year. Every town and city in the south sent its official representatives and its maids of honor. The hotels were crowded and the streets thronged with an incongruous multitude wearing badges of ribbon. Southern generals and their wives and daughters were holding gay receptions. Everybody was welcome; hands were extended to people from the north as well as from the south. Shouts filled the air when the carriage of an ex-Confederate officer passed through the streets. The bands played "Dixie." Men, scarred and maimed, stood on the street corners and in the bars and hotels and told war stories and sang the praises of Robert E. Lee and Stonewall Jackson. All was mirth and good feeling. From the public buildings, the clubs, hotels and carriages floated the American flag. It hung everywhere, but it was never applauded and yet never hissed. It was beautiful to look upon and stood for peace, patriotism and prosperity. The southerners would have admitted this, and yet there was another beauty dearer to their weary memory—a beauty for which they had fought grimly and lost.

Mrs. Cranston, Lydia and Kitty Cosby were visiting the Dunleighs, a Virginia family who lived in one of the best houses in Peachtree street. George Buckley was in the city, but he had gone only to attend to the work of inspecting the books of a broker who handled considerable grain and cotton for the Darley house.

The broker, Mr. Harry Stone, was a young man of high social standing in Atlanta, and he had formed a strong friendship for George and extended the hospitality of the best club in the place to him and offered to introduce him to his friends, but George refrained from accepting. He was too fine a man to feel at ease in general society so early after his father's disgrace, and Stone understood this and did not press those things upon him.

"I see you've got some stunning girls up your way," Stone remarked as George sat at a desk in the corner of the room "checking up" the books. "It's reported down here that our governor runs up that way every chance he gets."

"Yes, they are all right," Buckley answered briefly.

"She's a Miss Cranston, I understand," ran on Stone. "I've heard my grandmother speak about the family in Virginia. She's visiting the Dunleighs, and I guess I'll meet her while she's here. You know her, of course?"

"Yes, we are friends," George said simply.

"I've never seen her," said the broker, "but, judging from her picture, she must be good looking. However, one can't tell about that. The pictures in the newspapers are always bad."

"In the newspapers?" said George, in surprise.

"Why, yes; it's in both the papers today, along with an account of the reception the governor is giving to her and her party at the mansion tonight. It's to be awfully swell. I'm not going. In fact, he and I don't get on. The truth is I belong to a little club of young Americans that tried to snow him under in the last election, but we got left. He had too big a pull with the ring. He used to be civil to me, but he snarls like a possum when we meet now. He can't forget an injury. Did you ever see him?"

"Oh, yes," said George. "He's been up our way often."

"Oh, of course; I'd forgotten. They say he's not been having exactly smooth sailing on at Darley either, but it looks a little like he's making more headway now."

"How is that?" asked Buckley, his blood running cold, his heart sinking.

"Why, the reception, you know. That looks a little like she's giving in, don't you think? But I may be dead wrong. She may want to make that friend of hers, that Miss Cosby, have a good time, and the general run of girls would consider it sheer madness to lose a chance like that. Why, it's to be the chief event of the reunion. Well, he's welcome to his glory; it won't last long; he will never get in again."

"You think not?" said George tensely.

"No; he'll never be able to pay the expense of another campaign. He ruined what little law practice he had when he went into politics, and now he's a bankrupt."

"A bankrupt?" George exclaimed. "Why, I thought he had unlimited means."

"In a pig's valise," laughed Stone. "I am intimate with the cashier of a certain bank in this town and I had it straight that Telfare's got up the last bit of collateral he can raise for money he can't repay. Why, he had to beg the bank for a little raise to give this reception. Do you know, I suspected he was trying to marry for money. May I ask if this Miss Cranston is an heiress?"

"She's an only child," said Buckley, reluctant to continue the conversation further, "and her father is fairly well off."

"Perhaps," said Stone, "he's really daft about her."

"That must be it," George replied, and he closed the conversation by going to work.

By nightfall his task was finished, and he could have caught a train for Darley, but he felt a strange, half morbid disinclination to leave. He repaired to his hotel, changed his clothing and went down to the crowded dining room, but the very gayety on every hand irritated him. He had no appetite for what was before him. All around him, at private tables, were gay parties of young people in evening dress. The music of a fine orchestra came in from the rotunda. The air was filled with the perfume of flowers. Never had the burden of his birth felt so heavy, never had he so keenly longed for the unattainable. He was in the lowest dregs of despair; he had begun to pity himself. Everybody else was having a holiday; no holiday could come to him while his own father was bearing the scourge of the law, while the only things he craved were eluding his grasp.

A little warmth came to his cold heart over the thought that Lydia Cranston cared for him, but it was swept away by the icy fear that, despite her regard for him, she was even then striving philosophically to put him out of her life. That striving had begun with the acceptance of the reception in her honor. The next step would be the formal announcement of her engagement to the governor, and then she would begin to look upon Telfare as her future husband. George stifled a groan and rose and left the room. The thought was like the pangs of death. He went out into the streets and walked on and on, going he cared not whither, trying to kill the despair within him. Dark thoughts pursued him, but he threw them aside. He was a soldier fighting black adversity, and he would fight—fight to the end. He had been walking half an hour when he came to the spacious grounds of the Dunleigh home. A carriage stood at the door. It was waiting for her—her! In a short while she would emerge dressed for the reception. Could he not wait there on the street and see her? No, for it was a closed carriage, and she would be shut off from his view. But could he not, without being seen, get nearer the door through which she would have to pass? The grounds were unlighted, and there were many clusters and hedges of shrubbery. The gate of the drive was open. He stole in and found a rustic seat behind a hedge of rosebushes, where he could remain unseen. He had not long to wait. Mrs. Dunleigh and Mrs. Cranston came out and then Miss Cosby and Lydia. The two girls paused for a moment under the great swinging lamp that hung from the ceiling of the veranda. Buckley held his breath as he looked upon her. He had never seen her in complete evening dress before, and her rare beauty was a revelation to him. She seemed to be at once the girl he knew and adored and yet another who was quite a stranger to him.

The coachman was holding the carriage door open for her, and she swept down the steps and the door closed upon her. The hoofs of the mettlesome horses ground into the pebbled drive as they whirled her away. Gone from his sight into that of his despised rival! Buckley sank back on to the bench and clasped his cold hands. He remained there an hour and then slowly retraced his steps down the beautiful street. Soon the illumination at the executive mansion rose before him. The hum of many voices fell on his ear, blended with martial music. The trees on the lawn were hung with Chinese lanterns; from a balcony overhead attendants were setting off costly fireworks. On the very sky Telfare seemed to be recording his triumph over his conquered foe. George walked on past the mansion into the reveling mass of humanity that swarmed about the principal hotels.

CHAPTER XXVII.

Buckley hardly knew where he went, but soon found himself again near the executive mansion. The merriment was at its height. Afraid of meeting some one who would recognize him, he walked on rapidly. He wanted to be in motion. It was the only thing that seemed to deaden the agony in his breast. One moment he would clinch his hands and stifle a groan of pain as he thought of Lydia's social triumph and her nearness to the man he despised and yet dreaded, and he would pause and look up at the sky as if trying to read there a reason for his misery. He was again passing the Dunleigh house and was about to retrace his steps to his hotel when he heard the sound of an approaching carriage. He believed it to be the Dunleighs' and darted into the grounds and back to his former hiding place. He was right.

The approaching vehicle turned in at the gate and was rapidly curving toward the veranda when George noticed that one of the rear wheels was coming off. His heart was in his mouth. He wanted to give the driver warning, but it was too late. The wheel was off. The carriage lurched to one side. There was a chorus of muffled screams from within, and, to make matters worse, the horses took fright and began to rear and plunge. With no thought as to the incongruity of his presence there at such a moment Buckley darted from his place of concealment and ran to the aid of the ladies, who were loudly calling for help and trying to break the heavy plate glass windows. Buckley followed the jolting carriage along the drive and finally succeeded in jerking the door open just as the coachman drew his horses to a stand in the light at the steps. George helped the ladies out.

"Why, it's Mr. Buckley!" exclaimed Mrs. Cranston, in grateful astonishment. It was a most awkward moment. Buckley could only bow, his hat in hand and pale to the lips. Miss Cosby gave him a knowing look as she extended her gloved hand.

"It was good of you," she said

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS

Owing to the special nature of our business, which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesman, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the watch or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

We are giving a special discount on all of our lovely New Goods.

DAIRYMEN IN SESSION.

Annual Meeting of Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association.

Mr. D. Derbyshire's Address to the Association—Great Strides in Dairy Industry.

Special to the Examiner

Brockville, Jan. 6th.—The annual meeting of the Eastern Ontario Dairyman's Association opened to-day at the Victoria Hall. Mr. D. Derbyshire, president of the association, presided and delivered his annual address as follows:—

Gentlemen,—I am very much gratified that the officers of this association, in their wisdom, saw fit to hold their 28th annual convention of the Eastern Ontario Dairymen's Association in Brockville, Canada's best town, and the original home of modern dairying. You will find our citizens public spirited, our public buildings, churches and manufacturing establishments and business houses better fitted to carry on their respective vocations than any other place in Eastern Ontario. I sincerely hope you will visit some of these places and verify what I say.

I wish, at the outset, to express my appreciation of the honour that has been conferred upon me by selecting me through a series of years as your president, and for the courtesy and kindness shown me by the officers and members of the association. I have been identified with this great national industry in all its various forms, from the production of the milk on the farm to the marketing of the product, and have noted its growth from a small beginning to its present mammoth proportions. In the early days of this association, when we were struggling and putting forth individual energy for its maintenance, and when we felt that the success of the dairy business in this country depended largely upon the life of this association, the Provincial Government stepped in and aided our efforts financially and otherwise, and have continued to do so more liberally from year to year as the work progressed. Dairy schools, travelling dairies, dairy bulletins, etc., were instituted and issued, and the dairymen began to see that their work was being recognized, and they themselves were imbued with a desire to make progress, and were thus ready to accept this aid. Your association saw the necessity of making the product of the various factories in this Province more uniform in quality, so we employed the services of competent men as instructors, and most prominent among those is our present chief instructor, Mr. G. G. Publow, to whose untiring energy the dairymen of all Canada owe much.

Your association recognized the necessity of keeping a closer supervision of the manufacture of the dairy products under our jurisdiction, so that greater uniformity of product might be established, advice and encouragement given, and the progress and prospect of the industry ascertained; and as it was physically impossible for Inspector Publow to visit all the factories in this Eastern District, others were from year to year appointed, until we had seven instructors in our employ, but even this number very soon proved inadequate, and the whole of Eastern Ontario was afterwards grouped into twenty-five different syndicates, and twenty-five competent men placed in charge thereof, all being under the supervision of Chief Instructor Publow, who will later on give you a detailed statement of the progress of their work. The good work of these men, as a whole, has been reflected in the improvement of the quality of the goods, as well as its uniformity.

The Hon. Mr. Dryden readily seeing that the small grant given was inadequate for the work undertaken, came to our relief and paid each of these instructors and also our chief instructor from this department in Toronto this year, besides enlarging and improving our dairy school at Kingston, which we appreciate very much, and present indications are that the work of instruction will require to be extended even more the coming year.

We are now convened for a practical purpose, the developing of our great dairy industry, to correct error and to diffuse the best dairy knowledge among our farmers and our manufacturers.

We have always through our association work been trying to diffuse right ideas in every possible way, and I feel proud to-day of the great good we have been able to accomplish.

We are also very much pleased with the assistance that the Department of Agriculture of our Dominion, under the direction of our able Minister, the Hon. Sydney Fisher, has given to the dairymen in furnishing refrigerator cars for the safe transportation of our goods to Montreal and for the cool compartments on our steamship lines, for the safe delivery of our dairy products to the British markets, and also for the establishment throughout this Dominion as well as in this town of the illustration stations for the educating of our dairymen in establishing better curing rooms of their own, and we trust this good work will be enlarged and improved.

Our make in 1904 has been about 3,700,000 boxes of cheese, worth about $30,000,000, which is about 100,000 boxes short of 1903, and about $7,000,000 short in value. Considerable of this shortage could have been avoided provided our dairymen had shown the same zeal as they did in 1903 in the production of milk, when prices were high. When prices are low we should use every possible means to increase our output, so that we might have about the same money.

Our butter business during this year shows a good deal of improvement. We exported about 550,000 packages, worth $7,500,000, an increase of nearly $2,000,000; and owing to the fine quality about double the quantity of butter was consumed at home over that exported.

Our bacon trade was somewhat short this year, having received only about $14,000,000 for the same, but the total exports of our cheese, butter and bacon amount to about $41,500,000, being about $6,500,000 short of last year.

With the general improvement in trade and with higher prices now assured, we should do very much better during 1905. We ask the hearty co-operation of every dairyman in Eastern Ontario to attain this very desirable end. Can we count on this?

With our past experience, with the full knowledge that the production of cheese, butter and bacon is the one industry that is exactly suited to our section, all our energies should be directed to improve the quality and increase the quantity of our goods, and all should understand that only by united effort first, by every dairyman producing only the cleanest and most wholesome milk, by the factories being up-to-date, with the most improved curing rooms, by the makers all being graduates of our dairy school and all concerned taking a deep interest in making the finest goods, attending to every little detail, having clean waggons with proper covers for deliveries, clean refrigerator or ventilated cars to convey the goods to Montreal, and steamships properly fitted with, livering the goods to the railway stacold air chambers conveying the same to our ultimate market, all this will assure us of higher prices and a firmer grip upon the British market than we ever before had.

Again I welcome you to Brockville, and I hope our deliberations will be of such a character as will enthuse every dairyman to do better work in 1905 than he has ever done before, which will assure prosperity to every dairyman and every industry in Eastern Ontario.

I have much pleasure in naming the following committees, which, I trust, will meet with your approval:

Business—Mayor Geash, R. G. Murphy, L. Patton, D. Derbyshire and L. L. Gallagher.

Nominations—J. R. Dargavel, Wm. Eager and James Whitten.

Legislation—Wm. Eager, M. K. Evertis J. R. Dargavel, R. G. Murphy and E. Kidd, M. P.

Resolutions — R. G. Murphy, H. Glendinning, T. B. Carlow, James Whitten and John McTavish.

FARRIERS AND KARNOTS WON

Two Splendid Games in the City League Last Night

Good, Fast, Clean Hockey was the Order—Standing of the Teams.

The quality of hockey served up to the City League patrons last evening at the Brock street rink, was much superior to that of the two previous weeks in every respect. It was faster, cleaner and better in every way, and the fairly large crowd present saw two really good contests, in both of which it was anybody's game until within a few minutes of the close. All four teams made a highly creditable showing, and the quality of hockey was much above the average.

FARRIERS, 5; T.A.S., 2.

In the first game the Farriers won from the T.A.S. by 5—2, after a very warm struggle. The winners were heavier and played good fast hockey. The losers showed up in fine form in the first half, and had the best of the argument at the beginning of the second period, but seamed to weaken towards the close somewhat, and the Farriers forged ahead. The checking was close, but the play was not rough, Referee Glover keeping the game clean by penalizing an attempt at breech of the rules. Both forward lines played nice combination and shot well.

The Farriers' team was strong at every point. Thornton played an exceptionally good game in the nets, and turned aside many hard shots. Squires and Blade made a stonewall defence, checking very accurately. The forwards were all fast skaters, played well together. The team's chances in the league certainly look good at this stage of the game, and their match with the Karnots should be a good one.

The T.A.S. had a couple of changes on their line-up. McFadden, in goal, was somewhat inexperienced, but he made some fine stops. Dorris and Foley were always in their places and checked effectively. McGrath, a new player, was tried at left wing, and made good, possessing good speed, and stick handling ability. The other forwards showed up well.

The teams lined up as follows:—

Farriers, 5.	T.A.S., 2.
Goal.
Thornton	McFadden
Point.
Squires	Doris
Cover point.
Blade	Foley
Rover.
Long	Callaghan
Centre.
Simpson	La Forge
Right Wing.
Smith	McGrath
Left wing.
Nicholls	Rose

Referee, R. M. Glover.

The Farriers took the lead at the start, Long notching the first two goals. McGrath then tallied for the T. A. S. by a beaut shot. The score at half time was 2—1. In this half Long (3), La Forge and Nicholls, were sent to the fence.

In the second half Smith scored by a nice side shot and a few minutes later McGrath passed to La'orge, who made the score 3—2. Nicholls made a nice run and took a long shot, which McFadden hit at and missed, the puck barely rolling into the nets. Nicholls repeated the trick a moment later, and by a pretty shot leaving the score 5—2.

KARNOTS 6, COLONIALS 3.

The second game was the most interesting that has as yet been played in the leagues, and until the last ten minutes it was anybody's game. The unexpected strength of the Colonials was a surprise to all and they looked like winners until within a few minutes of time, when they faded away and the winners got four points in a row. It was a good, fast and clean game and the style of hockey was such as the league desires to develop. There was good individual and team work on both sides and the game was most interesting from the spectators standpoint.

The Karnots though somewhat light are fast and well balanced, and are worthy of a guess in picking the winners of the league. The team did not seem to get into scoring line until the game was well advanced, but played good hockey throughout. As a whole the team was a little inaccurate in its shooting but will improve in this respect. Campbell, at cover point, was undoubtedly the star of the game and he played brilliant hockey throughout, checking and lifting well while his long corkscrew rushes were features. Dormer and Kingscote also did good work in their respective positions. Gilmen and Grose played fast hockey on the wings, while O'Dette at rover did useful work. Mulhern played splendidly at centre. He is a neat stickhander and good shot, scoring two of the goals in the second half.

The Colonials defence played a very strong game against the speedy forward line of their opponents, breaking up the rushes at will. Clancy made some fine stops in goal and frequently saved his citadel. Thompson and Overend were also scrupulous by their good checking. The forwards were fast and all played well, Foley and Rouille being very prominent. The team will give any seven in the league a hard struggle and are by no means out of the running as yet.

The teams were:

Karnots.	Colonials.
Goal.
Kingscote	Clancy
Point.
Dormer	Thompson
Cover point.
Campbell	Overend
Rover.
O'Dette	Foust
Centre.
Mulhern	Rouille
Right Wing.
Grose	Foley
Left Wing.
Gilmen	McTaggart

Umpire—W. Meagher.

Foley scored for the Colonials in less than a minute and Rouille repeated the dose in four minutes. A few minutes afterwards Mulhern shot and Clancy stopped the disc but Grose shoved it through a little later. Frost put the Colonials ahead just before half time. In this half, Grose (2) and Overend were ruled off.

Neither team could score for 15 minutes in the second half, though the the Karnots had the best of the play. The Colonials defence did great work, especially Clancy and Thompson. Finally Mulhern got an opening and scored. This seemed to unnerve the Colonials and it was all Karnots afterwards. Gilmen made a pretty rush down the wing and passed neatly to Mulhern who dodged Thompson and scored by a nice shot, putting the Karnots in the lead for the first time. A little later Campbell made a nice run and passed to Grose who shot, Clancy stopped the puck but O'Dette slapped it through. Grose got the last goal by a nice side shot, leaving the score 6—3.

The standing of the teams is now as follows:

	Won.	Lost.
Farriers	2	0
Karnots	2	0
Colonials	1	1
T. A. S.	1	2
Vermors	0	1
Karl Greys	0	2

QUAKER OFFICE BUNCH WON FAST GAME.

Last night at 5.30 in Brock street rink the Quaker Office bunch crossed sticks with a picked team from the mill in a fast and exciting game of hockey. The Office team, although much lighter than their opponents, outclassed them in stick handling and fast following up. The forwards showed good combination and their shooting had deadly effect, while the defence was of a stone wall variety, refusing to be drawn out and checking accurately. Considering the practice that the mill team has had, it was rather disappointing to their supporters to see that they did not get into the game and use their combination to better advantage, although the individual work of Simpson more than made up for their lack of combination. The team on the whole played a gritty game and worked hard to turn down the pen pushers.

The line-up of the teams was as follows:—

Office.	Mill.
Goal.
J. Sullivan	M. Sweeney
Point.
W. Cochrane	L. McCoy
Cover-point.
C. Williamson	W. Shaw
Centre.
E. Carr	W. Distin
Left-wing.
I. Moore	R. Gilman
Right-wing.
F. Heaslip	K. Simpson
Goal Umpires.
T. H. G. Deane	M. J. Kirn

Mr. Blade referred the game to the entire satisfaction of both teams, in the absence of Mr. E. M. Best, who had an engagement preventing his officiating.

The only man ruled off for rough play was Shaw, of the Mill Team, who was slightly inclined to rough it.

HOCKEY SEASON OPENS THIS EVENING

Port Perry and Peterborough Will Play at Brock Street Rink To-night.

The opening of the O.H.A. hockey season will take place this evening when the fast Port Perry team will make its initial appearance in Peterborough for many years. The visiting team is said to be a fast aggregation and one capable of giving any team in the league a warm argument. The locals will be represented by a strong septette and are confident of defeating the Port Perryites. The game will be called sharp at 8.30 o'clock and the doors will be open at 7.30 o'clock. The public should turn out in large numbers and give the boys every encouragement at the start of the season. The team is somewhat changed from that of last year, but all the players are experienced in fast company, every one having played on a championship seven, and they are still capable of beating most of them that come along.

The team will line-up as follows:

Goal—Wasson.
Point—Glover.
Cover point—Crowley.
Rover—Cavanah.
Centre—Morgan.
Right Wing—Parnell.
Referee—Irving of Lindsay.

LATEST SPORT

HOCKEY.

Midland beat Barrie by 16-2 last night, Whitcroft played rover for the winners.

The Charlotte Street Guild team will practice at the All Saints' rink to-night at ten o'clock, weather permitting.

Cobourg, Ont., Jan. 6.—The first junior O.H.A. match was played here to-night between the Belleville and home teams. The score at half-time was 3 to 0 in favour of Cobourg, and at full-time 4 to 3 in favour of the home team. The game was fast and somewhat rough. The players:—Cobourg—Goal, Flesh; point, Read; cover point, Smith; forwards, Robertson, White, Weatherston, Doheny. Belleville — Goal, Holton; point, Townsend; cover point, Connolly; forwards, Weler, Hamilton, Pepper, Allan, Referee—Burrows, of Belleville.

The Review gives as its reason for flunking in the game with the Examiner that "one of their star players is still suffering from an injury received at the hands of one of the Examiner players," this is about the limit.

A poor excuse is better than none, but

The Executive of the City Hockey League will meet in the T. A. S. rooms to-morrow afternoon at 4.30 o'clock. Every member is urged to attend.

"Sandy" Burrows of Belleville, who acted as referee in the Peterborough junior O. H. A. game there New Year's, reports as follows:—"Both teams played fair hockey, but seemed to lack conditions, especially Belleville in the last half. Both teams are husky." The official score was 7 to 3, not 3 to 5, as reported.

The National Hockey Club refused the challenge of the Aberdeens, claiming that they have defeated the Aberdeens twice this season and the Aberdeen club says that the Nationals have not defeated their regular team and that they can not do it. The Nationals say they are looking for faster company, but if they ever meet the Aberdeens' regular team they would need to go away back and sit down. Two of the Aberdeen boys have not been able to play either of the two games that were played with the Nationals but are now in good condition and the Aberdeens will play the Nationals for the oysters any time the latter will play.—Com.

At no time in the history of the shoe trade of Peterborough have the buying public been offered such a chance for money saving and worthful merchandise for the season as this opportunity presents. We well know that in order to reduce this mammoth stock to the minimum point just before inventory, cost cannot be taken into consideration and nothing will so quickly convert merchandise into cash as deetmated prices. You and I have often read newspaper advertisements announcing great things, but when the searchlight of investigation has been turned on the facts of these so-called great bargain sales, have any of us ever found them to be true in detail? We say no, most decidedly no. It may be they will show you a certain line at a bargain, but if you desire to buy, it will just be discovered, and with much sorrow expressed, that they are out of the size wants i.

ROUSING ANDERSON MEETING AT NORWOOD

Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Pro- Speaks in Interests of Liberal Candidate.

Great Enthusiasm Manifested by a Very Large Audience Last Evening.

The Candidate, Mr. J. Finlay and Mr. F. D. Kerr the Other Speakers.

A splendidly successful meeting was held in the Town Hall Norwood, last evening in the interests of Mr. Wm. Anderson, the Liberal candidate for East Peterborough, the chief feature of which was an address by Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Provincial Secretary. The hearty enthusiasm which was manifested speaks well for the chances of the Liberal candidate in the coming election. The hall was very appropriately decorated for the occasion and mottoes such as "God Save the King," "Welcome" and "Canada Forever," were attractively displayed.

Considering the inclemency of the weather the attendance was very large, the hall being filled with an enthusiastic audience from Norwood and the surrounding district. The very hearty manner in which every speaker was received evidenced the fact that the audience was in sympathy with the speakers and with the cause of Liberalism which they espoused.

The chair was occupied by Mr. H. G. Buck, ex-Reeve, who made a few opening remarks. The first speaker was Mr. Wm. Anderson, the Liberal candidate. He thanked those present for the hearty reception accorded him and for the support which they had given him in the past. He was pleased to see such a large number present and he felt sure that their support would mean his return to the Legislature at the next election. He referred to the hollowness of the corruption cries of the Opposition which were raised in default of any criticism of the Government's record which was the real issue in the campaign. He would discountenance corruption in any form in carrying on his campaign. He spoke of the benefits derived by the application of the Government's policy in connection with agriculture, colonization and the good roads movement, concerning which the Government had appropriated the sum of $1,000,000 and the share for Peterborough County from this would be $30,000. He closed his remarks by an appeal to those present for their hearty co-operation and support in the campaign.

Mr. John Finlay, M.P., endorsed the Liberal candidate as one who was deserving of support. He had been intimately connected with him in the county council, and knew him as a man of ability, and as the man to represent East Peterborough.

Mr. F. D. Kerr of Peterborough, was the next speaker. He referred to the policy of the Government in reference to the development of New Ontario. It was a country with a great future before it, and the wise course which the Government was pursuing along the lines of its development should commend itself to every elector. He referred to the building of roads and railways which would greatly assist in the onward march of New Ontario.

Mr. Kerr paid a high compliment to Hon. Mr. Graham, and thought that Hon. Mr. Ross had made no made no mistake in choosing him as a successor to Hon. J. R. Stratton. The latter's retirement was a severe loss to the party.

Hon. Mr. Graham was very warmly received upon rising to speak. His address was about two hours in length, and was a masterly one in every particular. Mr. Graham is an eloquent and impressive speaker, with a convincing manner, and frequently throughout his speech, the audience broke into hearty applause. At the opening of his remarks, Mr. Graham spoke in the highest terms of his predecessor in office, Hon. Mr. Stratton. Mr. Graham said his work had been rendered easy by the admirable condition of efficiency in every branch, in which Mr. Stratton had left the department. The officials spoke of Mr. Stratton in the highest terms. Mr. Graham himself expressed the great loss which the public service had sustained by Mr. Stratton's retirement from public life. The Provincial Secretary made a very effective reference to the unfair tactics adopted by the Opposition in this contest, in substituting personal abuse, slander and misrepresentation of the Government for a discussion of the legislative and administrative record of the Government which, in addition to their policy, were the real subjects at issue in the present campaign. The Opposition's resort to these tactics was a splendid tribute to the excellence of the Government's record and a high practical commendation of the Government to the support of the electorate. Mr. Graham then went on to deal with the general features of the Government's record, and in the course of a splendid speech of two hours' duration, covered the ground in a most comprehensive and telling manner. His facts were very clearly presented and his reasoning deduced therefrom, exceedingly effective. His remarks were relieved by many striking touches of humour and his speech throughout received the closest attention of the audience and [illegible] demonstrations of approval. Mr. Graham's speech as a whole was an eloquent and effective effort and will stand to those who heard it in the light of a most effective exposition of the Government's record and policy, and will certainly have a very distinct effect in improving Mr. Anderson's already excellent chances for a return by an increased majority.

The meeting closed with cheers for the King, the Minister and the candidate. The vast majority of those present agreed that the meeting was one of the most effective political meetings that have ever taken place in Norwood.

BIG SNOWSTORMS DELAYED TRAINS

Local for East on C. P. R. Did not get Through—Express 7 Hours Late.

The heavy snow storm of last night played havoc with the trains to-day on the lines east of here. The snow fell in great quantities in the east and to run the trains on anything like scheduled time was impossible. The C.P.R. train due to arrive here at 5.10 this morning was about seven hours late and did not arrive here until one o'clock this afternoon. The local from Tweed due here at 7.10 o'clock was cancelled and as a result several from here who went down to Norwood and other points last night are still at these places. The 11.25 C.P.R. from Toronto was about fifty minutes late.

On the Grand Trunk line the trains ran well on time considering the difficulties. The Belleville train was the farthest behind time being two hours late in leaving Belleville because of the delay on the main line, the train was three hours late in reaching Peterborough. The 11.45 train from Toronto was about one hour late.

Semi-Ready Four Button Sack.

This is the suit for the up-to-date conservative business man. The whole figure is slightly traced—it is yet far from close fitting.

The collars are the same which characterise all Semi-ready coats—concaved shoulder and artistically shaped lapel. Made of Cheviots, Scotch Tweeds and Irish Homespuns, hand woven.

This being the every day suit it is the one probably best capable of demonstrating the high class tailoring of Semi-ready necessary to insure shape-retaining qualities.

The inner workmanship is what counts here—but it takes more than labor to make it so—it takes labor and skill.

This is the kind of suit which you are not ready to discard until it is really worn out.

RELIGIOUS LIBERTY SAFE.

British Educational Taxes Do Not Interfere Says Archbishop of Canterbury.

London, Jan. 7.—The Archbishop of Canterbury, replying to a memorial from Baptists and Presbyterians of America asking his assistance to prevent the hardships suffered by Nonconformists of Great Britain, who object conscientiously to the payment of educational taxes, encloses a copy of a previous reply on the same subject to a memorial from the Baptists Convention at New York.

The reply contrasts the Archbishop of Canterbury's difficulty of understanding the political issues in connection with the Presidential election in America with the difficulty an American might experience in understanding the complex educational problems of Great Britain and maintains that the act under which the tax is levied does not interfere in the smallest degree with religious liberty and the whole tendency of the bill is to remove so-called Nonconformist difficulties. He says the present controversy in Great Britain would be found to have other origin and interests than those purely educational.

The Archbishop of Canterbury in a letter enclosing this reply says it has afforded him great pleasure to help cement the friendship which he hopes will continue between members of the Church of England and their Christian brethren of America and continues: "You may rely on my doing everything in my power, not only in England, but throughout the world, to remove any mischievous causes of misunderstanding among Christian people."

AFTER TERRIBLE TWO WEEKS.

Six of Crew of Nova Scotia Schooner Rescued By Orient Liner.

New York, Jan. 7.—Six men of the crew of the Lockport, N.S., schooner Julian H. Archer, were brought here yesterday on board the steamer Prins Adalbert, having abandoned their vessel on Christmas Day after a terrible two weeks' experience in a prolonged winter gale. They were rescued from their sinking craft by the German steamer Nubia, bound from New York for the Orient, and were transferred to the Prins Adalbert a week ago. All the members of the shipwrecked crew apparently had recovered from their hard experiences when they arrived here yesterday.

MAY BE TOO LATE.

Meeting of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and U.S Senator Fairbanks.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—It is doubtful whether Sir Wilfrid Laurier will meet Senator Fairbanks in the immediate future. The Prime Minister will be engaged from now on with his Parliamentary work, and Mr. Fairbanks will be tied down at Washington by his Senatorial duties. If a meeting between the two gentlemen takes place, therefore, it may not be until after the session.

Died Four Years After Fall.

London, Jan. 7.—The death occurred yesterday, morning at the residence of his father, London township, of Llewelyn G. Russell, youngest son of Alexander Russell. The deceased, who was in his 25rd year, fell out of a tree on his father's farm about four years ago, injuring his spine. Since then he has been unable to leave his bed.

THE PROVINCIAL CONTEST.

Even to his most ardent admirers, it must be evident that Mr. Whitney went into this campaign ill-prepared. From one day to another it is impossible, to use the vernacular, to know where he is at. To bark back to the coster songs, and "Eliza," Mr. Whitney's campaign is a sort of an affair. To-day he is emphatic about this or that; the next day there is either a coy silence, or an equally emphatic statement statement about something contradictory.

"First she said she wouldn't,
Then she said she couldn't
Then she whispered, 'Well, I'll see'"

Mr. Whitney's ill-preparedness showed itself in the opening days of the campaign, when they found him with no policy, or anything worth while the serious attention of the electors. Of course there was the village sewerage, and the placing of public accounts in the churches. But, surely, even Mr. Whitney did not think that intelligent voters would weigh these in the scale against a policy of developing our hinterland, coupled with a wise conservation of our resources.

In this state of ill-preparedness, Mr. Whitney took up with the corruption cry. If he thought that wise it was his right to take the risk involved of having his weapons rebound upon himself. But no man who hopes to be at the head of the Government of the province, has any shadow of right to go upon the platform with a wilful misstatement. Mr. Whitney declared in Brampton, speaking of those reported in the election trials, that no man had been prosecuted, and no man punished. Those who heard Mr. Dewart at the Fifth Ward meeting on Tuesday night, heard his own empahatic statement of the number of men who had served their term in prison, or paid heavy fines, as a result of prosecutions he himself, in his capacity of Crown Attorney of York, had conducted against men reported by the judges in election trials. This rather suggests to Mr. Whitney to revise his wild statements.

But now to his ill-preparedness and wilful misstatement Mr. Whitney has added another offence against those whom he is seeking to lead to victory. He has laid himself open to the charge of hypocrisy.

As the Globe points out, no one has any disposition to inquire into the question of whether Mr. Whitney does drink whiskey or not; nor, indeed, as to whether he breaks the law in so doing unless he does so under peculiar circumstances which challenge attention. When Mr. Whitney hoisted at his Napanee meeting of how he would enforce the license law and then went home from that meeting and forced the license holder, whose guest he was, to break the license law; when he added to that a defence which, lawyer as he is, he must know in full of falsehood and hypocrisy, then Mr. Whitney should not complain if his attempt to humbug the people is not forth in its proper light.

As against all this the Ross Government presents an unchallenged record of honest administration, backed by many tangible proofs of its efficiency. It offers a definite, progressive programme for the future. The people of Ontario will vote for the men who does not spend this days in talking but in accomplishing things for their good. The people of the two Peterboroughs will do their share by voting for McWilliams and Anderson.

GOOD WORK WELL DONE.

Hon. G. W. Ross' Bureau of Colonization is doing a good work. In four years nearly all the farms in the Temiskaming and Rainy River Valley, have been sold to settlers, while many other settlers have been located in southern Nipissing, Algoma, Thunder Bay and Wabigoon districts. Mr. Ross also came to the relief of the Ontario farmer, and during eleven months of 1904 the immigration from Great Britain to this province exceeded 23,000. These immigrants were not allowed to shift for themselves. During the last two seasons, 12,000 of them were supplied with railway tickets and sent to farmers who had applied for help. Mr. Ross has instructed his agents to encourage none but farmers and farm labourers and domestic servants to come to Ontario. Artisans are not asked or in any way encouraged to come.—Hamilton Times.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Read all the Conservative speeches and read all the Conservative prints, and then tell us if you can if the Conservative party in this campaign has any other policy than that of abuse.

Ontario has the most advanced agricultural community on the continent, which is largely due to the fact that Hon. John Dryden, himself a practical farmer, is the most capable and successful administrator of an agricultural department on this continent.

The Ross Government set apart in 1901 the sum of $1,000,000 for good roads. Already six counties have adopted the county system of highways, and many others have the matter under consideration. Vote for Ross, good Government and good roads.

Mr. Henry Dalby, formerly Conservative organizer in Quebec, and consequently supposed to know what he is writing about, in the Montreal Argus gets off a paragraph which strikes very near the pretences made by Mr. Whitney and his followers in the present campaign, when he says:

"Nevertheless the man who is apt to suspect all other men of being thieves is not to be trusted anywhere out of jail; and the woman who has a low opinion of the virtue of the other women will bear being watched."

The Ontario electors, says the Hamilton Times, will do well to watch closely the men who boast their superior honesty, as the reason for seeking preference over others, yet are parties to violating the very laws which they profess to be so eager to see more rigidly enforced.

Provincial Secretary's Department.

In no Department has able Liberal Administration been more fully shown than in that of the Provincial Secretary.

The revenue from this Department, in 1871, under the Sandfield-Macdonald Government was $2,289. If that rate had continued for the succeeding years, the total would have reached only $73,000.

Under Liberal rule, however, the revenue from 1872 to 1903 inclusive, has totalled the large sum of $726,420.

Local Option Defeated.

Iroquois, Dec. 19.—In response to a requisition a vote was taken Saturday on a local option bylaw, which was defeated by five votes. The vote stood 126 against, 121 for.

NEW AGRICULTURE.

Old Farm Ways Giving Place to New Methods.

Making the Farm Home an Attractive Place.

We are moving out of the old conditions, said Prof. C. C. James, Ontario's Deputy Minister of Agriculture, at the Maritime Winter Fair. When our settlers first came to Canada they faced the primeval forest, and during all the clearing period the old agriculture held sway. With a new generation, conditions began to change; live stock came in, large barns were built, butter and cheese began to be made, and we gradually changed all our methods. This building and the exhibits it contains are proof that we are trying to keep up with the demands of the times, and to compete with other countries by following the New Agriculture,

THE NEW AGRICULTURE.

The new agriculture must be conducted upon business principles. In old times it did not seem so necessary to pursue these business methods; in fact with the surroundings then existent, there was no chance to do so. In our towns and cities the merchant and the manufacturer has also had to change his methods of business. The farmer is just as much a manufacturer as the man in town who makes boots, cloths and hardware. The manufacturer in town finds it necessary to make the kind of goods that the consumer demands. It is also one of the conditions to-day that the farmer should produce what his customers want. We must consider what our district is best capable of producing, and work along that line. Grow the crops and keep the live stock that thrive best where we live.

ECONOMICAL PRODUCTION.

The manufacturer must produce economically. Our best saw mills, for instance, are now run with practically no waste of material; even the dust is used. One of the best examples of economical manufacturing is seen in the great stock yards of Chicago, where absolutely every part of an animal is turned into a marketable product. So the farmer must endeavour to convert to a profitable use all his products. He should see to it that there is no waste, land under weeds, under fences, or in careless cultivation. The farmer has, perhaps, in his operations greater problems to meet than any other manufacturer, if he would avoid unnecessary waste.

SCIENTIFIC PRINCIPLES NECESSARY.

The New Agriculture must be conducted upon scientific principles. There should not to-day be any objection to book farming, for the intelligent man can from agricultural papers and books get the valuable experience of other men who have done the work he is trying to do. Our people are wisely beginning to lay aside their prejudice against books, and to try to get the best information from every available source. Scientific men have been and are studying and finding out truths about plant growth, the constituents of our soils, etc., and it will pay us to learn what these men have found out.

The farm work of the future will be a great deal more enjoyable. In Ontario the farmers are very seldom referred to as "old hayseeds." The intelligent man who watches closely all the results of his work is interested and takes a pleasure in it. The world has lately found out that the farmer can be benefitted by an education applicable to his business.

THE FARMER'S WIFE REMEMBERED

A few years ago in Ontario we first found out that the farmer had a wife, and we are doing what we can for the betterment of the woman on the farm. In the past she has had a hard life,—her work has been practically unending and she has not had the benefit of labour-saving devices to the same extent as her husband. We are trying to relieve the farmer's wife of all the drudgery possible by our system of women's institutes and domestic science teaching. We have also found out that there are children on the farm, and we are inaugurating a movement to try to provide the right kind of education for these children.

The home is where our agriculture starts and is matured. The reformation of the agricultural home is the start after all of our New Agriculture. Establish a farmer with an inclination to knowledge, a wife who knows how to make the most of her opportunities, and children getting a rational edusation; and I care not how, poor that farm is, it will succeed. With these conditions, we shall hear no more about the "old hayseed", but we shall see the farmer walking the streets of our towns as well dressed as anyone, and respected as one of the best citizens of Canada.

Do Not Suppress a Cough.

When you have a cough do not try to suppress it, but remove the cause. The cough is only a symptom of some disease, and the disease is what you should cure, then the cough will stop of itself. The most common cause of coughing is a cold. Anodynes will promptly suppress the cough, and preparations containing choloroform, opium, etc., are used for that purpose, but they do not cure the cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy on the other hand does not suppress the cough, but relieves it by removing from the throat and lungs the mucus which obstructed the breathing and allaying the irritation and tickling in the throat. It also opens the secretions and effectually and permanently cures the cold as well as the cough. For sale by all druggists.

CANADA ON EVE OF GREAT THINGS.

This Is No Time for Men of Faint Hearts—To Shape the Destiny of Ontario We Want Men of Courage, Men of Action, Broad Gauge Men, Who Are Not Afraid to Do Things.

Mr. Ross said he would scorn to be leader of a Government that could not keep up with the energy and public spirit that prevail in this country. "The Liberal party, so far as I am concerned," he added, "and so far as the men following me are concerned, is resolved that whatever may be done by enterprise, public spirit, the judicious investment of money given us, will be done, so that Ontario will hold the first place in the procession of the Provinces of this Dominion. (Cheers.) Sir John Macdonald was wiser than some of us thought when he proposed a new era for Canada. We are now the progressive party, as his was then, and behold, slowly coming around the foot of the hill we see Whitney with his little band of footsore followers trying to catch up with the great Liberal party by stealing all that we possess." (Cheers.) Have nothing to do with them; they are not required; they have not shown their capacity for governing yet. They have been in the wilderness for a good many years. They have not fulfilled the term of their punishment yet—(A voice—Four years more)—before they cross into the promised land. Let them remain until the last hour, and we shall see on every great question the Province of Ontario shall lead the way.—Premier Ross at Napanee.

DEVELOPED INDUSTRIES.

Good Roads, Beet Sugar and Power Development in Ontario.

"Now I am not going to deal in detail with all that we attempted to do. We grappled with the question of good roads. That was in my time. Six counties have already accepted our system, and $543,000 has been spent on good roads, of which we paid $181,000. We endeavored to develop the beet-root sugar industry, and the Berlin factory produced 7,000,000 pounds of sugar last year, which will yield to the farmers probably $150,000. The policy of the Government has been to encourage wherever we could home industry, and to see that the money now sent abroad to supply us with our natural wants is expended in industries on our own ground. Canada for Canadians, and the operation of industries in any line that can be productive and profitable. (Applause.)

"We took up another little problem, the development of power at Niagara Falls. On the face of it that seems a small matter, but look at it. By the arrangements which we made with three power companies you are going to secure on Canadian soil at Niagara an expenditure of $25,000,000—American money most of it, but they may spend $25,000,000 more if they choose.

Rental From Public Franchises.

"What are we going to get from those franchises? We are going to realize nearly $275,000 by way of rental, and I received an invitation to-day to visit the opening of the first power house on the Canadian side on Monday next, showing that this investment is real, showing that we are not shooting an arrow into the air, but that the country is going to get substantial rewards from our management of this department. Everything, Mr. Chairman, allow me to say, and without a shadow of egotism, every matter large or small with which we have dealt has been successful, and that in itself shows some judgment on our part, some judgment on the part of the Legislative Assembly that advises us, and, in my judgment, far more to the credit of the Government than any obstruction or criticism could be to their disadvantage.

A Progressive Mineral Policy.

"We undertook the development of our mineral resources and we are getting on with them very well. During my time we have placed upon the market from our gold mines nearly $1,384,736 worth; in silver, $313,721; in iron ore, $1,285,729—that iron ore we sold mostly to the United States, some at Hamilton, some at Deseronto, some at Midland and some at the Soo; pig iron, $5,439,139 worth; nickel, $7,852,729 worth, and, copper, $2,482,007 worth. Or in all, in these three mineral products we have produced in the last five years, under a mineral policy that some people condemn, $18,000,000 worth of ore. It is leading us to this position, that sooner or later Canada will be independent of the world for her iron and for her steel and all products that are made from iron and steel—(applause)—a most important consideration for us Canadians when we see that in the United States, because of the possession of vast beds of ore and large industries for the manufacture of iron, they were able to form a billion-dollar trust to control the American market and indirectly to control the Canadian market. That was one of their objects."—Premier Ross in Toronto.

Fought for Provincial Rights.

"Now, these, as I said before, are large questions with which I have dealt, and they are only a few. In legislation we dealt with municipal law, and who has much fault to find with our municipal law? We have dealt with labor laws, and we had to go into the courts to fight for the rights of the Province, and we had to contest the field with the best constitutional lawyers that could be found in this country or in England, and we were universally successful in our litigation before the Privy Council as we were successful in our litigation at home. I put these facts before you, and I have no doubt some of them will go to the country, to show that this is a Government that has—and remember I am speaking modestly—the capacity for administration, that makes it its burden duty to keep up with the demands of the people in every quarter, and it is a curious thing in the double-barrelled policy which Mr. Whitney has given us—the policy of the conference and his own policy subsequently—that there is nothing proposed except a few things in imitation of our policy, nothing that can be really usefully added to what the Liberal party proposes or what the Liberal party has done."—Premier Ross at Toronto.

22,000 PEOPLE.

Last Year That Number Was Brought In to Settle Ontario's Lands—Farm Labor Bureau.

When Hon. Geo. W. Ross became Premier of Ontario in 1899, among other measures in connection with the development of New Ontario he created the Bureau of Colonization to direct land-seekers and in other ways to facilitate settlement in the new districts.

Since, thousands of settlers have purchased or located farms in New Ontario through personal advice given them through this bureau. In four years nearly all the farms in Tymiskaming and Rainy River Valley have been sold to settlers, while many other settlers have located in southern Nipissing, Algoma, Thunder Bay and Wabigoon districts.

The movement of farm hands and renters to New Ontario and the west created a shortage of help on the farms of old Ontario, and steps were at once taken to relieve the situation by an increased immigration from the mother country. The number of immigrants arriving in Ontario in 1900 was a trifle over 8,000. The immigration to Ontario from Great Britain for eleven months of 1904 exceeded 23,000. These immigrants were not dumped here and allowed to shift for themselves in the larger cities, but during the past two seasons over 12,000 of them were supplied with railway tickets and sent to farmers who had applied for help to the Government Farm Labor Bureau. Many of these will go to New Ontario when they become better acquainted with Ontario methods of farming, but in the meantime they supply the help our farmers need, and which is delivered at their doors by the Government free of any cost to them.

The following personal letter, which the Premier forwarded to Mr. H. F. Kyle, indicates his interest in this special work of immigration. Mr. Kyle is the special agent of the Government to help meet the demands for farm labor in the Province:

Toronto, March 25th, 1903.

(Personal.)

My Dear Mr. Kyle,—I was so busy when I arranged to send you to England that I was unable to give you full instructions as to what I expected you to do on arriving there, although from a conversation I had with you before you left I have no doubt you understood what is expected of you very well.

(1) Let me say that you are to devote your attention entirely to the encouragement of farm laborers, domestic servants and such other people as are likely to make settlers on the agricultural lands of the Province.

(2) You might inform such people as you think would be disposed to come to Canada of our large beet root industry, employing certain labor of women and children and perhaps men of over middle-age who are not physically able to do hard work, that they could find employment during the summer season for a couple of months more or less.

(3) Kindly remember that you have no commission to encourage the artisan classes to come to Ontario, as the Government has fully decided that the demands for skilled labor shall be left entirely to the various industries requiring such labor, and consider that you have no authority either from the Government or from any employer of skilled labor to invite or encourage that particular class to come to the Province. Of course you are at liberty to speak of Ontario generally and of its prosperous condition as a suitable home for good citizens of any class, without holding out inducements, however, to the artisan classes, either as to wages or employment.

(Signed) Geo. W. Ross.

STOOD BY THEIR POLICY.

Because It Had a Continuity of Strength and Constitutional Vigor.

"I have given you the record of the Conservative party during 32 years. I have briefly reviewed their eight campaigns, every one of which was a failure. The policy on which they went to the country changed eight different times. Our policy has had a continuity of strength and constitutional vigor which has endured from 1871 down to the present time. We have abandoned nothing because we found it useless; we have not repealed any legislation of our own because it has not been effective. Every policy we have set up along the great, long, tedious, and, shall I say, strenuous journey stands to-day erect as when planted by the hands of the leaders of the great Liberal party, and should Providence spare us and permit us to retain power I hope we shall still be able to guide the future Liberals of this country by monuments equally useful, equally attractive, equally valuable in the development of the great Province. (Prolonged applause.) Our cry is 'progressive Ontario.'"—Premier Ross in Toronto.

New Sources of Revenue Under Liberal Administration.

The Liberal Government of Ontario has evidenced its progressive administration in many ways, especially in discovering new sources of revenue with which to meet the ever increasing needs of a growing Province. These, it may be added, have been inaugurated and developed in the face of more or less strenuous opposition of the Whitney party in the House.

Some of these sources of revenue and the total receipts are as follows:

Succession Duties, 1892 to 1903 inclusive	$2,462,720
Estimate for 1904	450,000
Supplementary Revenue Act of 1899; 1899 to 1903	1,187,941
Brewers' and Distillers' Licenses 1899 to 1903	310,879
Shooting Licenses, 1892 to 1903	99,307
Insurance and Loan Corporations, 1885 to 1903	315,562
	$4,826,407

ABUSE OF ATHLETICS.

Muscle Building Does Not Necessarily Improve the Health.

Athletics may be good or evil and in the same manner as a two edged sword.

The prime object in athletics is improvement of the general health. One writer has said that health, like happiness, does not exist. He said the body consists of a number of mechanisms which have the closest and most exact relations, and as they approximate to harmony there is health, but when disordered there is ill health.

To obtain good health muscle building is not a necessity. One cannot judge of the person's health by the size and hardness of the muscles. The converse may be true.

To obtain health one must not be in a perfectly trained condition owing to the effects of severe training on the nervous system.

There is no evidence to prove that athletics and muscle building improve the constitution.

One should always keep in mind the fact that built up or hypertrophied muscle has a tendency to degenerate. The heart, being a muscular organ, shares in this tendency.

In regard to the moral side of the question, it remains to be proved that athletics per se corrupt the morals. Dr. F. R. Sturgis is confident that athletics improve the morals of a community.

Although the evidence for and against athletics is contradictory, the whole subject may be summed up by stating that athletics are beneficial when properly and judiciously applied and very injurious when the precautions above mentioned are ignored or carelessly regarded.

Mr. Wm. S. Crane, of California, Md., suffered for years from rheumatism and lumbago. He was finally advised to try Chamberlain's Pain Balm, which he did and it effected a complete cure. This liniment is for sale by all druggists.

A CORNER IN PARADISE

By KEITH GORDON

Copyright, 1904, by P. C. Eastment

"What do you suppose Adam and Eve talked about?" inquired the girl in the Hongkong chair, with a yawn, as she settled her Burne-Jones proportions a trifle more luxuriously in the barbaric splendor of the pillows and clasped her large, shapely hands above the shadowy darkness of her head.

"Love," replied the man, with laconic promptness. "There wasn't anything else for them to talk about, so far as I can see."

Miss Chesterton's glance slowly detached itself from the enchanting picture of turquoise water and topaz islands afforded by the oval opening in the curtain of vines that screened the veranda and rested coolly upon him.

"There was the weather," she argued sweetly, "and the birds and flowers."

"You forget that Adam was a man," observed her companion, with just a perceptible stress upon the last word.

A silence followed, in which the appalling beauty of a California August held them spellbound. Miss Chesterton drew a sharp breath; then she resumed the conversation once more.

"All men don't," was her somewhat incoherent remark.

Dinsmore had the air of a man suddenly recalled to consciousness from a state of suspended animation.

"Don't what?"

She flushed and looked injured. Already the unpardonable sin loomed large in the perfect beauty of their small, quiet world.

"Don't forget what one's talking about," she retorted crisply.

He gave an amused laugh. "You mustn't lay it up against me," was his contrite plea. "You see, I feel like a fly caught in the amber; like—like—by Jove, it's too beautiful!"

She nodded understandingly, and again a silence fell, unbroken save by a wistful bird note.

Meantime, slowly and painfully, measuring every inequality with its yellow, jelly-like length, a slug crawled steadily along the garden path and up and over step after step until it gained the veranda whose the two were sitting.

Neither of them perceived the newcomer, though it was a fine, large specimen, fully eight inches long and as large around as one's thumb, of the sort sometimes sought for by easterners who like to carry the proof of their stories back with them. It made its way along the floor of the veranda and up one of the wicker legs of Miss Chesterton's chair as if it recognized the woman as unerringly as did the serpent of old.

A little scream broke the stillness. Coming back from a dreamy, sensuous contemplation of the passion flowers that hung like jewels among the dusky rafters of the porch, Miss Chesterton's startled glance fell upon the long, fat, glutinous snail stretched out upon the arm of her chair, as if enjoying a well earned rest after the prolonged trip from its home at the root of the stump of calla lilies.

"Gracious!" she exclaimed as Dinsmore leaned toward her questioningly. "How on earth did it get here?"

"History repeats itself," was his meaning reply as he watched the intruder, whose horns pointed upward in an aggressive fashion. "I hope you are impressed by the fact that its errand is evidently with you. You will notice that it is perfectly contented there, and by the way it opens that little circular window in the side of its head I should think it was listening for what you might have to say."

For a moment they watched the slug curiously. Then a droll thought lighted her face like a flash of sunshine, and Dinsmore waited for an explanation.

"I was thinking of Eve," she said softly. "The sight of the serpent must have been as bracing as a tonic after the enervating beauty of Eden. No wonder that she listened. It's a positive joy to rest one's eyes upon such ugliness after all this blinding beauty. Absolutely I've been fighting the heartache—wrestling with a desire to moan and weep."

"And yet you screamed at the sight of it."

The words in themselves were innocent enough, but the tone was [illegible] underneath his words might lie an implication that her efforts to discourage his suit meant no more than her startled cry at the appearance of the slug was womanly intuition. But to show that she had divined it was a very different matter, a break more worthy of some rustic schoolgirl than of Eloise Chesterton. He continued to gaze at her until she felt like an insect impaled upon a pin point for the benefit of an interested student. At last she could endure it no longer.

"Probably Eve screamed, too, just at first sight of the serpent!" she remarked desperately. Then, with an inward groan, she wished she had not spoken.

Dinsmore laughed out, a little note of triumph in his voice.

"If you think so, I'm sure that she did," was his reply. "Thank you for settling a point that was puzzling me."

Defiance sparkled in Miss Chesterton's eyes.

"Reading between the lines," she observed, with much deliberation and apparent irrelevance, "is a misleading habit. For instance, take my own case. I mean what I say and nothing more. You can't read between the lines, because there is never anything to read."

At the words the slug crawled a little farther along the arm of the chair, as if something had made it uneasy.

"Incredulity!" ejaculated Dinsmore in a suppressed voice, his head thrown back upon his chair and his eyes lifted to the passion flowers.

His companion sat upright, looking at him with fiery scorn. He met her eyes brazenly. Never had he seen her appear so superbly beautiful. But he only said:

"Don't sit up like that in a Hongkong chair; it's inartistic. Moreover, it's ungracious, and a woman should never be ungracious!"

"You're horrid, Ralph Dinsmore," was the only reply she vouchsafed him, but he noticed that she sank slowly back upon the cushions. One couldn't afford to look awkward in the eyes of any man, even a man that one fully intends to refuse.

The warm gold of the afternoon sunlight was gradually paling, and a chill was creeping stealthily into the suave air. Dinsmore, recognising the signs of late afternoon, looked at his watch. Just a half hour until the 5 o'clock boat would bear him away from this corner in paradise back to San Francisco.

He drew a small case from his pocket and calmly handed it to Miss Chesterton.

"You like old jewels. See what you think of it," was his matter of fact comment.

She obeyed him, drawing from the case a ring of quaint workmanship in which two beautiful pearls were imbedded.

"Beautiful!" she exclaimed enthusiastically. "Exquisite!" But she did not look toward him. "What it is for and where did you get it?" she added, struggling to appear natural.

For an answer he leaned toward her and took it gently from her clasp. Then he lifted her left hand and calmly placed it on the third finger, holding the hand firmly in his while he said authoritatively:

"That is what it is for. As for the rest, it has been in the Dinsmore family for 200 years, worn always by the sweetheart and wife of the eldest son."

"But you haven't asked me," objected a faint voice.

"One doesn't bother about those details in paradise, beloved," he murmured happily. "Adam knew that Eve was his, and by the same token I know that you were made for me."

The slug was squirming slowly toward the garden again.

REMAINS OF THE ROMAN

NOTABLE DISCOVERIES OF THE OCCUPATION OF BRITAIN.

Roman Citadel Found in England—Remains of a Roman Amphitheatre and of Dwellings of the Officers of the Roman Army—Important Roman Houses Found and the Burying Station of the Villa Faustini of Antoninus.

Interest of archaeologists has been much excited of late by some notable discoveries of remains of the Roman occupation of Britain. About three weeks ago at Sicklesmere, some two miles from Bury St. Edmunds, the discovery was made by Mr. G. Barham, of that town, of what is believed to be the burying station of the Villa Faustini, mentioned by Antoninus. There is undoubtedly, also, the remains of a Roman amphitheatre, and dwellings of the officers of the Roman army. The excavations, which have been going on for some years at Caerwent village, which stands on the site of the ancient city of Venta Silurum have also been recently rewarded by the discovery of the remains of some large and important Roman houses, a portion of the city wall, the south gate of the city, and some various inscribed stones.

Another and most important find has been made at Brough, in Derbyshire, between Bradwell and Hope, in the Peak district, in the shape of a Roman citadel. Roman tiles, bricks,

REMAINS OF THE CITADEL. WATCHTOWER.

&c., had often been picked up in the neighborhood, and it was resolved to seek for more important remains. The excavations were carried out on behalf of the Derby Archaeological Society, under the superintendence of Mr. John Garstang, Reader in Archaeology at Liverpool University, and in a field close to the Hope station on the Dore and Chinley branch of the Midland Railway were discovered the remains of an ancient Roman stronghold similar to those of Melandra Castle, of oblong shape—peculiar to all similar strongholds which have come to light—and about 310 feet by 270 feet. The walls are nearly square, varying from five to eight feet in thickness, and at every corner may be seen the remains of a guard chamber, each entered by a gate. It is supposed by the appearance of the ruins that originally a massive stone building was in the centre of the fortress, as distinguished from a temporary camp. The praetorium which has been unearthed shows it to have been bigger than might be expected from the size of the fortifications, the walls varying in thickness from three to four feet. Among the odds and ends dug up are pieces of tile, pots, oyster shells, and charcoal.

Canada's Great Elevator.

The first grain elevator erected by the Harbor Commissioners of Montreal was finished recently and is now in working order. This great elevator was designed in order to give Montreal a chance of competing with the grain shipping ports of America, and for the better handling of the Canadian export crop, which increases in bulk every year. It is one of the biggest structures of the kind in the world, is 228 feet high, and cost $606,000. Its carrying capacity is 1,000,000 bushels of grain, and its machinery will load a large ocean liner in one night. The corn is carried into the storage chambers by pneumatic suction tubes, and the grain is thoroughly cleaned and freed from dust before it is shipped for exportation by a special set of machines. The greatest satisfaction is felt throughout the Dominion at the completion of the elevator, which is the first of a series to be erected in order to keep pace with Canada's increasing importance as a world's wheat grower, says Lloyd's London Weekly.

REV. PRINCIPAL CAVEN

APPRECIATION OF THE GRAND OLD MAN OF PRESBYTERIANISM.

Great Principal of Knox College From Whose Hands 583 Candidates for the Ministry Went Forth—The Backwoods Preacher—Uniting the Presbyterians—His Work for Broader Union of the Churches of Canada.

It would be simple truth and not post-mortem flattery to say that in the death of Principal Caven, Canadian Presbyterianism has lost its best loved son. John Knox's religion has been graced in this country by many able men, brilliant logicians, skilled debaters, orators and statesmen, but among them all few indeed have inspired in their followers such warm affection as that which has gone out to William Caven. The late Principal Grant, with whom one might compare him, was a very different sort of man. They represented, in fact, different types of manhood, besides different ideals, but one served his Church no less earnestly than the other—Grant, the bold controversialist; Caven, the gentle, kindly teacher, beloved by men of all creeds, unworldly to a degree, and combining with deep philosophy something of the child's simplicity. Principal Caven was a man whose death will be a loss not only to Presbyterianism, but to all religions in this country. As the late Prof. Halliday Douglas said, "To know him is to revere and love him."

Knox's Great Principal.

Principal Caven was identified with so many events in the religious and secular history of the country that it is hard to say by what he will be chiefly remembered. For a generation at least it is probable that his fame as the head of Knox College will eclipse his other claims to remembrance. When with due formality the fiftieth anniversary of his ordination was celebrated, Principal Caven mentioned that since he had become connected with Knox 583 candidates to the ministry had been graduated. These are scattered all over the world, and it is risking nothing to assert that in the memory of every one of them Principal Caven will be affectionately cherished. His personal influence on his students has been widely commented on. In the words of Lieutenant-Governor Clark, "the young men who have been brought up under Principal Caven's influence are men of solid acquirements, men who are not mere theological thistledown, blown with every wind of doctrine, but firm in the faith and able to give an answer to every man." This last phrase explains Principal Caven's power as an evangelical leader. Floundering in no slough of doubt himself, he was able to point out firm ground to his followers, and they in turn could direct the path of their flocks.

The Backwoods Preacher.

Man's threescore and ten years have been passed and nearly three more added by Principal Caven. He was born in Wigtownshire, Scotland, and at the age of 17 came to Canada with his parents. His father was a school teacher, and that he was a sterling character it is hardly necessary to say. His son is the best evidence of that. When 22 years old, William Caven was ordained to the ministry of St. Mary's, and labored there for fourteen years. It is said that his preaching is still a precious memory. It was a backwoods district in those days, and Principal Caven recalled in later years the strange sensation it gave him to see his congregation become lost to view in the bush immediately after leaving church. It was from the wilderness, then, that the preacher was called in 1866 to fill the chair of exegetical theology in Knox College, to succeed the most brilliant lecturer Canada has ever seen, Prof. Young. Seven years later Principal Willis resigned, and Rev. Mr. Caven was appointed to the vacancy.

Uniting the Presbyterians.

Before this recognition of his services to Presbyterianism had been made, Rev. Mr. Caven had well established his right to it. His labor to bring about the Presbyterian Union of 1861, and the later union, which embraced practically every Presbyterian congregation in Canada, was responsible as much as the work of any one man could be for those unions. When he began his ministry, Presbyterianism both in Scotland and elsewhere was divided, one might say, into hostile camps. Chief of these were the Church of Scotland and the Free Church, the Auld Lichts and the New Lichts, familiar in some of their humorous traits to readers of Barrie's stories. With true Scottish tenacity these branches clung to their differences no less determinedly in Canada than in the land of their origin. All realized how necessary it was for evangelical purposes that the sects should combine, but neither was willing to accept unreservedly the doctrine of the other. Those in favor of union, however, including as they did men of the high spiritual and intellectual endowments of Principal Caven, were determined that the union should be consummated. Their efforts were successful, and the United Presbyterian Church was formed. Principal Caven was identified with the movement for union with the Congregationalists, which failed, and with the movement for union with the Methodists, which succeeded. Internal strife, so perfect has been the union for which the late principal of Knox College labored so diligently.

Favored Broad Union.

It is worth noting that a more comprehensive union still found a warm advocate in Principal Caven. It throws a sidelight on his character, and will yet be remembered to his honor when his other deeds may be obscured by the lapse of years. Speaking on the occasion of his jubilee, he said:

"My humble hope is that larger unions still await us. I love the definition of the Church which is given in our confession, and it is almost identical with the definition in the Thirty-nine Articles: that the Church of Christ consists of all the predestinating people of God with their children. And if that is true, then I say that union has not yet accomplished its work. We have spiritual union, we have real union in Christ. In the case of all believers we cannot hinder that, and we rejoice in it. But for my part, I long to see the time when this inward spiritual union will work itself out and complete itself in formal visible union. I am looking for that union; we cannot precipitate it, we cannot force it on faster than the sentiment of the various communions will allow. I trust the time has come when Ephraim shall no longer envy Judah and Judah shall no longer vex Ephraim, and they shall be one in the Lord."

While the late principal was not by any means so much in the glare of publicity as many of his contemporaries, his counsel was welcome when it was preferred, whether to the Church or to the State. He was a powerful member of the General Assembly, and aided them in the solution of many questions. In public affairs his views were always eagerly sought and respectfully received. The principal was for years the "Grand Old Man of Presbyterianism." His demise removed a leader who has served his Church with distinction and has contributed in a very large degree to the welfare of his fellow-citizens.

THE GREAT DAY.

Well,
I guess that'll hold me for awhile.
Yes, I should smile.
If anything will Fill the bill,
It is the Thanksgiving proclamation.
That's the station
Where I get off,
Doff
My cap and settle down to stay.
Say,
It just suits me
To a "T"
And all the other letters.
Setters
Would lose
Should they refuse
To play the dope that way.
It's my day,
And if you will allow Me I want here and now
To publicly thank
The gentleman of exalted rank
Who invented the day.
His stock is way
Up in my mind.
He's my kind
Of people
And deserves a monument tall as a steeple.
He had, as I have said,
A great head.
If he were here,
Running for congress on a clear
Day,
You may,
To keep the records straight, make a note
Of the fact that he could have my vote.
Great guns and Carrie Nation,
But it is a glorious anticipation!
Mark,
The call of turkey, light meat and dark!

REASON No 4

WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because it is Economical.

Red Rose Tea is composed of what are known in the trade as "high-grown" Ceylon and Indian teas. These teas are grown at high altitudes on the mountain slopes, where the tea bushes grow more slowly and are more carefully cultivated than in the valleys, where the climate is warm and humid.

High-grown tea is not only a finer quality, but contains much more tea juice or extract than valley-grown tea.

This can be easily proved by comparing a drawing of Red Rose with any other tea. By doing so you will find that a pound of Red Rose Tea will spend as far as 1¼ to 1½ lbs. of other teas.

The saving is most apparent in the Blue Label and better grades—buy a pound and make the test.

PARSONS AND THE PIPE

RECENT ADDRESS ON SMOKING BY THE BISHOP OF MANCHESTER.

The Lordship Advocated the Use of the Weed—Some Famous English Clergymen Who Were Lovers of Tobacco—Famous Spurgeon Smoked to the Glory of God—His Defence of the Ill-Looking Habit Statement.

The address given a short time ago by the Bishop of Manchester to the clergy and office-bearers of the Chesthem Rural Deanery caused not a little surprise among many people. His Lordship advocated smoking. After referring to the prevalence of intemperance, the Bishop said: "You must let men smoke. It is no good when you hear a dear, good woman rejoice that her husband neither drinks nor smokes. She is making a great mistake. The vice of smoking, as she calls it, is one of the things that really are a great soldier to a man in his loneliness and when he needs a little sedative. It does not intoxicate, and, if he does not smoke excessively, can do him no harm. I say that because I have been a smoker ever since I was at the university." The confession was greeted with laughter and applause. Archbishop Whately was a famous lover of tobacco, and in the struggle he vigorously smoked his pipe. And in his study when it was extinct it served as a bookmarker.

In his later years Bishop Barnet always smoked when writing. In order to combine the two operations, we are told that, with perfect comfort to himself, he would bore a hole through the broad brim of his large hat, and, putting the stem of the pipe through it, he puffed his pipe as he plied his pen. It has been remarked that Fuller and one of the most orderly minds ever given to man. He loved to enjoy the pleasures of the pipe, and while smoking would talk to his friends with admirable felicity and great deal fruitfulness of ideas and illustrations.

Cowper's most intimate clerical friends, the Revd J. Johnson and W. Unwin, were great smokers. "I have often promised myself a laugh with you about your pipe," wrote the poet to Mr. Newton, "but have always forgotten it when I have been writing, and at present I am not much in a laughing humour; you will observe, however, for your comfort, and the honor of that mute pipe, it hardly falls within the line of my censure. You never fumigate to ladies, or leave them out of your company; nor do you use it as an incentive to hard drinking. Your friends, indeed, have reason to complain that it frequently deprives them of your company, but they have no reason to complain of your conversation."

Dr. Parr, a better than he, the witty and elegant Hawkins Browne, has been warm in its praise."

Canon Kingsley was a great smoker, and he looked upon tobacco as a blessing. He would work himself into a sort of white heat over the book he was writing, until he was too excited to continue his work, and then would calm himself with his pipe. A clean "churchwarden" was the pipe he used, and none was ever smoked by him that was in any way foul. When he had accumulated sufficient used pipes to fill a barrel, he would send them to the kiln to be rebaked, and afterwards they were sent back again to him fresh and new. It has been previously pointed out that this gave him a striking simile, which in "Alton Locke" he puts into the mouth of James Crossthwaite: "Katie here believes in purgatory, where souls are burnt clean again, like bacca pipes."

Respecting tobacco stoppers, it is related that Sir Isaac Newton on one occasion, when in a fit of mental abstraction, used the finger of a lady he was courting as a tobacco stopper, as he sat and smoked in silence beside her.

The taste of tobacco is by no means confined to the clergy of the Church of England; the Nonconformists have had many famous smoking ministers. Robert Hall, the celebrated divine, is believed to have preached his most eloquent sermons after smoking his pipe in the vestry. C. H. Spurgeon, one of the most popular of modern preachers, was an inveterate smoker. He was ever a champion of the pipe. In the course of a sermon Mr. Spurgeon stated, "I wish to say I'm not ashamed of anything whatever I do, and I don't feel that smoking makes me ashamed, and therefore I mean to smoke to the glory of God." This created some hostile criticism from members of the religious world. He made an ably reply through the columns of the London press. In the course of his remarks he said: "The expression 'smoking to the glory of God,' standing alone, has an ill sound, and I do not justify it; but in the sense in which I employed it I shall stand to it. No Christian should do anything in which he cannot glorify God; and this may be done, according to Scripture, in eating and drinking, and the common actions of life. When I have found intense pain relieved, a weary brain soothed, and calm, refreshing sleep obtained by a cigar, I have felt grateful to God, and have blessed His name. This is what I meant, and by no means did I use the sacred words triflingly."

In Herefordshire the last pipe taken at a sitting is called "A Kemble Pipe." The origin of the saying is traced back to 1679, when a poor Catholic priest, named Kemble, was hanged in his eightieth year, he having been implicated in the plot of Titus Oates. He mounted, it is said, to his fate amidst a crowd of weeping friends, with the tranquility of a primitive martyr, smoking a pipe of tobacco.

Etiquette.

It is the true leaders of society who are the least haughty and reserved. The grande dame by birth, breeding and association knows, like the gentleman born and bred, just when, how and upon whom to bestow her pleasant smile of recognition. She is not afraid, as are those less familiar with proper social usages, that she might commit a social solecism and do the wrong thing.

It is this woman who speaks the kindest to the weary shopgirl. It is she to whom the laboring man lifts his apology of a hat as she thanks him for the cleaning of his busy broom or the holding open of a door for her. It was such a woman who heard the retort coming from the sweeper of a crossing when the thankless him for lifting her over the deep mud. "I fear I was very heavy," she said sweetly.

"No, indade, mum. I do be used to carryin' half a ton o' sugar," said he.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

A GREAT NOVA SCOTIAN

RECENT HONOR DONE THE MEMORY OF JOSEPH HOWE.

The Savior of His Province—At Critical Moment Clearly Outranked His Fellows and the People Turned to Him Alone for Guidance in the Crisis—Poet and Journalist—His Own Lawyer—In a Duel

Not only Nova Scotia, but all Canada, rejoices in the honor done the memory of Joseph Howe by the erection to his memory of a magnificent statue. This monument was unveiled in Halifax recently in the presence of a notable gathering, the speech of the day being that of Attorney-General Longley, who made the following memorable reference to Howe's greatest work:

"The battle for responsible Government was fought at the same time in Upper and Lower Canada, but the people of the larger provinces lacked the leadership of the clear, richly-endowed man whom Providence bestowed upon Nova Scotia. As a consequence we find bloodshed, rebellion, loss of life and destruction of property. It was the clear, calm voice of Howe which pointed but to the people of these provinces the true lines to follow. Scarcely a man lives in the dominions beyond the seas over which the British flag floats who does not today enjoy more favorable conditions as the result of Joseph Howe's great prescience and splendid vindication of the principle of self-government."

The Savior of His Province.

Mr. Longley said no more than the truth. A conflict between the old autocratic order and the new might have led to terrible results in Nova Scotia had it entered on the phases which marked its progress in Ontario and Quebec. In those stormy days one man so clearly outranked his fellows that the people naturally turned to him for guidance, and were not confused by divers counsels from leaders equally eminent. So it came that, at a critical moment, Howe's influence was supreme, the old system passed away and the new one was ushered in, with no more than a few fierce speeches. Preceding this were troublous times, indeed, but the whole country was not embroiled. Howe fought many of the battles single-handed, on at least one occasion risking his life in a personal quarrel, in which he represented the growing thought of his time, the opposition to powers of the day.

Poet and Journalist.

Howe was born of United Empire Loyalist stock, his grandfather having settled in Boston before the famous "tea party." Joseph's father was a prominent Nova Scotian of his day, being Postmaster-General of New Brunswick, Nova Scotia and Prince Edward Island. The family associations of the young man were cultured and refined, and he grew up no raw country lad, but one of taste and education. As a youth he was the author of a poem "The Isle of Melville," which attracted the favorable attention of Gov. Dalhousie. At the age of 20 he established a newspaper called The Nova Scotian, which has survived until this day, and is known all over Canada as The Halifax Chronicle. In this he began to set forth his ideas on the evils of the day, the chief of them being the irresponsible system of Government which then prevailed. Between issues of the paper he traveled about the country on foot, coming into contact with people of every condition and shade of opinion, and thus broadened and strengthened his own growing convictions.

Howe Was His Own Lawyer.

Opposed as he was to the ruling order, it was not long before the young journalist placed himself within the reach of the law, which was administered then chiefly in defence of the favored classes. He started an agitation about the maladministration of Halifax affairs by the King's officers, and was promptly arrested and indicted for criminal libel. To defend him he appealed in vain to several lawyers, all of whom were afraid to take his side against the Governor and his clique. So Howe prepared his own defence, and although quite unaccustomed to the art, he pleaded so well that he was acquitted. The unusual proceeding and its happy result made a deep impression on public opinion, and Howe, on his release, found himself a popular hero, and the recipient of a handsome testimonial. The Governor and his party were strongly antagonistic to Howe, and this hostility was increased by another incident in which the young reformer figured prominently. At a fire in the garrison library, Col. Cathcart handled somewhat roughly the exhausted volunteer fireman named Rigby. The incident was taken up in the Nova Scotian, and an anonymous correspondent bitterly attacked Cathcart. For refusing to publish the name of this writer, Howe was threatened and persecuted, but remained silent, and the ultimate victory was his.

Howe Fights a Duel.

In 1836 he entered the Assembly, and at once attacked the "Star Chamber" secrecy with which much of the business was transacted. As a result, the old ring was broken up, and Howe credited with another victory. A fiery and sarcastic speaker in his championship of responsible government, he offended Sir Brenden Haliburton, son of the Chief Justice, who has gained immortality as "Sam Slick." A duel was the result. Haliburton fired, but missed, while Howe discharged his weapon in the air. Not long after he was challenged by Sir Rupert D'George, but refused the meeting, saying that he did not intend to become a target for everyone who believed he had a complaint against him. A year or two later he became President of the Legislative Assembly, and entered a coalition Government, but resigned because he could not agree with Lord Falkland. In 1847 he triumphed at the head of his party, and thus we may conclude the account of those legislative services which solely concerned Nova Scotia.

At First Opposed Confederation.

His strong opposition to Mr. Tupper's Nova Scotian campaign in favor of Confederation is well known, and requires little comment. In the

THE INDIAN SUMMER.

How It Was Supposed to Originate and Its Various Names.

Formerly the smokiness and the somewhat greater degree of warmth and other characteristics of "Indian summer" were thought to be caused by mountain fires or the burning of fallen leaves. Scientists have now proved, however, that the haze and increased warmth are due to the annual formation of what has been called the "aerial gulf stream," or "vapor plane." This high current generated in equatorial seas by ascending masses of vapor-charged air flows northward through the upper atmosphere, oversweeps the southern and gulf states and descends toward the earth or ocean as it approaches New England and Canada on its journey toward the Polar circle. In the afternoon and night, when the earth throws off the heat received during the day, especially in the autumn weeks when the temperature is declining and the capacity of the air to receive and hold moisture is on the decrease, the presence of this mantle arrests radiation. Covering the remaining vegetation and harvest with a shield, it protracts the grain ripening period to meet the necessities of the higher latitudes.

It has been shown that the first recorded appearance of that term "Indian summer" was in 1794. It seems to have been well known and recognized at that time. In New England it was supposed that the term came from the prevalence of the southwest winds, which the Indians thought were sent as a mark of favor by their peculiar deity, Coutanowolt. However, in many parts of the United States it was the Indians' special hunting season. Among the Indians of the Northwest it was the period between the gathering and storing of summer supplies and the selection of winter quarters in the haunts of the large game. Hence it was the period of migration. The term "Indian summer" has been adopted by English speaking people throughout the world. The season is well defined in England. In the old world as well as the new it is characterized by dry fogs, a glowing sky, absence of heavy rain and mild temperature.

In England its early name was "All Hallow's summer," in Wales and Belgium it is known as "St. Michael's summer." Indian summer is especially noticeable in the far northwest of this continent. In Vancouver and other portions of British America there is a second growth of verdure lasting until after Christmas. From the northern States of the Union it extends north to the Arctic circle.

HIS FAVORITE POSE.

The riddle, man, I try to read,
And I succeed quite well indeed,
But one thing makes me guess again—
No light from any point is shed—
On why it is my fellow men
Sit with their feet above their head.

Some think it is a barking back
To days when on the forest track
The monkey held his legs aloft,
Perhaps in whimsical conceit,
Or, maybe, when his corns were soft,
Walked on his hands to rest his feet.

Whate'er the cause may seem to be
To man or monkey up a tree,
I only know it is the case
That man from care may get release
When work is done if he can place
His pedals on the mantelpiece.

The downy and inviting couch
Can hardly soften down his grouch,
But when the working day has fled,
And business only is a blur,
Then, with his feet above his head,
He'll sit around and almost purr.

His Sad Ending.

The top of the wireless telegraphy tower at St. Louis is a favorite place for sightseers, and, while they gaze in admiration at the picture of the fair spread before them, employees of the company like to have fun with the visitors and to throw in a few horrors not down on the programme.

"Is the man going to jump off today, Bill?" asks one innocently, as though jumping off were a part of the regular programme.

The crowd starts back in amazement. Finally one young lady recovers her breath and, looking timidly at the ground far below, asks, "Does a man really jump off?"

Bill ignores her question, but to his fellow employes replies, "No; since the accident last week they haven't found a man to make the jump."

Everybody wants to know about the accident, and Bill explains, "The pneumatic boots that they use to break the force of the fall were pumped too full of air, so when he struck the ground he bounded back and kept bounding and was unable to stop."

"And how did they finally rescue him?" asks the horror stricken young lady.

"They didn't," says Bill. "He kept bounding and bounding, and finally they had to shoot him to keep him from starving to death."

Then It Was a Cinch.

He wanted a third party.
He thought it was but right;
That it would save the pollen
From bookies raw and rough—
Except when he was courting,
Then two was quite enough.

How the Wedding Began.

"Have you any acquaintance with him?"

"Just a nodding one."

"Met in a sleeping car, I presume."

D. DERBYSHIRE, PRESIDENT

Ontario's System of Cream Gathering Discussed—Increase in Dairy Industry in Ten Years Shown By New Dairy Commissioner, Prof. J. A. Ruddick—Prof. Grisdale's Address On Bacon Production.

Brockville, Jan. 7.—The closing session of the Dairymen's Convention was held yesterday morning. The first speaker was J. W. Mitchell, principal of the Kingston Dairy School, who confined himself to topics of a scientific and technical nature. The merits and defects of the system of cream gathering in vogue in Ontario was taken principally as a text. Professor Dean thought the adoption of the system unwise. To make good butter the milk must be delivered in sweet condition.

The following officers were then elected: President, D. Derbyshire, M.P.-elect; first vice-president, J. R. Dargavel, Elgin; second vice-president, G. G. Publow, Kingston; third vice-president, L. L. Gallagher, Wilton; fourth vice-president, J. H. Singleton, Newboro.

Directors: Division No. 1—E. Kidd, M.P., North Gower; No. 2, William Eager, Morrisburg; No. 3, L. Patton, Brockville; No. 4, J. Whitton, Williams Corners; No. 5, T. B. Carlow, Warkworth; No. 6, H. Glendenning, Manilla.

Honorary Director, Jas. Anderson, Mountain View.

New Dairy Commissioner.

Prof. J. A. Ruddick, the new dairy commissioner, in an interesting address showed the increase in the dairy industry of Canada in the ten years comencing 1890 to 1900. The total value in 1890 was $10,699,879, divided as follows: Ontario, $7,569,388; Quebec, $2,918,527; Prince Edward Island, $8,448; Nova Scotia, $47,675; New Brunswick, $29,152; Manitoba, $103,887; Northwest Territories, $17,822; British Columbia, $3,580.

The outuut of 1900 totalled $29,632,402 as follows: Ontario, $14,968,922; Quebec, $12,874,377; Prince Edward Island, $567,802; Nova Scotia, $127,077; New Brunswick, $245,695; Manitoba, $416,272; Northwest Territories, $156,637; British Columbia, $105,690.

This shows an increase in Canada in ten years of $18,764,523. In 1890 there were 1,565 cheese factories and 170 creameries; in 1900 2,398 cheese factories and 629 creameries, and 554 combination cheese and butter factories.

Bacon Productions.

Prof. Grisdale of Ottawa, discussed the sister industries, dairying and bacon productions, and stated that Eastern Ontario had not yet taken the place it should in producing bacon for the reason that the farmers do not apply the valuable by-products of the dairy in cultivating the production of bacon.

G. A. Putnam, who followed, spoke relative to the requirements for the production of marketable bacon.

On motion of Prof. Publow, seconded by J. H. Singleton, a resolution was passed recommending all cheese manufacturers to cool milk to a temperature of 65 degrees in preference to depending solely on the use of the aerator.

The concluding address of the convention was delivered by Dr. Stark of Finch, with regard to the question of freight transportation, and suggested that dairymen should hold public meetings to protest against the arbitrary raising of rates on dairy products, and to make an effort to have both freight and passenger rates adjusted at a fair and equitable hearing.

A MANITOBAN'S SUICIDE.

Farmer Worth $25,000 Shoots Himself in a Winnipeg Hotel.

Winnipeg, Jan. 7.—J. Barry, who committed suicide in the Palace Hotel yesterday morning by shooting himself with a 44-calibre revolver, was a prosperous farmer, and the papers found in his possession would indicate that he was worth about $25,000. He left a note requesting that his body be shipped to Brymner, Ont., his former home, and this will be done. No inquest will be held, as a deliberate suicide was apparent. He had quarreled with his wife recently.

Aged Tramp Tries to End His Life.

London, Jan. 7.—What was apparently a deliberate attempt at suicide occurred yesterday morning about 9 o'clock, near the Cove bridge. An old man, who gives his name as James Ryan, plunged into the water on the north side of the river, but crawled out again. He wore all his clothing and was immersed from head to foot. Dripping wet he went to the house of Mrs. Smith, who lives near-by, who passed him on to another neighbor. Her warm blankets were wrapped around him and the ambulance telephoned for. Ryan was taken to Victoria Hospital, where he is recovering from his voluntary dip. He is about 70 years of age.

Cleared River of Ice.

Quebec, Jan. 7.—In eight hours Thursday the powerful ice-breaking steamer Montcalm cleared the St. Lawrence of packed ice varying from 8 to 15 feet in thickness for a distance of about two miles, extending from St. Romauld to a point about a mile west of Quebec bridge.

Sir Percy's Position.

London, Jan. 7.—(C. A. P.)—Sir Percy Girouard has been appointed staff officer to the commanding officer of the eastern district.

Nervous, Sick Headache.

Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for a long time with headaches, which would come on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. I tried headache powders and quiet cures, which did no good. About eight months ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I have not been troubled with headache since."

Red and blue, the old colors of Paris, linked by Lafayette with Henry VI.'s royal white, made the tricolor. A man's dress showed his party. Aztec Bellows.

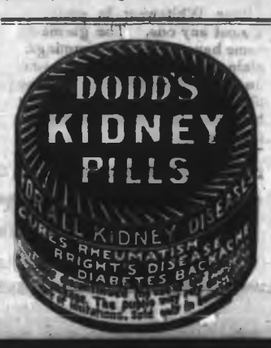
The Aztecs operated bellows for the forges in the old Mexican copper mines by opening them with the hands and pushing them together with the feet.



FIERCE FIGHT WITH HERERos.

Part of New Year's Day Was Spent in a Struggle.

Berlin, Jan. 7.—Four companies of German infantry, one of cavalry and half a battery of artillery, in German Southwest Africa, spent part of New Years Day in a fierce fight with insurgent Hereros that ended in a bayonet charge through the undergrowth, and the rout of the natives. Lieutenant-General Von Trotha in telegraphing the news did not give the number of killed or wounded on either side, but says the natives lost heavily.

Loyalty Not Bought.

London, Jan. 7.—(C.A.P.)—Referring to the statement of the agent-general for South Australia, that if England did not enter into a preferential arrangement, Australia would seek a commercial treaty with some other power, Right Hon. G. H. Reid, Premier of Australia, said the loyalty of Australia was something much higher than any bargaining transaction. It was inconceivable that the commonwealth would ever make a commercial treaty with any power other than England, and thus be oblivious to the fact that Great Britain keeps her ports open to Australian products.

France and Morocco Agree.

Washington, Jan. 7.—France and Morocco have settled recent misunderstanding, and the French Minister at Tangier is proceeding to the court of the Sultan for an audience.

Sues For $41,000.

Ottawa, Jan. 7.—Through her Ottawa solicitors, the widow and children of the late Simon Howard of Eganville, have entered an action against the W. R. Brock Company, Limited, of Toronto, to recover the sum of $41,000. The plaintiff, Mrs. Howard, claims that this amount was loaned to Brock & Co. by her late husband. She also demands an account of all dealings between the late Mr. Howard and the company. The case promises to be a very interesting one, and will probably be heard at the January sittings of the assizes, which open Monday next.

Montreal, Jan. 7.—The Royal Mail Steam Packet Company of Southampton, England, have decided to tender for the carrying of the Canadian mails between Canada and the West Indies. A representative of the company held a lengthy interview with Sir Richard Cartwright recently, when all particulars as to what the company is prepared to give to the Canadian Government were discussed. It is believed that the Elder-Dempster Steamship Company will also tender for this contract.

Toronto's 1904 Fire Loss.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—The annual report of the Fire Department, which will be presented by Chief Thompson to the Fire and Light Committee today, will contain a statement of the biggest loss by fire that the city has sustained in its history. The figures as compiled by Secretary McGowan and Statistician Reddick of the department will set forth an approximate loss of $10,500,000, which amount has never been at all approached in any previous year.

Insensible On the Roadway.

He died within a few hours and nothing is known as yet as to how the accident happened. He leaves a widow and several children.

Hugh Blain is North Toronto.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—About 200 delegates to the North Toronto Liberal convention in St. Paul's Hall last night selected Hugh Blain of the firm of Eby, Blain & Co., to oppose Dr. Beattie Nesbitt on Jan. 25. The selection was a unanimous one. Complimentary nominations were tendered to T. C. Robinette, K.C., J. G. Ramsden, Stapleton Caldecott, Elias Rogers and F. S. Spence.

SUFFERED MANY YEARS WITH A COMPLICATION OF FEMALE DISEASES.

Two Robust Women Who Owe Their Restored Health and Usefulness to Pe-ru-na.

MRS. J. E. FINN, 82 East High St., Buffalo, N., Y., writes:
The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen: "A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete change and rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look around for other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Finn.

Pelvic catarrh is a phrase coined by Dr. Hartman, covering all that large class of diseases that used to be known as female weakness. The lower portion of the abdomen is called by anatomists the pelvis. The organs contained in this portion of the body are known as the pelvic organs. There are several of them, very delicate and very subject to catarrh. Few women escape entirely catarrh of these organs. While each case presents some minor difference as to detail, they are all in reality alike. Peruna does not relieve these cases by temporarily mitigating some symptom, but by a removal of the cause. Many a woman can testify that local treatment does not permanently cure. A large multitude of women are constantly going from doctor to doctor to receive local treatment, with little or no result.

Thankful Women Who Have Been Cured by Dr. Hartman's Free Treatment.

Miss Ruth Emerson, 72 Sycamore St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for two years with irregular and painful menstruation, and Peruna cured me within six weeks. I cannot tell you how grateful I feel. Any agency which brings health and strength to the afflicted is always a welcome friend, and to-day the market is so filled with useless and injurious medicines that it is a pleasure to know of so reliable a remedy as you place before the public."

Miss Ruth Emerson.

Imitations of Pe-ru-na.

Peruna has come to be recognised as the greatest remedy for catarrh in the world. At first competitors tried to deny this and insisted that their remedies were just as good. This was found to be impossible, however, and now imitations are springing up everywhere.

To successfully palm off an imitation of Peruna even for a short time is sure to be a money-making scheme, but no one who has ever taken Peruna can be fooled on these imitations. No conscientious druggist would sell one of them. Every purchaser should look carefully at each package of Peruna he buys, to be sure that he is getting only genuine Peruna.

NEW MEAT MERCHANTS

Messrs. Tenice Guerin & Co. Purchase Goselin's Meat Business.

A transfer of business has taken place by which the well known meat market of Goselin Bros., 243 George street, has been purchased by Messrs. Tenace Guerin and W. R. Tetley. SNOW PLOUGHING Apparent Defects of Present So-called a "System".

It seems to be a gratuitous compliment to call the present way of muddling snow ploughing, a system. It is no system judged by results, but a catch-as-catch-can wrestle with the snowy element.

The streets this morning were in an impossible and impassable condition. The snow-fall began yesterday afternoon and no snow plough — so called — appeared — on some of the streets, at least, till this morning, with the result that the so called snow plough when it passed along the streets, rode over the snow like a snowshoe, and left the streets in much the same condition as they were before its passage. An ex-Mayor says the snow ploughs should have been out from six to ten last night, and that if this had been done there would have been less snow to remove this morning and the results would have been better. As the streets were and are to-day the present system—if entire lack of headwork can be called a system—is sadly defective. If ratepayers are required to pay for having the walks cleared, they should be deemed, and not penalise citizens by payang for work that is not done—at least satisfactorily.

"I DON'T CARE FOR THE LORD"

Mrs. Goodfellow's Position in Regard to her Sons Death.

Christian Scientists May be Charged With Manslaughter.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—An inquest upon the remains of Wallace H. Goodfellow was begun at J. D. McGill's undertaking rooms yesterday afternoon by Coroner J. M. Cotton and a jury. After taking the evidence of Mrs. Hannah Taylor, mother-in-law of deceased, an adjournment was made to No. 3 police station on Thursday next at 8 p. m. In the course of her evidence Mrs. Taylor swore

His mother said that a Toronto Christian Scientist, had taken the case in hand, and was treating it. She spoke to him about medicine and left saying: "Remember if anything happens Wallace Goodfellow I will push it to the uttermost." Dr. Riordan had said that the case was one of typhoid, and she warned both the mother and the Scientist that they were doing wrong. Mrs. Goodfellow, sr., said: "I don't care for the law. Christ's people were punished before, and I don't care a bit." She warned both of them that she would hold them responsible.

The young widow said she would prefer to give her evidence at the adjourned inquest on Thursday night.

T. C. Robinette, K.C., has been retained by Mrs. Goodfellow, mother of Wallace, as there is a possibility of the Christian Scientists who had the case in hand being charged with manslaughter. He was not present at the inquest yesterday.

FURTHER PARTICULARS OF DREADFUL DEED

What Rochester Papers Say, of Wm Crowley's Suicide.

Driven mad by liquor and the attention shown his wife by others, William Crowley, a shoemaker, 34 years of age, attempted the perpetration of a double crime a few minutes after 5.30 o'clock this morning when he forced his wife on her knees in the house, 82 North Fitzhugh street, and, with one hand grasping her throat, tried to force her to swallow a cupful of carbolic acid. Failing to accomplish this end he dashed the contents of the cup against the shrieking woman's face. Then, as the room door was burst open by lodgers, Crowley snatched up a bottle from which he had poured the stuff into the cup, and drained the contents until he fell to the floor.

Emergency calls for ambulances were sent to the City and Homeopathic hospitals. Crowley, who was unconscious by the time the two ambulances reached the house, was hurried to the City Hospital where he died about 6 o'clock. Coroner Kilip was notified and he had the body taken to the undertaking rooms of Charles E. Strausbem, 253 North trifling character. Mrs. Crowley had her husband arrested on Sept. 29th for assault in the third degree. They were then living at 76 North Fitzhugh street, next to the house in which the tragedy occurred. Crowley when arraigned in the police court, said he had never been arrested before, and sentence was suspended. The couple patched up their differences. They moved to the house at 82 about two weeks ago. The house is one of two purchased a year ago by the post office department, and is adjacent to Edward F. Higgins' livery stables.

Tragic occurrences have brought dwellings before the public eye in former years. It was in the house, 76 North Fitzhugh street, that a Norwegian named Peterson, after dressing himself in his best clothes, sat down in the parlour before a mirror one night about ten years ago, and while the boarders were conversing drew a revolver from his pocket and sent a bullet crashing through his brain, dying almost instantly.

The life of Mrs. Crowley was saved only through the prompt action taken by lodgers who hurried to her rescue. Among them was Thomas Huff and Geo. Faulkner. Huff heard the trouble and aroused other men in the house, and they forced their way into the room just after Crowley dashed the acid against his street

Mrs. Crowley was suffering intense pain. Her face is severely burned and the flesh on her left shoulder, arm and hand is blistered. The contents of the cup struck the woman full in the face about on a line with the nose, but she closed her eyes and probably thereby saved her sight. The flesh around her eyes is severely burned, but the physicians do not think the sight will be affected. She made a brief statement at the hospital, in which she said that her husband had tried to force her to swallow the acid.

Mrs. Crowley is 26 years old and rather attractive in appearance. Crowley came to Rochester about two years ago from Brockton, Mass. He was employed as a shoe cutter in a factory in the Bolton building, 161 North Water street. Mrs. Crowley was Minnie Wilder before her marriage to Crowley a year ago last September, up to which time she was employed as a cook in a restaurant.

The couple have had frequent quarrels since their marriage, but all, with one exception, have been of a wife's face. While they were carrying the woman from the room Crowley drank the poison.

Mrs. S. B. Wilder, Mrs. Crowley's mother, lives at 104 Main street west, and she was to have appeared at the police court this morning to press a charge of annoyance against Anna Masarino, a young girl. Mrs. Wilder did not appear and the girl was discharged. Mrs. Wilder and her daughter came to Rochester a few years ago from Canada.

HENRY SYER FOUND STABBED

Henry Syer, of Town, Stabbed and Robbed in Lindsay.

Shadowed from the Train and Savagely Assaulted.

Lindsay, Jan. 7.—At 9 o'clock yesterday morning a man named Henry Syers was found lying in an open shed at the Central House, benumbed with cold and liberally bathed in blood that flowed from a nasty two-inch wound on the inside of his thigh, near the main artery of the leg. Syers says that he came to town from Peterborough on the 9.45 train Thursday night, and that when walking from the station he was accosted by a stranger who persisted in walking with him. He turned into the hotel yard to evade the stranger, who followed him, stabbed him, and robbed him of $30. Syers was taken to the home of his son in town. There is no clue to his assailant's identity.

Mr. Syer is a respected citizen of this town, who lives in the north end with a wife and daughter.

PETERBOROS' WON A SPLENDID VICTORY

Defeated Port Perry in a Good Good Game of Hockey Last Evening by 21-8.

First Half was Fairly Even but Locals Made a Runaway Race in Second Period.

Team Showed up in Good Form and the Chances look good—How it Happened.

The Peterborough hockey team took their first slide towards the championship of the district last night, when they trimmed Port Perry good and sound to the merry tune of 21—7. As the score would indicate it was no uncertain victory, and the supporters of the white and blue were much pleased with the fine showing of the boys. They kept improving as the game progressed, and were going faster than ever at the close. It was an auspicious opening of the district series of games, and more such victories, it is hoped, will be recorded during the next two months.

A STRONG TEAM.

The crowd was hardly as large as is usually the case in senior games, but the inclemency of the weather, and the impression which seemed to prevail amongst some people that this year's team was not a strong one, and would not be long in the running, may have kept some away. If any who saw last night's game had any fears as to the quality of the team, these ideas were changed materially before the game was over, and everyone was agreed that the team which puts the locals out of the running will be a fast bunch, which will be heard of near the finals.

A GOOD GAME.

The ice could not have been more conducive to fast hockey, and fast hockey it was, especially in the second half. The play lagged a little in spots, but for the opening game, the players, especially the winners, stood the pace in remarkable fashion, the locals showing up in much better form in the second period. The game was a good exhibition of hockey, and was free from rough play. Only five players were ruled off, and their offences were of a minor nature. The combination work of both teams was good, while individually there were many star players. It was an interesting contest to witness, and the crowd enjoyed it thoroughly and, as the score would indicate, had many opportunities to display their vocal powers to advantage.

PLAYED WELL TOGETHER.

The Peterboroughs showed up in a highly satisfactory manner, and played some splendid hockey. The forward line showed especially good form, and as the game progressed, worked together like a well-oiled piece of machinery, and time after time two or three players would dash down the ice and score, after some very pretty and equally effective combination play. Individually the players shone, but it was the team work which told in the scoring, and that is what will win the games for the boys this year. The defence played a good speedy game, and though they made some mistakes, at times, as a rule used good judgment and checked well.

THE LOCAL SEPTETTE.

Wasson, in goal, had all kinds of shots to pick out, and he generally got in the way of those that were at all stoppable. He did effective work in clearing about the goal, and even ventured fully three-fourths the length of the ice with the puck on one occasion, and a goal resulted from his excursion. Glover jumped into the game with but little practice, and played an effective game. He checked hard, using his body to advantage, and lifted well. He frequently broke away for a good run down the ice. Crowley, at cover point, played a most useful game, checking well, and relieving smartly. He assisted the forwards by some nice rushes, and was always in his place when needed. All were stars on the forward line. Graham got out of bed to play the game, he having been on the sick list for some days. Despite this fact, however, he played a hard game, and held his check in good style. He was forced to retire early in the second half. Captain Cavanah at rover, played a fine game. His playing combines weight, speed, good stick handling ability and deadly shooting powers, which make him one of the best players in the business. His shooting caused the visiting defence all kinds of wonderment and he notched several of the goals. "Happy" Morgan was another who was on the sick list this week, but no one would have known it last night. He put up a brilliant game at centre, making many a zig-zag dash through the defence for a score, his shooting being superb. Parnell put up one of the best games he has ever played in Peterborough, and was a star performer. Especially in the second half did he do grand work, his stick handling and dodging being very effective, while he shot in fine shape. He played a most useful game throughout, and, in fact, this could be said of all the players. The men were playing for the glory of the team, and were always ready to pass the puck when the occasion presented itself. Some of the prettiest combination playing that has yet been seen on the Brock street rink, was exhibited in the second half of the game last night.

THE VISITORS.

Port Perry presented a fast and fairly well balanced team. They held the locals down fairly well in the first half of the game, but were seldom in the hunt in the second period. Vansickle in goal, is a good player, and made some sensational stops. Carnegie and Powers checked well, especially the latter. Denison at rover had speed, and was a hard man to stop when he got going. Stewart at right wing played a fine game also. The other two, Jamieson and Whittacker, showed up well.

THE LINE-UP.

The teams were:—

Peterborough.		Port Perry.
	Goal.
Wasson		Vansickle
	Point.
Glover		Carnegie
	Cover point.
Crowley		Powers
	Rover.
Cavanah		Denison
	Centre.
Morgan		Jamieson
	Right Wing.
Parnell		Stewart
	Left wing.
Graham		Whittacker

Referee—W. E. Irving, of Lindsay. Goal umpires—H. Lucas and C. Earls.
Timekeepers—W. H. Harris and J. McCabe.
Penalty timekeeper—F. A. Clarke.

FIRST HALF.

The locals were a little late in getting on the ice, it being 8.40 before the bell rang. After a minutes' play Crowley made a run up the side and scored. Score 1—0.

Wasson made a fine stop of Denison's shot. The latter however, went up the ice and passed to Stewart who evened up the score.

Parnell and Morgan went down the ice together, and the latter scored by a pretty shot.

Vansickle made a couple of fine stops. The play went from end to end. Denison made a pretty rush and passed to Stewart who evened up the score again.

Both goal tenders made fine stops. Wasson went half way up the ice with the rubber. Parnell passed to Morgan who made the score 3—2.

Glover and Morgan took the ice up the ice and nearly scored. Stewart intercepted a pass near centre and dodged the defence for a score.

Jamieson was ruled off for tripping. Cavanah made a long rush but Vansickle stopped the shot. Morgan was on the spot, however, and made the score 4—3.

Morgan was put off for two minutes. Graham missed an easy chance and things were interesting around Port Perry's goal. Crowley and Parnell went down the ice but the former's shot went wide. Finally Cavanah went nearly the length of the ice and tallied. Score 5—3.

Parnell was given a rest. Morgan and Cavanah combined for a nice rush but the shot was stopped. Denison scored from a neat side shot.

The play slowed up for a time. Stewart got right through the defence but Wasson spoiled the shot and Cavanah went down the ice and passed to Morgan who scored.

A minute later Graham went went down the side and passed to Cavanah who scored. Crowley and Stewart were ruled off just before half time expired.

SECOND HALF.

The locals started right in to score at the start of the half. Parnell got the puck from behind the goal and passed to Morgan and the score was 8—4.

Cavanah made a pretty rush, passed to Morgan, who did likewise to Graham, who scored. Score 9—4.

Cavanah went through the whole defence but missed his shot. Parnell scored from Morgan's neat pass.

Morgan went down with the puck and passed to Parnell whose shot sagged the nets. Score 11—4.

Graham went down the side in fast time and Morgan scored from his pass. It was great work. Score 12—4.

Jamieson found an opening and made the score 12—5. Parnell a minute later passed to Morgan who scored after a nice dodging run.

Denison secured the puck near centre and passed to Stewart who made the score 13—6.

Denison scored a moment later by a long shot and the score was 13—7.

Glover went nearly the length of the ice and passed to Parnell who scored easily. Score 14—7.

Graham had to retire and "Gee" Whittacker went off to even matters. Morgan went down the ice and passed to Cavanah who shot the puck across to Parnell and "Wallie" scored again. Score 15—7.

Crowley was put off for a minute. Parnell made a beautiful rush and passed to Cavanah and the umpire's hand again ascended. Score 16—7.

Powers was put off for tripping. Vansickle went half the way up the ice. Parnell took a long shot and scored again.

Stewart and Denison went up the ice and the former scored. Score 17—8.

Cavanah got through the defence but fell, losing a sure score. A moment later he rushed and passed to Parnell who was equal to the emergency. Score 18—7.

Cavanah again went past several of his opponents and passed to Morgan and the score was 19—8.

Glover sailed up the ice and passed to Morgan who dodged the defence and scored.

Jamieson was hurt and retired with Morgan. Just before time was up Parnell made another nice rush and passed to Cavanah who made the score 21—8.

ON THE SIDE.

21—8.

Lindsay is next.

The scoring division was working in fine shape last night.

Cavanah was the fastest man on the ice.

The boys were in fine shape and stood the pace well.

The Grasshopper Club was at the game and was noticed.

Parnell played a very pretty, and equally effective game.

Last night's game was a clean one comparatively.

The locals play two games next week, in Lindsay on Monday, and with Lindsay here on Friday.

Referee Irving gave fair satisfaction. He missed some off-sides, but on the whole was impartial.

If the forward line gets going against Lindsay, like they did in the second half last night, there'll be more victories.

Graham was sick when he went on the ice, and played most pluckily under the circumstances.

Both goal tenders took some excursions down the ice. It is a question whether the policy is a wise one.

The goals were scored as follows: Morgan, 6; Parnell, 7; Cavanah, 3; Graham, 2; Crowley, 1.

It seemed rather strange not to see Whitcroft and the two Armstrongs on the ice, but those who filled their shoes filled them well.

Every player on the team is an experienced one. Several of them had signified their intention of retiring long ago, and are in the game purely for the love of the sport, and to uphold the town's good name in hockey circles. They deserve encouragement.

ENTERTAINMENT GOOD SUCCESS

All Saints' Sunday School Annual Concert.

Splendid Programme and Christmas Festivites Last Night.

Though the weather was anything but favourable last evening for a Sunday School entertainment, the attendance at the annual concert in connection with All Saint's School last night was exceptionally large and the affair was from every standpoint a great success. The room was packed, the children and their friends being present in very large numbers. The programme was one of much interest, reflecting much credit upon the youthful performers who acquitted themselves splendidly.

During the evening presentations were made to the scholars for high standing in attendance and conduct during the past year. Two special prizes were given by the Rector, Rev. Wm. Major, for Catechism and general Biblical knowledge. The former prize was won by Olivia Castle and the latter by Fred Dixon.

On Christmas day, at the children's service a collection was taken up for the Sick Children's Hospital, Toronto, the sum of $10.75 being realized. At this service the Rector suggested that any of the children who desired to send any books and toys which they had received at Christmas to the children in the hospital, they might bring them last evening, and he would have them sent. Mr. Major's view was to encourage the scholars in self-denial and it was indeed gratifying last evening to see the large number of presents which the children contributed and the enthusiasm which they displayed in the cause. The children seemed to realize that it was more blessed to give than to receive, and many hearts in the hospital will be gladdened by the generous gifts of the children of All Saint's school.

The programme was one of much interest. The Rector made an excellent chairman and opened the programme with a few remarks in which he made reference to the progress of the school during the past year. He thanked the children for contributing so largely of their gifts and in this connection called upon Mr. F. W. Thomas, travelling secretary of St. Andrew's Brotherhood, for a few remarks.

The programme was as follows:

Carol, "Ring ye Bells" Sunday School
Piano duet, Misses English and Mulholland.
Recitation, ... Freddie Hooper
Solo, ... Gladys Williams
Piano solo, ... Pearl Haskill
Solo, ... Helen Rush
Piano solo, ... Miss Flowers
Recitation ..... Annie Drury
Solo, ... Mr. Colman
Piano solo, ... Mabel Hooper
Recitation ..... Lillie Lightheart
Piano solo ..... T. Williams
Recitation ..... Marius Clementi
Dialogue, "Santa and the Children", the School.

At the conclusion of the very enjoyable programme many of the members of which were encored, the prizes were distributed from the two Christmas trees, every scholar receiving a gift. Mr. Colman made a splendid Santa Claus.

The whole affair was a splendid success, and everyone was much delighted.

ST. JOHN'S SCHOOL CONCERT A SUCCESS

Good Programme given by the School Last Evening.

The annual entertainment in connection with St. John's Sunday school was held last evening, and was in every way a splendid success. There was a very large turnout of the members of the school, and their friends, who heartily enjoyed the evening's proceedings.

During the evening handsome prizes were distributed to the scholars who merited them — three to each class.

Two large Christmas trees stood at the head of the school room and were very attractively decorated with gifts for the scholars, every child receiving a present. Mr. Jas. Bell made a capital Santa Claus and distributed the presents, which were of unusual value for such an occasion.

During the evening, Rev. J. C. Davidson, the rector, presented Mr. J. Butcher, with a beautiful set of gold cuff links, on behalf of the societies of the church in recognition of his services. Mr. T Wallace was also presented with a handsome gift.

Mr. D. Hughes-Charles, the superintendent of the Sunday school, made a capital chairman. The programme was as follows:

Overture ... ... Halpany orchestra
Recitation... ... ...Miss Tate
Cornet solo... ... ...Mr. R. Gliddon
Selection... ... .Halpany orchestra
Spanish dance.. Miss Roy, Miss Wallace, Misses Burnett.
Song... ... ...Miss Edith Lount
Violin solo... ... ...Miss K. Wallace
Recitation... ... ...Miss Tate
Violin solo... ... ...Miss M. Burnett
Song... ... ...Mr. F. A. Lount
Selection... ... .Halpany orchestra

The programme was exceptionally well rendered and was very acceptable indeed. The Halpany orchestra consists of Mrs. Halpany, pianist, Mr. J. Halpany, cornet, and Master Frank Halpany, violinist. This trio forms a splendid combination, and is always well received. The Spanish dance is an attractive number, and was prettily and gracefully executed last night by Miss Roy, Miss Wallace and the Misses Burnett. Miss Tait's recitations were in much favour with the audience and this young lady gives considerable promise as an elocutionist. Miss Edith Lount is a little soloist of considerable merit, who so charmingly sang the character of "Buttercup" in the "Pinafore" presented here by juveniles last year. Mr. Lount and Mr. Gliddon were also in good form last night and were enthusiastically received. The whole affair was very enjoyable in every particular.

The school has greatly increased in membership during the past year, and is making most satisfactory progress.

Superfluous Hair

Removed by the New Principle.

De Miracle

It is better than electricity, because it does not scar or produce a new growth. Better than X-ray, because it does not burn, scar or paralyze the tissues under the skin. Better than depilatories, because it is not poisonous; therefore, it will not cause blood poisoning, or produce eczema, which is so common with depilatories, and does not break off the hair, thereby increasing its growth.

Electrolysis, X-ray or depilatories are offered you on the bare word of the operators and manufacturers. De MIRACLE is not. It is the only method which is indorsed by physicians, surgeons, dermatologists, medical journals and prominent magazines.

CHANGE THE MACHINERY.

Canadian Treaty Making As Seen by Mr. Colquhoun, of the News.

"It seems almost a necessity of the case that whatever our attitude towards Anglo-American diplomacy we must agitate for some sort of a change in the negotiation of treaties in which we are concerned, because the history of treaty-making is full of instances where, largely from ignorance, but sometimes from political necessity, Canadian interests have been sacrificed."

Thus spoke Mr. A. H. U. Colquhoun, managing editor of The News, to the members of the Canadian Club at a recent luncheon. Every seat was occupied, and the innovation of having a member of the club make the speech of the day proved very popular. Mr. Colquhoun spoke on Canadian attitude towards diplomacy as it is exhibited between Great Britain and the United States, premising that Canada's attitude is necessarily determined by the circumstances of each case. There is nothing in constitutional usage to govern the framing of treaties in which colonies desire to have direct interest.

The treaty of peace of 1763, Mr. Colquhoun said, was entrusted to persons totally unfitted for the work. It was said of one of them that he was destitute of truth and honor, which could not be said of British negotiators of treaties, but the same could not be said of their wisdom. Britain's representative on that occasion thought the best way to avoid war was to give the United States everything they asked, from the difficulties caused by which we have not yet recovered. For years thereafter the British Ministers at Washington had not a pleasant time; from time to time new forms were devised to make their lives as miserable as possible. All lived a precarious existence, and the treaties they negotiated were such as could not be accepted now unless we were a conquered country.

Sir Henry Bulwer claimed that the success of the Clayton-Bulwer treaty was due to the fact that he used words in the sense in which the Americans used them, and this treaty had lasted until it was offered up on the altar of Anglo-Saxon alliance. However, it was fair to say of these men that whatever their fate, whether they happened to be recalled, or sent home, the United States permitted them to die a natural death.

Canada entered on the scene in time. The treaty of 1854, negotiated by Lord Elgin and Sir Francis Hincks, was the first in which the negotiations on the British side had the least knowledge of Canada. Lord Elgin exercised all his skill to obtain a reciprocity treaty, and secured a majority of the members of Congress in its favor, despite the pessimistic view of the United States Secretary of State.

Speaking of later efforts to secure a renewal of the reciprocal arrangements, Mr. Colquhoun said:

"The trips which Canadian Ministers of both parties have made to Washington, year after year, since the Elgin Treaty was abrogated, must always be a source of humiliation to the people of this country. The idea that we are absolutely dependent for existence on the United States seems to have seized hold of our public men; it appears to have been the common idea after the abrogation of that treaty that at all hazards we must obtain a renewal of its provisions."

The Halifax award of 1877 was cited as the single triumph we have had from Anglo-American diplomacy, and the payment of the five and a half millions allowed us in that case was largely due to the humorous and tactful references which Lord Dufferin made to the possibility of its payment when speaking in the States.

The last occasion on which Canadian interests were endangered was in the Alaskan boundary dispute, regarding which the club had heard one of the arbitrators, Mr. A. B. Aylesworth, K.C. Many of the highest authorities had declared that the decision was exceedingly satisfactory, that Canada had done well, and might have done worse. "When they take that stand, who am I to disturb the peace and raise any doubts?" said Mr. Colquhoun. "Mr. Goldwin Smith says that if Lord Shelbourne, in 1783, had conceded Nova Scotia and Canada to the United States we would have avoided a long list of troubles—we would not have heard of the Oregon boundary, the Trent affair, the fisheries dispute, and the Alaska boundary trouble. Now that is primarily true. If we had parted with the whole, instead of part of our undoubted rights, these things would have been avoided, but that is not our idea of obtaining terms of peace. (Cheers.) You could hand over all to an antagonist, but we do not do that. We say, instead, that there ought to be some change in the machinery by which treaties are negotiated. This matter affects the highest interests of Canada. While some of us may be Imperialistic, we must consider it from the standpoint primarily of Canada. I respect the man who hopes we shall some day be a nation, though I am myself a man who does not favor putting the British constitution in the melting-pot. I think we can work out treaty making machinery by a happy mean between Imperial Federation and complete severance. I cannot believe that our people will break away from all we have inherited from the past. It is not alone the military and naval prowess of England, but the fact that for a thousand years she has stood for true liberty. These are things we cannot lightly part with. While the self-governing rights of Canada cannot be impaired, still we must feel that there is an absolute equality among all the subjects of the King, and I have no doubt we shall find some solution of the matter of treaties."

Amusements In Vogue Among Women, Men and Boys.

In a letter to a friend in Washington Mrs. Annie Pike Smith, formerly of Washington, but now with her husband, Captain A. T. Smith, U. S. A., at Camp Jossman, Iloilo, Philippine Islands, writes thus concerning the native sports, says the Washington Star:

"Among the women rope jumping is a pastime. Is this to be wondered at in a country noted for its hemp? They make a game of it. To each woman, including those that turn the rope, is given the name of a flower or tree. The one that acts as leader calls out the name, and the proper one takes her turn. Should the 'flower name' of one of the girls turning be called, then there is a great scramble, while another is taking her place, and she makes her jump. It reminded me of the noisy game called fruit basket which I played in my childhood on the streets of Washington.

"Among the boys—and older men, too—a favorite sport is the tossing of a hollow ball made of bahooka, a species of bamboo. They toss this ball from one to another, never touching it with their hands, but using only the muscles of the back, hips and legs. It is really wonderful how long they can keep it flying back and forth in the air. The youngsters enjoy the regular old game of hopscotch. A plot oblong in shape is laid out with a circle divided into equal spaces. The game is to hop on one foot from one division to the others, at the same time kicking a stone. But cockfighting reigns supreme. Almost any day you may see a crowd of small muchachos in a circle watching a fight on which a few pesos have been hazarded. These fights are generally without the gaffs. How the Filipino loves his munuco!

"It has been said that in case of a fire the bird is cared for first, after that the family—often too late. They caress the birds as we should a dear pet dog."

Supply of Oxygen For Firemen.

An experiment has recently been made in Paris with an ingenious apparatus, invented by M. Guglielminetti and M. Draeger, by means of which it is possible to remain without fear of asphyxia in places where it would otherwise be impossible to breathe. The apparatus is automatic—that is, it has no connection with the air outside.

It is composed of a tube containing a provision of oxygen sufficient to last a man for breathing purposes for more than an hour and a helmet of aluminium fitting the head exactly by means of a pneumatic pad. The oxygen is supplied automatically to the man's mouth and the air exhaled is received in a compressible bag.

It passes through a regenerator with granulated caustic potash, which absorbs all the carbonic acid. A fireman, provided with this apparatus, went down into a cellar in which piles of damp straw had been lighted, and although there was suffocating smoke from this he remained in it for nearly three-quarters of an hour without being at all inconvenienced by it.—English World's Work.

A Disappointed Dog.

Colonel William F. Cody (Buffalo Bill) tells of a dog that travels with his shows that is the most ill tempered beast in the world. He has good reasons for his ugliness, according to what the narrator says: "He sleeps in the ticket wagon. Now, every night before he is shut up the ticket seller gives him a bone, which he promptly conceals in a hole dug beneath the wagon. Then he goes to bed, and, failing to realise that almost every night his house is shifted over the road, he can't understand why the morning's search for the bone is futile. Then he's mad. He thinks some one has stolen it, and it isn't safe to go near him for several hours. Sometimes we stop several days in a place, and then, of course, he finds the bone, and it's just enough incentive to keep him digging holes. He's planted bones all over this country and the greater part of Europe and has lost ninety-nine out of every hundred."

Song in Lectures.

One of the most popular priests in Canada is Father O'Gorman of Gananoque. His reverence is a keen judge of horses and dogs, never failing to have at least one Irish setter at every bench show in New York City. At the recent exhibition there his entry won the first prize, on hearing of which a friend said to him: "I suppose they will make you a bishop now." Father O'Gorman, who is not at all averse to a joke on himself, answered readily:

"My dear sir, if I knew as much about theology as I do about Irish setters I'd be a cardinal this minute."—Ottawa Journal.

The Fakers Catch Them.

To the student of man it is an interesting sight to watch the crowds gather around the man who is selling a patent needle threader and hang on his words as though he were a silver tongued orator talking for their favorite candidate.

With the wonders of the world gathered, collected at an immense expense and tastily displayed for their benefit, world's fair visitors pause transfixed as though hypnotized by the sight of a thousand dollar bill and perhaps before they go spend a quarter for a useless article they could buy at home for a dime.

For them the world's greatest paintings may hang in solitude, the monster engines that run the world's wheels of industry may hum unnoticed, the treasures of science and research may keep the covers on their boxes. The man with the patent potato parer that they have seen at county fairs ever since they can remember has their eye, and everything else is off.

But he was always in the swim,
For somehow he'd acquired the trick

RETURNS BY TELEPHONE.

Election Results Known This Year Earlier Than Ever Before.

There never was a presidential election when the people at large knew so well "how things were going" on election night and had positive information of the final results so early as this year. The reason was simply that the news was distributed more promptly and more widely than ever before, and this was made possible by the remarkable extension of the telephone system within even the last four years.

Heretofore he who wanted early information or found in watching the ebb and flow of the great tide of ballots exciting interest must go to the bulletin boards of the newspapers. This year, however, preparations were begun weeks in advance that every telephone subscriber in the Bell system might know the news, if he cared to, as soon as the national committeeman or the political editor. Special wires were reserved on the trunk lines of the long distance service connecting the large cities which were made distributing points from which the word was carried on to town and village and farmhouse wherever the "speaking wire" ran.

There is always heavy pressure on the telephone wires on election night anyway. Politicians and committeemen, who nowadays make extensive use of the telephone in campaigning, keep in touch with all the strategic points "along the line," getting early and frequent reports from doubtful districts and sometimes issuing their "statements" and comments on the results by means of it. Special arrangements were made for President Roosevelt and Judge Parker to get the news by wire, and in almost every state in the Union similar facilities were furnished for governors, congressmen and party managers.

Kaiser Wilhelm's Cooks.

Feeding the German emperor is no light task. Despite all that is said about the kaiser's Spartan habits there are few monarchs who keep more elaborate tables. He has four chefs—Schiledenstucker, a German; Harding, an Englishman; an Italian and a Frenchman—so that he can have his meals for the day served in the style of whatever nation he may happen to fancy. Each of these chefs has his staff of assistants, while in addition there is an individual who may safely be described as "sausage maker to the kaiser." His majesty is very fond of the huge white frankfurter sausage, and has a supply of them made fresh every day in his own kitchen. When engaged in maneuvering his army on a big field day these frankfurters and bread, washed down with lager beer, invariably form the kaiser's luncheon. In addition to all these cooks there is a special staff to prepare meals for the younger of the princes and the princess, who are not allowed to partake of the rich dishes the elder members of the family indulge in.—Stray Stories.

Napoleon's Hats.

The seven authentic Napoleonic hats now in existence are all of different dimensions. Prince Victor Napoleon, Prince Louis Napoleon and the Empress Eugenie each have one. A fourth is owned by Armand Dumaresco, a Parisian painter. Another figures in Mme. Tussaud's museum in London beside the guillotine which served to decapitate Louis XVI. and Marie Antoinette. The sixth hat of Napoleon was once the property of Meissonier, the military painter, and, after having served as the model in all of that artist's pictures of the emperor, was given by Charles Meissonier, the painter's son, to the Museum of the Army at the Invalides, where Napoleon was buried. The seventh hat of Napoleon is that which he wore at Waterloo, and which is now going to the Conde museum at Chantilly, the magnificent castle and domain left by the late Duc d'Aumale, lineal descendant of Conde, to the Institute of France as a national monument to commemorate his illustrious ancestor.—New York Tribune.

The Telephone Ear.

A peculiar development of the sense of hearing has been discovered as being the result of the use of the telephone. Most people when using the instrument hold the receiver to the left ear because it comes more natural to adjust the mouthpiece with the right hand. So it happens that from an extensive use of the telephone the hearing of the left ear is sharpened at the expense of the right. In the majority of cases the difference between the two is not very great, but in some persons it is alarmingly so. The sensitive nerves are so irritated by the sound coming directly on them and in a tone which is strange that it sets up a reaction which has a cumulative effect and upsets them.

Typewritten Treaty of Peace.

Probably the first treaty of peace to be typewritten is the South African peace document. The signatures of the Boer leaders form an interesting part of it. They are all in different styles. Louis Botha's is described as being in a fine hand, and, though the others are somewhat rougher, Delarey's is the roughest of all. He has spelled his name split into three syllables, De la Rey. Christian De Wet is also spelled with a small "d."

The Future of the South.

"If cotton brings about 10 cents for the next ten years," said a thoughtful business man in North Carolina the other day, "the south will again become, as it was before the war, the most prosperous section of our country. I know of no industry in the world which will yield larger returns in proportion to the capital and the intelligence required than cotton growing at 10 cents per pound."—World's Work.

The Infusoria.

The infusoria are minute animalcules, usually microscopic, but sometimes large enough to be seen by the naked eye, or, say, one one-hundredth of an inch in length. They flourish and fruitfully most rapidly in putrid water, a pint of that liquid often containing a colony of infusoria exceeding in number the entire human population of the

THE ELDER TREE.

In Days Long Gone by It Was Held In Disrepute.

In olden days to be crowned with elder was a disgrace. In an old play we read, "Laurel for a garland and elder for disgrace." This may have been due to the story which Shakespeare has noticed that Judas hanged himself upon an elder tree:

Well follow'd: Judas was hanged on an elder.—"Love's Labour's Lost."

This legend was generally accepted. Ben Jonson in "Every Man Out of His Humour" has, "He shall be your Judas, and you shall be his elder tree to hang on," and Nixon in his "Strange Footsteps," "Our gardens will prosper the better when they have in them not one of those elders whereupon so many covetous Judases hang themselves."

Shakespeare also makes it an emblem of grief:

Grow patience
And let the stinking elder, grief, untwine
His perishing root with the increasing vine.—"Cymbeline."

Mrs. Dunleigh seemed so much excited over what had happened that she took no notice of Buckley nor seemed to remark on the oddity of his sudden appearance at such an opportune moment. The coachman unhitched the horses from the carriage and led them away, leaving George in the center of the cluster of ladies. Kitty Cosby introduced him to Mrs. Dunleigh, but that lady simply bowed and continued her nervous exclamations of horror at the catastrophe. "I thought we were being hurled into eternity"—

"In our reception gowns," laughed Kitty, who was calmness itself. "Pshaw! Mrs. Dunleigh, I knew the old thing would simply drag and bump along till Harrison stopped the horses, but I do believe you and Mrs. Cranston would have crushed the life out of Lydia and myself."

"Well, I'm glad it was no worse," declared Mrs. Dunleigh. "Come on in. You'll all catch your deaths out here in those thin dresses."

Lydia and George ascended the steps last, and she paused with him a moment alone on the veranda. She had not spoken.

"I have simply no explanation to make," he said, eying her contritely.

"Explanation?" she said. "Why should there be one?"

"As soon as their excitement is over," he reminded her, "they will wonder how I happened to be up here in the grounds at this time of night."

"Oh!" She raised her eyes to his in a startled expression.

"But you may know," he went on—"you may know that it was simply because I was dying to catch a glimpse of you. I was half crazed with desperation over it all—all this affair in your honor given by that man—the rumor over the whole state that you are to become his wife. I did not come to Atlanta for this. I came on business. I finished my work at sundown and ought to have gone back home, but my misery chained me here. I won't keep back anything. I passed here earlier in the evening and noticed the carriage waiting for you. I saw that I could hide behind that hedge and see you come out. I did it and drank in your beauty and my deeper despair. Then I came back a few minutes ago and hid again to see you once more. Somehow I felt that my agony would be less keen if I could merely see you last—do you understand?—see you after he had told you good night back there in all his glory. I saw the wheel coming off. I knew what was going to happen. I could have remained hidden and allowed the coachman to let you out and thus have escaped this humiliation in the eyes of your friends. But what does it matter? They know who I am. They know why I had to act like a thief to steal a glimse of the woman who has enslaved me—why I had to do that, when she is the favored guest of the governor of the state and his promised"—

George helped the ladies out.

"Stop!" Lydia cried. "Don't, don't! I can't bear any more. I—I am only a woman, George. I'm only a girl who is being pulled and dragged by others. Father begged me to permit this entertainment, to accept Mrs. Dunleigh's invitation. I refused at first, George; on my honor I did, but father is in a critical condition. The doctor told me not to worry him in the slightest, and he had set his heart on this affair tonight. The poor man loves such things with all his soul, and he thinks Governor Telfare a great man. He actually broke down and cried when I refused; it was pitiful to see his old gray head shaking with sobs over what he considered base ingratitude. Besides, Kitty was included in the invitation. She is my guest, and any natural girl would like to go to such an affair, and mamma urged it. Oh, George, do pity me. Don't—don't think I'm like the rest of the world, for I'm not. I hunger for better things, higher things, but in this case I really don't know what to do."

"Then"—he took a deep breath, as if trying to fortify himself against a coming blow—"then you are engaged to Telfare?"

"No; I am not, George. Don't—don't question me so closely. I am not happy. I"—

"But he looks upon this affair tonight as favorable to his suit. Is that not true?"

"He may, George, but I really don't know what to do."

Buckley was as pale as a corpse. He brushed his brow with a quivering hand.

"God knows I have nothing to offer you," he said in a low tone. "And it was wrong for me to thrust myself on you as I have done tonight. Your friends will laugh at me for my desperation, but I don't care. Goodby, I shall never trouble you again."

"Oh, George"—but he had turned and was walking away in the darkness. She stifled a groan of pain, and then went into the house. She saw her mother and Mrs. Dunleigh in the drawing room under the prismatic chandelier in close conversation, but she passed on and ascended the stairs to the room assigned to herself and Kitty. The latter was unfastening her hair before a pier glass and came forward, her hands extended.

"Don't let it worry you, dear," she said simply.

Lydia made no reply, sinking, pale and miserable, into a chair and covering her face with her hands.

"I say, don't let it worry you," said Miss Cosby. "But the whole thing makes me fighting mad."

"Mad?" said Lydia, looking up almost hopefully at the unexpected outburst.

"Yes, mad," said Kitty. "Why should that young god of a man be kicked and sneered at by our world, forced to sneak around behind rosebushes merely to see the idol of his dreams step into her carriage, while a half bald, sallow faced creature receives her under palm trees, in the glare of electric lights, in the perfume of costly flowers and amid the plaudits of a squirming, low necked, white shirted mass of hero worshipers—hero worshipers, indeed!—when George Buckley, the kind of hero we know, is left out in the cold?"

"Oh, Kitty, you are a darling!" The color was running into Lydia's wan face. Her eyes were gleaming as they had not gleamed that night. "But papa? What about him? What would you do about him?"

"What would I do about him? I'd make him change his pills. I don't think he has any more heart disease than I have, and mine flops as regular as a clock, except when George Buckley comes near, with those big, dreamy eyes of his. Lydia Cranston, I told your mother I wasn't going to influence you either way, but if George Buckley wanted me like he wants you he could have me at the drop of a hat. God doesn't bring up real men in velvet lined cradles; he simply gives them the chance to bring themselves up. I know where you stand tonight, Lydia. Secure in the joy of George Buckley's love, you are drifting away from it. You are in danger, my girl—in danger of losing the very thing you treasure above all else. You think you can obey your parents and always retain George Buckley's love, but as sure as fate, while you are now all a woman could be in his sight, if you degraded yourself by marrying Telfare he would gradually cease to love you and would transfer his giant heart to some other woman. I'd hate to be second choice; but, as God is my judge, I'd like a chance to make that man thoroughly happy. What do I care about his family? Napoleon said he was the first of his name, and George Buckley may be the first of his."

Lydia looked up sharply and fixed a steady glance on the face of her friend. "You are actually in love with him," she said. "What right?"—She suddenly covered her face.

"Oh, don't be a goose!" Kitty said. "We've got work to do before we go to bed. Your mother and Mrs. Dunleigh are now rolling a delightful morsel of gossip under their tongues. I can hear their mumbling voices. I have an idea. I can't sleep until I have rid their minds of the belief that George Buckley was hiding on the lawn to catch sight of you. That's the sort of thing women love to circulate. Wait. I'll fix 'em, and then we'll go to bed."

Descending the stairs and entering the drawing room a moment later, Kitty overheard Mrs. Cranston saying: "Yes, that accounts for it. He was not invited and was simply jealous and desperate over not seeing her, so he stole into the grounds, and"—

"Oh, my, what an imagination you have, Mrs. Cranston!" Kitty laughed heartily. "But you are away off. Mr. Buckley explained it to Lydia. He was going by here, returning from a stag party down the street. He saw the carriage pass and noticed the wheel coming off. He called out—I thought I heard some one—but could not attract the attention of the driver. He tried to catch up, but could not do so until he was in the grounds, then the wheel came off, and we were flopping about in each other's laps."

"Oh!" Mrs. Cranston exclaimed disappointedly.

"Well, that does seem more reasonable," said Mrs. Dunleigh. "I can hardly imagine lovers, this day and time, doing the other thing. It's rather too stagy—too romantic, don't you think?"

"Well, I really don't know what we are going to do with Lydia," sighed Mrs. Cranston. "She didn't seem to enjoy herself a bit tonight. Just think of it! Why, I could hear whispering all over the rooms, 'Where is she? Is that her? My, ain't she pretty! They say that necklace has been in her family for 200 years. Have you been introduced?' And yet the object of it all sat on a divan half the evening talking to a married Presbyterian minister, who didn't even have on an evening suit."

"Really, I was proud of her," declared Mrs. Dunleigh. "She's just a pure, sweet, unspoiled girl, and everybody knew it by her modest, shrinking manner. That's why she created such a furore, and why Governor Telfare is such a fool about her. When she declined to go out to supper with him and in such a sweet, natural way suggested that he take you instead, I was afraid he might be offended, but he took it beautifully, and—well, it did look better. She wasn't going to put herself in such a conspicuous position if she could avoid it, and, on the whole, I think she was right."

"Well, I'm going to bed," said Kitty. "You two hens can stay off the roost and cackle all night if you like, but I'm sleepy."

"She's an original creature," said Mrs. Dunleigh, when Kitty had left them. "I wish you'd share her with me."

"She's that way all the time," said Mrs. Cranston. "Almost too independent to be a favorite with men, but women adore her. She's very exacting—wants men to be more perfect than they are. I really think she admires George Buckley, and she won't help me with Lydia a bit."

When Kitty returned to Lydia she found her in bed, the gas burning low, her face to the wall. Kitty disrobed noiselessly and got into bed. She lay still for a moment, then she said suddenly:

"Look here, are you—well, I declare, you are crying!"

There was no response. Kitty was quiet for several minutes, then she rose. "In the excitement of it all," she said, "I forgot to say my prayers. I'd better get it done. Those two women fell into my trap with a dull thud just now. I'll tell you about it in the morning."

Lydia still made no sound nor movement to indicate that she was awake, but Kitty knew she was. Kitty knelt at the bedside for several minutes; then she rose, with a sigh, and got back under the covers. "If it will do you any good," she said, "I'll tell you I've been praying about this thing. I don't believe God pays the least attention to people who pray about wet weather in dry season or dry weather in wet, but somehow I believe he listens when you call his attention to real downright heart suffering. I told him I was at the end of my rope and that he ought to try to help you and George out of the mess you are in. You are both too good and sweet and noble to"—There was a sudden catch in Kitty's voice, and a sob struggled into her throat and shook her from head to foot.

"Now, what's the matter with you?" Lydia suddenly exclaimed, and she turned over and put her arms about her friend. "Don't, don't, Kitty!" Then they cried silently together until they fell asleep.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

THE next morning, after his return from Atlanta, George met Bascom Truitt at the warehouse.

"Brought yore mother in with me," he said. "I left 'er up at the postoffice readin' a letter. She'll be down directly. I missed you at the reunion, but I heard you was on hand. Lord, I missed the sidewalk, they tell me! I met some old friends that kept me full to the neck through the whole business. I couldn't toot my bugle."

"That's one way to celebrate," George said, with a smile, as Truitt was turning away.

A few minutes later Mrs. Buckley came into the office. She wore a checked gingham sunbonnet, and it was pulled well down over her face. In her hand she held a letter. By her silence and agitated manner George knew she had received unpleasant news. He placed a chair for her near his desk and resumed his own seat, wondering what could have happened.

"You have a letter from father," he said tentatively.

"Not from him, George, but it's from up thar. It's from the prison doctor." She was silent a moment, then she continued: "Yore pa's bad off, George. The doctor thinks he's had a serious attack. It's that old hurt place in his head that he got when he fell off the wagon fifteen year ago. The doctor cayn't tell how it'll come out, but he says I'd better be up thar. Yore pa keeps axin' fer me. I cayn't refuse 'im, George." The speaker suddenly paused and applied her handkerchief to her eyes.

"Well, you can go, of course," said George.

"Oh, kin I?" she exclaimed. "I was afeard you wouldn't want me to. I'd rather go, George. I sorter hardened my heart agin 'im when he was stout an' well, but now he's sufferin', I want to be with 'im." She broke down and began to cry again.

"There is nothing on earth to hinder you," said her son, who was deeply touched by her emotion, "and if you want me to do so, I'll go, too, mother. He's my father—the only one I ever had, and"—

"One of us will be enough," said Mrs. Buckley. "But, George, I've been studyin' since I got this letter. I never thought of it before, but I never knowed yore pa to do a dishonest act till he had that fall an' hurt his head. I read in the Index t'other day whar a good man had got a lick in the head an' it made a demon out o' him till the doctors operated on him an' cured 'im. Oh, George, it may be that a-way in yore pa's case, an' them twelve men an' the judge jest sent a pore sick man off fer what he couldn't help. It wasn't managed right. Somebody ought to 'a' fetched up that point. He mighty nigh made life unbearable fer us all, but the chain gang wasn't the place fer a man in his condition."

She had pushed back her bonnet and her gray eyes were flashing rebelliously. George was deeply moved.

"That's right, mother," he said admiringly, his fine face aglow, "stick to him. I remember, when I was a very little fellow, that he was kind and gentle with me, and although he treated me pretty badly after I grew up I never could forget that period. Yes, you must go to him and do all you can for his comfort. I'll pay for it."

"Oh, George, George!" the old woman cried, standing up. "It don't seem right fer yon to"—

"I want to do it, mother," he said simply and firmly. "You must take the night train, and remember, you are to spare no expense."

A NIGHTMARE

Gives point to the fact that excessive or irregular eating disturbs the digestion. Nightmare or night hag has its day time correspondence in the undue fullness after eating, with the belchings and sour or bitter rising so often experienced after too hasty or too hearty eating.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery cures dyspepsia or bad stomach. When the weak stomach is strengthened and invigorated the whole body shares in the increased strength derived from food properly digested and perfectly assimilated.

"I was a victim of sleeplessness and extreme nervousness induced by chronic indigestion and I felt heavy, tired and worn out continually," writes Miss Mary Smith, of 26 Wahsatch Street, Colorado Springs, Colo. "Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery was the only medicine which relieved me. Within a week after I began using it that heavy oppressed feeling after meals had left me, and in a few days I was able to eat almost what I pleased, for months previously. My appetite was gradually restored, general health was toned up, nervousness became a thing of the past and I have never been in splendid health for over nine months."

Sometimes a selfish dealer tempted by the little more profit paid on the pale pink lean meritorious medicines will offer the customer a substitute as being "just as good" as the "Discovery." It may be better for him because it pays better, but it is not as good for you, if you want the medicine that has cured others, and which you believe will cure you.

BLOOD DISEASE CURED.

If you ever contracted any Blood or Private Disease, you are never safe until the virus or poison has been eradicated from the system. Don't be satisfied with a "patch up" by some family doctor. Our New Method is Guaranteed to Cure or No Pay. No Names Used without Written consent.

Cured When all Else Failed

"Could I live my early life over, this testimonial would not be necessary, though I was no more sinful than thousands of other young men. Early indiscretions, later excesses, exposure to contagious diseases all helped to break down my system. When I commenced to realize my condition I was almost frantic. Doctor after doctor treated me but only gave me relief—not a cure. Hot Springs helped me, but did not cure me. The symptoms always returned. Mercury and Potash drove the poison into my system instead of driving it out. I bless the day your New Method Treatment was recommended to me. I investigated who you were first, and finding you had over 25 years' experience and responsible financially, I gave you my case under a guarantee. You cured me permanently, and in six years there has not been a sore, pain, ulcer or any other symptom of the blood disease."

ENTHUSIASTIC IN ENNISMORE.

Weather has no Terrors for Ennismore Electors.

Splendid Rally in the Interests of Mr. McWilliams Last Night.

The weather has no terrors for Ennismore for even in the blinding snow storm over one hundred of the electors of that township turned out to the Liberal meeting in the splendid new Town Hall, last night. The attendance at this meeting, the reception which the candidate received on all hands during the day, make it evident that Ennismore intends to stand by the Liberal colours and give another bumper majority. It is generally felt in the Township that no mistake will be made in doing as was done 18 years ago and sending to the Legislature a young man who will have all his best years to devote to the service of the constituency.

The meeting was addressed by the candidate and Mr. Daniel O'Connell, and the chair was taken by the Reeve, Mr. Corkery.

Mr. McWilliams reviewed the various grounds upon which he asked for the support of the electors. The present Government had maintained the remarkable administrative record of the 30 years of Liberal rule and had kept Ontario in the first place among the states of the continent. Premier Ross and his colleagues had shown themselves alive to the importance of developing New Ontario and of making the conditions there as favourable as they could possibly be made to the settlers, and for that purpose had built a Government railway which would for all times control the only natural outlet to this whole territory. On the other hand the Opposition had failed to present a single item of large public policy upon which they could ask the people of the province to change their allegiance, and had not shown even the ability necessary to make a capable Opposition. In the matter of temperance it must be admitted by all that every important step that there has been in the improvement during the last 29 years had been made at the instance of the Liberal Administration. The issues in this election are exactly the same as those upon which they voted 1902, with the exception of the candidates, and he hoped that they would transfer to him a large measure of the personal support which they had given Hon. Mr. Stratton, and he would endeavour to prove himself as faithful and efficient a representative.

Mr. O'Connell opened his remarks by complimenting the people, and their faithful priest, Rev. Father Fitzpatrick, upon the splendid hall which they had erected, a hall without a rival in any township that he knew of. He impressed on the electors the great importance of the matters involved in the provincial election, and the obligation which lay upon them to consider these questions carefully, and especially to make a wise choice of a representative for the riding. The Liberals presented a candidate who was starting out in public life after years of special training for such work and whose whole public life must depend for its success upon the manner in which he should serve his constituents. For himself he had not seen any good reason why he should withdraw his support from the Liberal Government. The people of Ennismore had, for the best of reasons, given a very hearty support to the Liberal party, and until the Government deserved a renewal of their confidence; the service which they had rendered, the care they had taken of public resources, the relief which they had afforded the municipalities by the millions which had been given back to the people, and the statesmanship which they had displayed in dealing with all the new questions which had arisen in the province. On these grounds he appealed to the electors of Ennismore to be true to their old allegiance, and to vote for an honest and efficient government, and for a young and energetic representative.

The meeting closed with three cheers for the King and the candidate, after Mr. McWilliams had announced that there would be another meeting in Ennismore on the 20th, and that the big meeting of the campaign would be held in town next Friday, when Hon. J. R. Stratton, and his successor in the office of Provincial Secretary, Hon. G. P. Graham, would be the speakers.

MASSACHUSETTS MATRIMONIALS

A Former Peterboronian Becomes a Benedict.

The father of one of the principals in the following matrimonial event, Mr. J. R. Smith, was formerly a foreman in the Auburn Woollen Mills and left Peterborough about twenty years ago:—

A pretty home wedding occurred yesterday at high noon at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Smith of 110 Bailey street, Lawrence, Mass., when their daughter, Miss Ruby Sulter Smith was united in marriage to Alfred Churchill Baker, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., Rev. Julius P. West, pastor of Parker street M. E. church, performed the ceremony. The bride was attended by her sister, Miss Lillian Smith, while Everett Ackert, of Schagticoke, N. Y., performed a like service for the groom. The bride was attired in white landsdowne trimmed with chiffon applique, and carried a bouquet of bride roses. The bridesmaid wore white voile, trimmed with embroidered chiffon, applique, and carried a spray of blush pink carnations. The house was tastefully decorated for the occasion with holly, mistletoe, evergreen and potted plants, and Mr. Hamer presided at the piano, performing the following programme at appropriate times:—Prelude, Beethoven's Sonata, Wedding March from Lohengrin, and Midsummer Night's Dream. Frederick D. Lane served a wedding luncheon in his best manner and relatives and friends were entertained from West Newton, Brockton, Andover, Medford, and this city. The bride was formerly a teacher in Wakefield, and was a graduate of the Lowell Normal school, having previously graduated from the high school of Troy, N. Y., Mr. Baker is principal of the Gov. Clinton school, of Poughkeepsie, N. Y., and is also organist of the Baptist church. The happy couple received a large number of useful and beautiful presents, one of them being from the bride's school mates in Lowell. Mr. and Mrs. Baker left shortly after the ceremony for a trip to New York, at the close of which they will reside in Poughkeepsie.

A WORD TO OUR FRIENDS

Owing to the special nature of our business which is largely one of trust and confidence in the ability, judgment and honor of the salesmen, it is utterly impossible for us to fill our store with salespeople who know nothing about the trade or jewellery business, or of the quality of the goods they are selling. We wish, as a very special favor, to ask the many friends and customers of "Diamond Hall," who wish to look over our stock or make selections for Christmas, to be kind enough to come as early as possible.

INAGURAL MEETING OF TOWN COUNCIL

Short Session of Council was Held This Morning.

Mayor Best in an Opening Speech Refers to the Work Which Must be Taken up. Aldermen Take Oath of Qualification.

The inaugural meeting of the Town Council was held this morning in the Committee Room. Each member was required to take the usual oath of qualification, after which Mayor Best took the chair and the following Aldermen were in attendance at the opening meeting: Ald. Batten, Hicks, Adams, Begley, Tovey, Hall, Mason, Crowe, Johnston, McIntyre, Scott and Leary.

The clerk read the result of the recent election, after which Mayor Best gave his inaugural address.

THE MAYOR'S ADDRESS.

The Mayor congratulated the new members upon their election and felt assured that with the new blood in the Council some energetic work should be accomplished during the year. This would depend upon working together and if harmony existed there was no doubt that material progress would be made for the town. Many questions would come up which they could not see now, but he would refer to some work which should be taken up at once. The appointment of assessment commissioners or of the usual assessors would have to be made. The recent change in the Assessment Act would require either new assessors or commissioners, who should have some time to study their work before entering into it. It would be necessary for the assessors or commissioners to take up the work early in the summer and report in November and therefore they should have a few months to study the Act.

Another matter was the agreement between Ashburnham and Peterborough involving the construction of an outfall sewer, which it was estimated would cost about $10,000. He understood that Mr. W. Chipman, of Toronto, had furnished plans and it was a matter for the Board of Works to deal with.

The usual road improvements would have to be carried on by the Board of Works. During 1904 the Board had secured from $1,900 to $2,000 worth of crushed stone which it was intended to place on George street, but on account of the streets being torn up by the Street Railway Company, this was not done and the stone would be a substantial asset for the Board of Works of 1905. The Board of Works was also discussing the advisability of putting down a permanent pavement in the centre of George street, and one question which would have to be taken up was as to how to get rid of the poles on the street. It was impossible to make good roads with poles standing in the water tables. He had just learned from Mr. Dean of the Bell Telephone Company that they were intending to place their wires underground from King to Brock street on George street, and the street railway would be asked to put iron poles outside the curb line, as is the case in Toronto. If the work were proceeded with the Council would try to get all the companies to place their wires under ground or carry them around on some other streets.

Mr. Best said that it would not take much influence on the part of the merchants and all interested to have the present difficulty remedied and have the streets perfectly clear and laid with permanent material, such as bitholitic or vitrified brick. He spoke of the advisability of the Council proceeding with the laying of permanent pavements. About five miles had been laid last year at the expense of 9.50c. per square foot. A better price than this should be secured this year he thought. One reason why it would be better to continue these walks was because it cost considerable to repair the old wooden walks. Last year over $1,000 was spent in repairing these plank walks. The Mayor thought that about one mile a month of permanent walk could be built during the six summer months.

How were these walks to be paid for was an interesting question. It was his personal opinion that the general tax could not be adopted without legislation and by compensating those who have been paying for permanent walks. It was a question whether such legislation could be obtained to suit the conditions. For instance there were merchants on George street who had been paying for walks for six years and would be through with paying after fourteen more years, and would not have to pay anything for twenty more years because the life of a pavement was easily forty years. The method of payment for permanent road on George street would also have to be considered.

Regarding new industries, the Mayor said it would require the best efforts of the council to deal with matters which would arise. There had been good chairmen of the Manufactures Committee in the past in ex-Ald. Rush and Morrison, who had spared no pains in communicating with industries in Canada and the United States, but, through adverse conditions none had been induced to locate here. The council should be constantly on the look-out for new industries coming from the other side, for there was no doubt that American capitalists were seeking investment in Canada. There was great competition in the field at the present time.

In conclusion, the Mayor said that with the new blood in the council, he felt sure that there would be satisfactory results to present to the ratepayers at the end of the year.

The minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed.

We call these our specials—it is not because they are made any better than the rest of our clothing—because we cannot do that—it is because this is such a popular grade, and the output is so very large that we can afford to reduce the profit to a minimum.

The large consumption makes it possible for us to buy direct from the manufacturer. Our system of specializing in the making of the clothes is not only of the utmost importance to you in assuring the best workmanship, but facilitates the output.

Our beautiful, commodious tailory saves an enormous amount of time—as the goods are simply handed from one number of specialists to another.

The advantage to you will be amply demonstrated if you will call. You do not have to buy because you call — nor keep the goods because you buy. Your money back for any dissatisfaction—and we do not argue the matter either.

From A. P. Fussanotte, claiming $300 on behalf of Mrs. E. Jackson for damages to her property caused by the town making a new entrance to her premises on Hunter street.—Board of Works.

From S. R. Armstrong, presenting the result of the vote on the bylaws on Jan. 2nd. — Received.

AUDITORS APPOINTED.

The bylaw for the appointment of auditors was passed, and Messrs. T. Q. Quarterma'ne and G. K. Martin, were appointed at a salary of $110 on motion of Ald. Adams, seconded by Ald. Johnston.

Ald. Adams said he thought that Sheriff Hall, who had been one of the auditors in the past, would not have sufficient time at his disposal this year, owing to the elections.

Ald. Hall thought that Sheriff Hall would still be in a position to continue as auditor, and moved an amendment that he be appointed in place of Mr. Quartermaine. The amendment was lost.

The council then adjourned to meet this evening.

Daily Examiner.

MONDAY, JAN. 9, 1905.

THERE IS NO EXTRAVAGANCE.

Unable to deny the splendid results which have come through the Liberal Administration, the Conservatives have raised the cry of extravagance. It is a charge not to be lightly passed over. But it is also a charge which when examined, is found to be utterly lacking a solid foundation, and to be only a proof that those who made it have themselves poor business judgment.

The management of the affairs of the province must, to be successful, be conducted with the same business principles as guide the conduct of a company of men who sell dry goods or groceries or steel rails. It would not be considered extravagant on the part of such a company to use a part of its profits to improve its establishment or the quality of the goods it offered for sale; it would not be extravagant to use other parts of the profits to send their goods to new fields, or in the endeavour to develop new fields; nor would it be extravagant to use still more of the profits to furnish their customers with all proper conveniences. This would be all legitimate, ordinary business. The dictionary defines "extravagant" as being "beyond the ordinary or just limit."

If this company mortgaged its property or levied constant assessments on its members there would be just ground for complaint. But so long as these expenditures come out of the income of the company not to make them would be to show a lack of that enterprise and energy necessary to every well conducted business.

This is precisely the position of the Ross Government. It has managed the business of the country so well that it has an enormous profit and it has used this profit to extend its operations in line with good business principles, paying more attention to the care and convenience of those who deal with it than any ordinary business has been known to do.

But the vital point to remember is that there has been no mortgaging and no assessing. The province has no debt and its people pay no direct taxes, at least, for provincial purposes. No other province or state on this continent can show so prosperous a condition. The memory of the present generation does not reach back to the time when the Liberal party did not administer its affairs, so the moral is too obvious to need pointing.

NEW DAIRY COMMISSIONER.

The Department of Agriculture is fortunate in being able to call to the service of the dairy industry so competent a man as Prof. J. A. Ruddick, whose appointment as Dominion Dairy Commissioner, is announced. Mr. Ruddick, says the Montreal Herald, has the advantage of wide personal acquaintance among dairymen of all parts of the country, and by reason of his long and intimate connection with the industry in Canada, is peculiarly fitted for the position. He has already done much valuable educative work among dairymen, and the marked improvement in cheese and butter making, in methods of packing, and improved transportation, etc., have been in a measure due to his foresight and energy. Mr. Ruddick brings to the discharge of his new duties the fruits of long years of study of the requirements of the industry, both locally, and as affecting the export trade, and with a valuable experience gained as dairy commissioner of New Zealand for some years, his administration may be expected to be progressive and energetic.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW?

Two prominent local Conservative workers, who supported the Conservative candidate in the election of 1902, because he was a prohibitionist candidate, pledged to support an anti-prohibitionist leader, are as dumb as Pharoah on the subject this election, yet they are to-day the right-hand supporters in this contest, of an anti-prohibition candidate against a Liberal candidate who is a total abstainer, and are working for a leader who admits that in Napanee he induced a hotel keeper to break the license law, because he was tired after a long speech. Yet Mr. Whitney's strong position on the liquor question is that he will not give prohibition, but give a rigorous enforcement of the license law. But will his enforcement of the law be effective, if he sets an example of breaking it, and publicly justifies his action, if, as he claims, a man is justified in inducing a hotel keeper to break the law, because he is "tired?" Most people who want to get whisky after hours are "tired." Where are the local temperance missionaries at?

MARVELOUS SALES OF RED ROSE TEA

All Canadian Women Interested in Story of its Success

How T. H. Estabrooks First Captured the Fancy of Tea Users—The Enormous Quantities Now Used.

Canada always likes to learn of her leading enterprises and the men who make them, of their conception, growth and why and how they grew. And the Examiner likes to tell its readers about these great enterprises. The following interesting story, as told by Mr. Estabrooks, gives some idea of how he built such a remarkable business.

No trade connection; a small warehouse in St. John, N.B., and one clerk, was the beginning in 1894. The largest tea warehouse in Canada, over seventy employes, branch warehouses in Toronto and Winnipeg, and a name that is a household word from British Columbia to Newfoundland in 1904, is the result of the first ten years.

This wonderful growth is not the result of mere accident or a streak of good luck. Great businesses do not grow that way.

When commencing business, Mr. Estabrooks found that the tea trade of Canada being chiefly done by the large tea houses of London, Eng., who sent their travellers regularly through Canada. He knew that the expenses generally in connection with handling and shipping teas there were heavy, and he believed it was a business that could and should be done to advantage by Canadian firms.

In order to be in a position to compete with the London firms and secure the Canadian business, he engaged agents in China, India and Ceylon to buy and ship teas direct to St. John, and, in order to buy to the best advantage, he arranged through his bankers to pay for the teas as soon as they were shipped.

In freight rates concessions were secured for direct shipments which showed a material saving.

Having made these arrangements for buying and shipping he then studied very carefully the varieties of teas which seemed to best suit the Canadian trade. He found that India and Ceylon teas were rapidly gaining favour in England, and as Canadians used the same class of teas as had been used there, he believed that if Ceylon's and India's were introduced into this country they would equally as successful here.

The result was that the well-known brand of Red Rose Tea was put on the market. From the very first it was a success. The name was a popular one and the tea seemed to be just the kind that people liked best.

Besides Red Rose Tea in lead packages he deals in bulk teas of all kinds, his aim being to sell the merchant whatever best suits his trade, and Mr. Estabrooks lays special emphasis on the fact that his business has been built up on the merits of his teas, as is evidenced by the fact that he has spent comparatively little in advertising, but he is a firm believer in newspaper publicity and is now beginning an extensive advertising campaign. From what the Examiner has seen of the copy to be used, the ads. will be both interesting and educative about teas and should be well worth reading.

DEATH OF W. C. CALDWELL.

Was North Lanark's Late Representative in the Legislature.

Lanark, Jan., 9.—W. C. Caldwell, B.A., ex-M.P.P., for North Lanark died at his residence, "The Highlands," on Saturday evening in his 62nd year. He was born in Lanark on May 14, 1843. For over 25 years Mr. Caldwell represented North Lanark in the Liberal interest in the Provincial Legislature. At the party convention held here on Dec. 16 the announcement of his withdrawal, owing to ill-health from political life, was received with general regret. His record as a politician is clean and honorable. W. C. Caldwell held the admiration and respect of all classes. He was known far and near; a long public career as well as large business interests bringing him into contact with almost every person in the district. He leaves a widow and family of seven, three sons and four daughters.

Do Not Suppress a Cough.

When you have a cough do not try to suppress it, but remove the cause. The cough is only a symptom of some disease, and the disease is what you should cure, then the cough will stop of itself. The most common cause of coughing is a cold. Anodynes will promptly suppress the cough, and preparations containing chloroform, opium, etc., are used for that purpose, but they do not cure the cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy on the other hand does not suppress the cough, but relieves it by removing from the throat and lungs the mucous which obstructed the breathing and allaying the irritation and tickling in the throat. It also opens the secretions and effectually and permanently cures the cold as well as the cough. For sale by all druggists.

SERGT. A. NASH SHOT

Windsor Officer Seriously Wounded by Toronto Burglar.

ASSAILANT IS RECAPTURED

Identified As George Jarvis, With Several Aliases and a Criminal Record—Christmas Card From His Mother Gave the Clue—Important Arrest of Alleged Canadian Thieves Made At Buffalo.

Windsor, Jan. 7.—Sergt. Abe Nash, of the Windsor police force, lies in a serious condition at his home on Sandwich street with a gaping wound in his neck caused from a revolver shot fired by a burglar he had arrested at an early hour yesterday morning.

The arrest was made near the waterworks after an Italian fruit store had been robbed. Sergt. Nash had brought his prisoner as far as All Saints' Church, within one hundred yards of the city lockup, when the burglar suddenly turned on the sergeant, drew a revolver and fired two shots, one taking effect in the neck. The officer fell in the snow, while the attempted murderer ran towards the alley in the rear of Windsor avenue.

Officer Langlois was at the corner near Sandwich street, when the shots were fired. He rushed around at the head of the alley and ran into the burglar. The latter shoved a revolver into Langlois' face, but the patrolman grappled with his man, throwing him to the ground and finally succeeding in arresting him.

The prisoner at first declined to give his name, but an envelope found on him was addressed Thos. Murray, Detroit, postmarked from Toronto, Dec. 24, containing a card read on one side, "Best wishes, from mother," on the other, "Mrs. J. A. Jarvis, Toronto."

May Be Toronto Criminal.

Toronto, Jan. 7.—The man who shot Police Sergeant Nash at Windsor yesterday, while being taken into custody, is said by the local police to be George, alias Sam Jarvis, alias Henderson, alias George Johnston, a Toronto criminal, who has done considerable time since 1886.

ARREST OF "SLIM" DALY.

Kinsella, His Pal, Admits Tearing Up Securities Worth Thousands.

Buffalo, Jan. 7.—Railway Detective Day and Cockburn of Toronto, left here yesterday for Woodstock, Ont., taking with them Charles, alias "Slim" Daly, who is wanted by the Canadian authorities on a charge of grand larceny. Soon after the departure of the officers, the Buffalo detectives captured one of Daly's pals, who it is alleged was an accessory to the crime charged against Daly. He is known as Gus Phillips and also by the name of Kinsella.

Kinsella and Daly, it is alleged, stole a valise from an English tourist, who was on a Grand Trunk train en route from Detroit to Buffalo. The valise, which is said to have contained papers worth thousands of dollars, was taken from the train at Harrisburg. It was traced back to Woodstock and thence to Buffalo. The Buffalo detectives located Daly first and placed him under arrest. They found the valise, which contained clothing and a valuable scarf pin belonging to the English tourist, but found no trace of the missing papers.

In watching for the return of Kinsella, the detectives made another arrest, which is regarded as important. The prisoner gave his name as Harry Brown of New York. In searching Brown, they found letters addressed to him by Kinsella and other young men employed as bell boys in various cities. These letters caused the detectives to suspect that many bell boys employed in various cities were banded together for theft.

After the arrest of Brown and Daly, Kinsella kept away from their room, but the detectives located him late yesterday afternoon and placed him under arrest. Kinsella admitted his association with Daly and Brown. He said that he and Daly, not knowing the value of the papers in the valise taken from the Grand Trunk train, had torn them up while they were in Woodstock. This information was wired to the officers who took Daly away. They at once wired back that they would return to Buffalo for Kinsella as soon as possible.

The Canadian officers displayed great interest in the missing papers. They said the papers consisted of thousands of dollars worth of securities, which the Englishman intended to sell in Boston before returning to his home.

ON THE EDGE OF WAR

Diplomacy, With Difficulty, Averted the Danger.

BRITAIN TO FIGHT GERMANY

Dr. Passche Says They Were Much Nearer Warlike Complications Than Many people Dream—A German Liberal Leader Responsible For the Astounding Statement—Anglophobia Disclaimed.

Berlin, Jan. 9.—The National Liberal leader, Dr. Paasche, addressing his constituents at Creumach Saturday made the astonishing statement that Germany and Great Britain were on the verge of war last week, referring evidently to the representations which the German Foreign Office made to Great Britain regarding a bellicose threat against Germany in The Army and Navy Gazette.

Dr. Paasche's words were:

"I know with absolute certainty that Germany and Great Britain last week were much nearer warlike complications than many people dream.

"Our diplomacy succeeded in averting the danger, though with difficulty."

Why This Anglophobia Disclaimer.

Vienna, Jan. 9.—(Special via New York:)—In well informed circles here the conviction has gradually come to prevail that for some reason or reasons unknown the state of Anglo-German relations is causing anxiety to the German Government. As far as is known in Vienna those relations are not now much worse than at any time since Count Von Buelow measured tongues with Mr. Chamberlain and found that he had still something to learn in the art of political controversy.

At the same time it is presumed that the German Imperial Chancellor would not have disclaimed Anglophobia for himself and his country, as he has recently done in an English review and in the Reichstag, and that he would not have instructed German diplomatists in foreign capitals to deplore Anglo-German misunderstanding, had he not some special object in view. If this object be simply the improvement of Anglo-German relations, it is clear from the tone prevailing in authoritative quarters here that Count Von Buelow would possess the sympathy of the Austro-Hungarian Government.

Nevertheless the situation existing between England and Germany is not regarded as alarming, for Count Von Buelow is known to be too able a diplomatist and too expert a manipulator of newspaper opinion not to change at one stroke the daring of German representatives and of the German press if he were really apprehensive of trouble. Austria-Hungary is too well acquainted with Pan-German clamor to attach much importance, intrinsically, to the dreams of German naval enthusiasts, for she regards them as not unlike Pan-Slavist dreams, which are only formidable in so far as they are supported by official influence.

COLLAPSE IN "CARMEN."

Twenty Members of a New York Chorus Seriously Hurt.

New York, Jan. 9.—More than twenty members of the chorus of the Metropolitan Grand Opera Company were seriously injured Saturday night by the collapse of the bridge in the street scene in the opening act of "Carmen." The uninjured members of the chorus heroically massed at the front of the stage and sang on. The curtain was run down as soon as possible, and Heinrich Conried, the impresario, prevented a panic by urging the great audience to remain seated and not be frightened. The injured removed to hospitals were: Giovanni Rossi, two fractured ribs; Wanda Adamsky, fractured ribs; Natalie Corranolle, both legs fractured; Katherine Hahn, left hip injured and ribs bruised; Ida Rohenstein, internal injuries and shock; Italie Langogari, dislocation of right shoulder; Desadoria Paccettir, right leg fractured; Vincenzo Raggario, fractured ribs; Giovanni Maninca, fractured ribs. Madame Ackte was slightly bruised on the right arm and the right foot by a piece of flying timber from the bridge, but she continued in the cast.

In addition to these, twenty or thirty more members of the chorus were painfully hurt.

At the close of the performance, Frank H. Palmer, master mechanic of the Metropolitan, was arrested and locked up, charged with criminal negligence.

A PRIEST'S CALMNESS.

Rev. Rev. Frank DuMoulin of Chicago Acted in Fire.

Chicago, Jan. 9.—Flames appearing among the decorations over the altar of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, 1737 Bel avenue, last evening, summoned the officiating priest, Rev. Frank DuMoulin, from prayer at the chancel to service in stilling panic, dismissing a frightened congregation of several hundred persons and fighting the fire that threatened both the lives of the worshippers and their sanctuary. By reason of the priest's calmness and quick grasp of the situation, inspiring confidence and presence of mind in those imperilled, the church was quickly emptied without disorder or confusion, and pastor, with the aid of the choir, were left free to subdue the flames and save the building, a task they accomplished before the firemen arrived. Rev. Mr. DuMoulin is a Canadian, native of Niagara Falls, Ont., and a son of the Bishop of Niagara.

This Jury Disagreed.

Montreal, Jan. 9.—The famous St. Alban's School case, which has been going on before Justice Curran for the past week, was concluded late Saturday evening. The jury or rather 10 of them were of the opinion that Rev. Charles J. Boulder, principal of St. Alban's School, Brockville, was not justified in expelling young Dunlop from school. In the matter of damages, however, 10 were for no damages and two for nominal damages.

SHIPPING CASUALTIES.

Storms On British Coasts Prove Most Disastrous to Vessels.

London, Jan. 9.—Stormy weather still continues on the British coasts, and several shipping casualties are reported. The Glasgow steamer Stella Maris collided Saturday night seven miles off Holyhead with the Spanish vessel Oris, and both sank. The crews were saved in the boats after drifting all night.

The Belfast schooner Dispatch collided with the Sunderland steamer Dinnington off Ramsgate yesterday morning. The Dispatch was towed into Ramsgate, but the Dinnington is believed to have sunk with her crew of ten men.

Several other vessels were driven ashore at different points their crews being rescued with great difficulty.

Tidal Flood in Britain.

London, Jan. 9.—A tidal flood on the east coast Saturday morning caused an enormous amount of damage at watering places from Scarborough as far south as Dover. Eight hundred feet of the pier at Scarborough, which cost $126,000, were swept away, and the promenades on the sea front were broken up. Nearly all parts of the Town of Yarmouth were inundated; hundreds of houses were flooded, and the inhabitants were obliged to vacate the ground floors. The esplanade and beach gardens were swept bare. Blocks of concrete were tossed about, wrecked everything they came in contact with. Similar destruction was caused elsewhere. Sea walls were washed away, and waves swept over adjoining esplanades, destroying numerous costly, permanent attractions, inundating houses, churches, and stores, and causing immense losses both to corporations and individuals.

Fourteen Mills Closed.

Philadelphia, Jan. 9.—The effects of Friday night's heavy rainfall, which was driven by a 36-mile gale, were in evidence Saturday in all sections of the city and environs. The most serious result is the swollen condition of the Schuylkill River, which is seventeen feet above normal at Manayunk, a suburb. Fourteen mills are closed as a result of the flood, and 4,000 hands are idle.

Railway Tracks Under Water.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 9.—Floods in Connecticut are the result of Friday night's storm. The heavy rain has swollen the streams so that village streets and railroad tracks are under water, seriously hampering all traffic.

In Winsted, Mad River overflowed its banks so that the main street of the borough was ten inches under water Saturday. Trolley traffic was partly suspended and goods stored in the cellars of stores were seriously damaged.

Buffalo Buried Deep.

Buffalo, N.Y., Jan. 9.—Snow has been falling in this vicinity incessantly for 48 hours, and at 10 o'clock Saturday ten inches were recorded at the weather bureau.

Snowbound 40 Hours.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 9.—A Nova Scotia Central train which left Bridgewater on Friday reached here yesterday after having been snowbound near Alpena station for 40 hours, during which time the 100 passengers suffered intensely from cold and hunger.

MONEY TO LOAN.

1,800,000 People

Have Asked Us to Buy Them a 50c. Bottle of Liquozone.

We offer to buy the first bottle of Liquozone, and give it free to each sick one who asks it. And we have spent over one million dollars to announce and fulfill this offer. Our object has been to let Liquozone itself show what it can do. A test is better than testimonials, better than argument. In one year, 1,800,000 people have accepted this offer. They have told others what Liquozone does, and the others told others. The result is that millions now use it. It is more widely employed than any medicine ever was—more widely prescribed by the better physicians. And your own neighbors—wherever you are—can tell you of people whom Liquozone has cured.

Not Medicine.

Liquozone is not made by compounding drugs, nor is there alcohol in it. Its virtues are derived solely from gas—largely oxygen gas—by a process requiring immense apparatus and 14 days' time. This process has, for more than 30 years, been the constant subject of scientific and chemical research.

The result is a liquid that does what oxygen does. It is a nerve food and blood food—the most helpful thing in the world to you. Its effects are exhilarating, vitalizing, purifying. Yet it is a germicide so certain that we publish on every bottle an offer of $1,000 for a disease germ that it cannot kill. The reason is that germs are vegetables; and Liquozone—like an excess of oxygen—is deadly to vegetal matter.

There lies the great value of Liquozone. It is the only way known to kill germs in the body without killing the tissues, too. Any drug that kills germs is a poison, and it cannot be taken internally. Medicine is almost helpless in any germ disease. It is the fact that gives Liquozone its worth to humanity. And that worth is so great that, after testing the product for two years, through physicians and hospitals, we paid $100,000 for the American rights.

Germ Diseases.

These are the known germ diseases. All that medicine can do for these troubles is to help Nature overcome the germs, and such results are indirect and uncertain. Liquozone attacks the germs, wherever they are. And when the germs which cause a disease are destroyed, the disease must end, and forever. That is inevitable.

TYPOGRAPHICAL UNION BANQUET

Very Enjoyable Gathering at Long's Palm Parlours Saturday Evening.

Splendid Supper and an Enjoyable Programme—An Annual Affair.

The members of Typographical Union, No. 248, met around the festive board on Saturday evening at Mr. Harry Long's palm parlours, the occasion being the annual banquet of the Union. The printers and their friends, always have a good time when they assemble on occasions of this kind, and Saturday evening was no exception to the rule. A splendid supper was provided, and an informal programme was furnished, which proved one of much interest and enjoyment for all present. There was a pleasing sentiment of sociability and good feeling manifest, which is so essential to the success of affairs of this nature, and all the elements conducive to an evening of thorough enjoyment were to be found. The only regrettable feature was the enforced absence of a few of the members and invited guests through illness.

Those who partook of the very excellent repast prepared were:—Messrs. W. Dredge, W. A. Lewis, J. Bowers, H. Lacheur, B. E. Caniff, G. G. Cairns, F. Hubbs, J. E. Sherrard, J. G. Perry, T. J. Twilley, J. Swift, C. H. Reid, R. Pearson, E. H. Bartlett, J. W. Ross, H. Graham, W. Peters, J. Kennedy, R. B. Beattie, G. Paxman, C. Brownlee, Ald. Begley, F. H. Dobbin, J. Browne, J. Legg, G. B. VanBlaricom, W. Cowie and R. N. Jelliffe.

The programme which followed the supper was of a most informal nature, there being no prepared toast list, but the impromptu speeches and music, which was supplied, furnished much enjoyment for all present. Mr. Walter Dredge, president of the union, was chairman, and made opening remarks, before proposing the toast to "The King," which was honoured in the customary manner.

Mr. Jas. Browne sang in his usual splendid manner, "When the Blue Sky Turns to Gold." Mr. S. S. Moore was called upon to recite, but as he had left his notes at Lakefield he could not respond. Mr. F. Hubbs gave a few reminiscences of South Africa, where he saw service with the Canadian militia. A solo by Mr. J. Legg was received in a hearty manner. Ald. Begley gave a neat speech, in which he took occasion to thank the members of the Typographical Union for their support at the recent municipal elections. Mr. G. B. VanBlaricom made a few remarks in which he expressed his pleasure at again having an opportunity of meeting with the printers of the town after an absence from Peterborough of eleven years. After a song by Mr. R. N. Jolliffe, Mr. F. H. Dobbin gave a short address, in which he dealt with some reminiscences of old times in an interesting manner. Mr. W. Cowie also told of the existing conditions of affairs when he first entered into the printing trade in Peterborough. The toast to the "Press" was responded to by representatives present, after which Messrs. Legg, Jolliffe and Browne sang a trio, which was well received. Mr. Powers made a capital speech dealing with matters of social import. Mr. W. A. Lewis also responded to a request for a few remarks.

After a toast to "Our Host," to which Mr. Long replied, a very pleasant evening was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

T. A. S. CELEBRATE FIFTH ANNIVERSARY

Rev. Dr. O'Brien Preached a Stirring Temperance Sermon Yesterday Morning.

The Society Attended Mass in Large Numbers, at St. Peter's Cathedral.

Five Years of Prosperous Existence — Membership is Steadily Increasing.

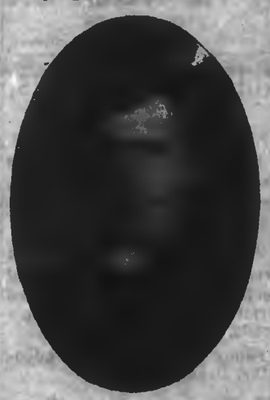
The members of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society turned out in very large numbers to mass at St. St. Peter's Cathedral at 8 o'clock yesterday morning on the occasion of the fifth anniversary of the founding of this Society. During its existence the Society has grown in numbers and its influence has grown with corresponding breadth until today the Society is in a most flourishing condition and is carrying on a noble work among the young men of the parish. It was indeed a gratifying sight to see such a large body of men attending Divine service, each a total abstainer and a member of this ever growing society which is certainly a credit not only to St. Peter's but to the town at large. The society is to be congratulated upon this, its fifth anniversary, and for the work which it has accomplished along not only temperance but other lines since its foundation.

CAUSE FOR THANKFULNESS.

A stirring temperance sermon was preached by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, who is himself a member and a very influential worker in the T.A.S. and an ardent supporter of the cause of temperance. It was with sentiments of gratitude and thanksgiving to God that the preacher addressed the large body of men represent the Total Abstinence Society and he wished to congratulate them upon this, their fifth anniversary. He thanked God because it was in Him and by Him that the work had been undertaken and carried to its present state of efficiency and the success was not due to religion or to the pledge which each had taken, but by trusting in God. At the present there were over 600 members and it was gratifying to see so many at the service.

THE NOBLEST OF MEN.

It was a matter of congratulation to the members that they belonged to the society and were keeping their pledge so faithfully and also



REV. DR. O'BRIEN,
Spiritual Adviser of the T. A. S., Who Preached Yesterday Morning.

because a total abstainer if he is a Christian also is the most noble of men because not only is he doing something to protect himself, something which God commends and the Scriptures commend, but he is helping his fellow men to lead a better life and what could be better than the helping of others along right lines of living.

DOING GRAND WORK.

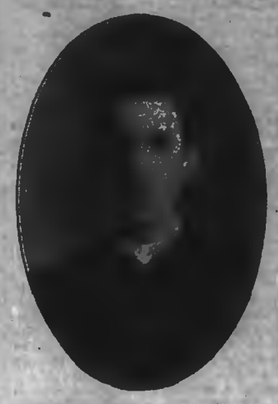
It had been the good fortune of the Society to be well officered at all times with men of self-sacrifice, who had spared neither time nor money in the cause so dear to their hearts. The men in the rank and file had also worked well and their deeds, would be known only in the judgment day. Many had spent hours each day for the past five years in striving to better their brothers and it was gratifying to see the success which has attended their efforts, and it would be a consolation to these to know that they had done much good not only an advancing the material interests and moral interests of those whom drink would have ruined but in benefitting to an unlimited extent their wives and families. By so doing, they were benefitting Society at large for society was made up of families and if the parts were bettered, society at large would be improved.

SOCIETY'S GROWTH.

The growth of the Society in members had been very marked. At the end of the first year, there were 100 members as compared with 633 at the present. There was a steady increase and all were aware of the good that was being done.

EVILS OF LIQUOR.

There were many connected with the church who were not members of the society and a few who had joined at some time, but who had fallen by the wayside. What good could come out of liquor? The natural and the supernatural man says it is an evil. There might not be any great harm in using it in careful moderation, but when we see its awful effects upon those who are addicted to its use, we should conclude that safety lies solely in total abstinence. The consumption of spirits in the last three years had increased by 24 per cent., and the number of convictions had increased by 33 per cent in Canada. These figures were enough to startle anyone. The argument raised by some that the system was benefitted by a moderate indulgence in spirits was one of no weight, for the best of physicians condemn its use as in use as injurious to the body, and the physician who recommends it should be put aside as a quack. It is a fact that it stimulates for a time, but it is only a temporary spur, and never a permanent cure. The natural man says to leave it alone, for a man cannot afford to trifle with it when he sees its terrible effects upon others. There is no excuse for its use, and there is likewise no excuse why all should not be total abstainers.



REV. FATHER F. J. O'SULLIVAN,
Of Lindsay, the Founder of the Society.

Dr. O'Brien did not wish to say that because there was a Total Abstinence Society in the parish, that all must be members, but when the results of the work of the Society are seen, and the effects which liquor has upon its victims are seen, it is hard to find a reason for remaining outside the society.

THE GREAT ENEMY.

There had been one persistent enemy during the whole five years of the society's existence, and that was the man who being aware that the society was trying to rescue an unfortunate from the evils of drink, would invite him, or give him liquor in a saloon. The speaker had been in many saloons, and it was his opinion that no place could so resemble hell as did the saloon. There might be good saloon keepers, but they were the exception, and a big exception, in Peterborough. What could be more contemptible, or debased, than to give liquor to a man who was trying to reform himself, and to break off from the habit. There was no excuse for the existence of these saloons. They were putting clothing on the back of the bar-room keeper while misery and poverty were the portion of those who frequented the saloon. The speaker had no fault to find with the hotel-keeper, but denounced the saloon-keeper, who ruined men and blighted families with his business. There had been objections to the recent bylaw, giving local option in Smith township, and those who raised these objections did so because there were no saloons, the keepers of these places would not have the opportunity of taking money away from those who needed it to support their families, many of which were often deprived of the necessities of life through the curse of excessive drinking on the part of the father of the family. Dr. O'Brien wished that all those present who were not total abstainers, would ask themselves how much better they would have been during the past had they not indulged in liquor, and those who were total abstainers how glad they were that they had overcome the temptations and were free from the evils of spirits. He asked all to join in the movement, for the members of the society would be satisfied only when God calls them away, or when every one in town was a total abstainer.

Dr. O'Brien's address was a practical, fluent and impressive effort, and one which could not fail to inspire the members of the society in the noble work in which they are engaged, and to influence those who were not total abstainers.

Mass was celebrated by His Lordship Bishop O'Connor, and the music was furnished by the Convent children.

Creesman's

GREAT PROGRESS WAS REPORTED

At Mr. McWilliams' Saturday Night Rally.

Stirring Speeches by Hon. J. R. Stratton, R. R. Hall, M.P., F. D. Kerr and the Candidate.

A highly successful Saturday night rally was held at Mr. McWilliams' Committee Rooms Saturday night. The large gathering of his active supporters assembled early and after an hour's committee work addresses were delivered. Reports indicate a very satisfactory and encouraging progress of the work of the campaign.

The chair was occupied by Mr. James Garrow, who spoke of the encouraging progress of the work of organization and registration.

Mr. Stratton, the first speaker, was very heartily received, and referred to the pleasure it gave him to meet so many supporters of Mr. McWilliams and the Ross Government. He was pleased to hear that the work of organization and registration was going forward very satisfactorily and that Mr. McWilliams, in his campaign in the country was meeting with very encouraging success. He went on to point out that, that when we reflected on what everybody knew it was surprising that Conservative speakers and campaigners should ignore such facts as showed that the educational interests of the province had been the subject of such successful administration; that the municipal system of the province had been brought by Liberal legislation to its present state of efficiency; that the interests of the working man had been adequately provided for, by the legislation that had been passed by a Liberal Government, and that the policy of the Liberal party was in favour of further progress in this direction. He then devoted some attention to a consideration of some of the wild and misleading statements made by some speakers in Mr. Bradburn's interest. In North Monaghan as reported in the Review, Mr. Peck had complained of the extravagant expenditure of the Liberal Government and that it was increasing. Of course it was increasing, and properly so, Mr. Stratton said. The Liberal Government would have been untrue to its duty if the expenditure of the province had not increased to meet provincial growth and increasing provincial needs. It had been charged by Mr. Peck that the expenditure of the province was two and a half dollars per head while that of the County of Peterborough was only one dollar per head. The comparison was not fair. The County had no expenditure such as the province had in the erection of new Normal Schools, Schools of Practical Science, new Asylum buildings, etc. —institutions that were needed, and saved expense to the county. The Province maintained at a cost of $1,000 per patient per year every insane person not able to pay, thus relieving the counties from local taxation. The Province also contributed to the maintenance of hospitals and charitable homes thus again relieving the counties. Ontario contributed large sums to every Public, Separate and High School and made liberal grants to poor schools in sparse districts. The province maintained the Central Prison and Mercer Reformatory and spent large sums every year to keep the public buildings of the province in repair. These were expenses with which the county had none to correspond and it was most unfair to compare county expenditure with provincial. This was, however, only a sample of the reckless and unfounded statements of extravagance made by Conservative stumpers. Mr. Peck forgot that the assessed value of the county had increased with no great growth of expenditure. Nobody but these professional critics was complaining of extravagance. Moreover the Liberal Government had not only provided that large sums were returned to the municipalities to obviate the necessity of taxation, but had also so managed the finances that we had abundant revenue and that, without a cent of direct taxation for provincial purposes. The Province could not return money to the people and keep it too. In the past over ninety-five millions had been returned to the people, and of this sum nearly a million—$959,930—had been returned directly to Peterborough County. Then, why should not the Provincial rate be two and a half dollars per head to one dollar for the county, if that was the ratio.

TO THE CREDIT OF THE GOVERNMENT.

Mr. Peck had stated at North Monaghan that "there was no special work giving the Government any claim to credit." What about the Temiscamingue railway which was doing and would do so much to develop the northern province, which we would not have had, with its wealth of timber, minerals, farm lands and revenue producing resources, if the Liberal had not won in its fight with the Conservative party for its possession. The building of this railway meant a tremendous development, and the providing of scores to homes for our farmers' sons, preventing their going to Manitoba. What about the development connected with the building of the Algoma Central Railway? What about the tremendous impetus to manufacturing industry represented by the action of the Government, bitterly opposed by Mr. Whitney and his friends, reviving the "Soo" industries.

These industries had been dead and would have remained so if the Government had not come to the rescue, by guaranteeing bonds which had not cost the country a cent. The guarantee of the Government gave confidence to capitalists and money was advanced to save the "Soo" industries —and they were saved and were now producing an output of nearly ten millions a year and paying out a million and a half dollars in wages alone. The action of the Government saved the steel rail mills from falling into the hands of the United States Steel Trust and they were now the only steel rail mills in the Dominion—producing 500 tons per —day and ready to supply all Canada with steel rails independently of any foreign country. Was man that something to claim credit for? That was something Mr. Whitney and the Conservatives had opposed in their short-sightedness. What about the pulp industry encouraged by the Government, in which over three million dollars was invested, converting our otherwise valueless pulp products into pulp and paper to the tune of millions of dollars worth? The Province had enough pulp wood to produce revenue at 40 cents per cord, of one hundred and fifteen million dollars—enough to stave off direct taxation for one hundred years. We could not get this revenue unless we had pulp mills, and the Government policy had started pulp mills and also preserved our pulp wood, for the Government had provided that not a stick could be exported in the raw state—it must all be manufactured in the county. (Applause.) The Government had set aside a million dollars for good roads, and, if Peterborough wished, it could draw as its share of this fund, $30,000. Mr. Stratton instanced these, and other things, to show that the Ross Government had done not a few, but many things, giving it grounds to claim credit; and, he added, that as brilliant as had been the record in these, and similar, regards of Sir Oliver Mowat's term of eighteen years, it had not so broad and progressive a record and policy as those of the Ross Government for five years. (Applause.)

WHAT WE SHOULD HAVE MISSED

Mr. Stratton then went on to point out what we would not have had if the Conservatives had had their way in what they opposed. We should not have had the municipal loan fund distribution of some three million dollars, making the municipalities that much richer; no election trial by judges, no ballot, no franchise for farmers' sons, no Minister of Agriculture, no School of Practical Science, no separation of liquor licenses from the evils of municipal control, no Normal Schools at Ottawa and London, no control of our provincial rivers and streams; we should not have had 100,000 square miles of New Ontario — the greatest and most promising revenue-producing part of Ontario; no good roads movement; no taxation of railways and rich corporations; no pulp wood industry; no great industries at the "Soo;" no steel rail mills; no independence of the United States Steel Trust; no legislation for the benefit of the labouring classes. For these things had been done by the Liberal Government in face of the active opposition or apathy of the Conservative Opposition. Dr. Morrison had also aired his political views at this meeting — had made charges that our timbered lands had been dealt with at random. Mr. Stratton showed that his knowledge of the facts was astray. No limit is sold without full advertising notice, nor without the Government inspects the limit, and fixes a reserve bid, which must be reached, before a bid is accepted. At the last sale the advertising had been so free, that the Legislative Chamber would hardly hold the bidders, and such high prices had been paid in the heat of competition that many wanted to withdraw from their bargains. Dr. Morrison was—mistaken. Would Mr. Whitney take such care of our timber limits, or would he do as the Conservative Government at Ottawa did?—give away timber limits, without advertising or competition, to political favourites, at $5 per square mile, instead of over $30,000 per square mile, as was obtained in the same territory, at the last Ontario timber sale. The school book monopoly was referred to by Dr. Morrison as yielding "fortunes" to publishers, enabling them to live in mansions. Reference was perhaps made to W. J. Gage, who had one of the finest residences in Toronto. He had been in business thirty years, and the school book business was the smallest branch of his enterprise. If anybody thought there was a fortune in publishing school books he could go into the business to-morrow — there was no monopoly. The cry of political corruption sounded strange from a party that was sitting up nights devising means to collect election funds. (Laughter.) Mr. Stratton concluded a vigorous speech, which was listened to with great attention, and frequently applauded, by expressing his pleasure at seeing the vigorous work that was being done for Mr. McWilliams. By continuing it, they would be giving Mr. Ross a supporter, by electing Mr. McWilliams. (Applause.)

MR. HALL'S REMARKS.

Mr. R. R. Hall, M. P., spoke briefly. He had just returned from a business trip, which took him to Dakota. There he had met a state official, who informed him that a direct tax was levied—as our municipal tax is collected — for asylums, education and other services, which are helped in Ontario by provincial funds, without a cent of direct taxation. We had spent twenty millions in Ontario on our asylums, without the people paying one cent of direct taxation. This showed in what better position we were in in Ontario, showing also that our business had been well managed. It was our interest to continue this management, if we wished to keep clear of direct taxation. We had vast resources of over $200,000,000 yet unrealised, and with a continuation of the management and policy that had initiated their development and preservation, we should be relieved of the fear of direct taxation, as they had in Dakota, for provincial purposes. The provincial business had been well managed, and the question at this time was a simple business proposition — to return a Government that had shown such splendid business capacity in the management of the provincial affairs. They would do this by electing Mr. McWilliams as a supporter of the Ross Government. (Applause.)

REMARKS OF MR. F. D. KERR.

Mr. F. D. Kerr said that the most effective way they could show their confidence in the Ross Government was by voting for Mr. McWilliams, who would make a good representative. He had attended one meeting with Mr. McWilliams in North Monaghan. The latter had been heartily received, and the manner in which he dealt with public questions indicated that he was well fitted to be a representative. Mr. Kerr pointed out that as the campaign in the province progressed the conditions became reversed. The Conservatives had said in the beginning that Mr. Ross was on the run. Now Mr. Ross was on the aggressive, and it was Mr. Whitney who was on the run. (Applause.)

THE CANDIDATE SPEAKS.

Mr. R. F. McWilliams, the candidate, was very cordially received. After another hard week's work in the country, he was greatly cheered to find what splendid work had been done at home. He cordially thanked those who had worked so hard, and with such fine success, in registration. The work had been well done, and with equal zeal applied to what remained to be done, the registered vote in town would be a great factor in the success he expected on January 25th. He had had another week of successful campaigning in the country, and was especially pleased with the meeting at Hamilmore which, in spite of the stormy weather, was attended by half of the electors in the township. The work was going on well. The Conservatives had entered this contest in a very cock-sure spirit, but they were feeling less confident. Outside the riding two or three things were contributing to this — the daily increasing strength Mr. Ross was developing, and the progressive weakening of Mr. Whitney. The people of the province could not be expected to relinquish their confidence in the Liberal Government for a party that had not one large or attractive item of policy to present. The people would not readily desert a government, which, in addition to a splendid record, took a forward stand, with a broad and progressive policy. (Applause.) The only policy presented by the Opposition was one of two orbs — "It was time for a change,"—so that they could get offices — and the cry of "corruption." It was charged that Liberals had not prosecuted offenders against the election law; that was false. Mr. Dewart had shown last Tuesday night that he as Crown prosecutor, had prosecuted many, and that fifty men that had been reported for corrupt practices had been prosecuted, and many had been heavily fined, or had spent terms in jail. On the cry of corruption, he was not afraid to meet his opponents at any time.

Mr. McWilliams, after announcing a joint meeting at Lakefield on Tuesday night in which he would meet Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Burnham, and also the meeting to be addressed in the opera house on Friday night, to be addressed by Hon. G. P. Graham Hon. J. R. Stratton, and by himself, concluded a brief, but snappy, speech amidst loud applause.

MR. ALEX. REID'S SON MARRIED

Mr. John W. Reid of Provo, Utah, Taken a Wife.

An interesting wedding ceremony took place in Provo, Utah, on Dec. 21st, 1904, when Mr. John W. Reid, a son of Mr. Alex. Reid, of town, was married to Miss Jean Maltby, of Provo.

The groom was, before his departure for the West, about 11 years ago, well known in Peterborough and news of his wedding will be received with interest here.

For about ten years he lived in Perth, N. B., and was in the employ of Mr. T. G. Campbell, now of Salt Lake City, at whose home he and his wife spent part of their honeymoon.

Mr. Reid is now manager of the Provo branch of the hardware firm of Brubaker and Campbell, and his many friends here will learn with pleasure not only of his marriage and its attendant happiness, but also of his success in material things as represented by the splendid position now held by him.

HUMOR

HE MEANT WELL.

But His Story Only Made Matters Worse Than What They Were.

The shepherd of a flock in a certain suburb of Chicago had been finding it difficult to keep on good terms with one of the factions. While the members of the congregation preserved an outward show of general friendliness, there was under the surface a bitterness that, try as he would, the preacher could not dispel. Things kept getting worse and worse until there was no longer any attempt to conceal the difference between the pastor and some twenty-five prominent members of the church. They were sure to line up on different sides of every proposition that was broached, and they spoke in anything but respectful terms of one another.

One Sunday morning just after the minister and those who were opposed to him had been in conflict at a business meeting the good man arose in the pulpit and began to tell his hearers of experiences that he had undergone in an Ohio city before being called hither.

"At one time," he said, "we had a terrible epidemic of typhoid fever, and I had occasion then to see how true it is that God sometimes does his work in mysterious ways. People who had previously been enemies were brought together in loving friendship by the afflictions that were put upon them during those trying days. Old quarrels were forgotten, a spirit of religious fervor swept through the town, and I was called upon to offer prayers in homes where only wickedness and blasphemy had been before. The scourge was terrible, but it also brought glorious results. I remember that on one Sunday twenty-four coffins lay before me as I entered my pulpit to preach. Oh, that we might have a repetition of that glorious regeneration here."

After that the breach seemed to grow wider, and it was not long before the congregation had a new guide.—Chicago Record-Herald.

An Explanation.

"We were bounding along," said a recent traveler on a local South African single line railway, "at the rate of about seven miles an hour, and the whole train was shaking terribly. I expected every moment to see my bones protruding through my skin. Passengers were rolling from one end of the car to the other. I held on firmly to my seat. Presently we settled down a bit quieter. At least I could keep my hat on, and my teeth didn't chatter.

"There was a quiet looking man opposite me. I looked up, with a ghastly smile, wishing to appear cheerful, and said:

"'We are going a bit smoother, I see.'

"'Yes,' he said. 'We're off the track now.'"—Kansas City Independent.

Willing Spirit, Weak Flesh.

The little woman placed her hands on her husband's shoulders and looked at him, her soul in her eyes.

"There isn't anything you would not attempt for me, is there, Henry?" she asked.

"Nothing," said Henry, his mouth shutting resolutely.

"You would even risk death for me, wouldn't you?"

"I would, and gladly."

"Then, dear, please go down in the basement and discharge the cook."

But Henry's face paled and his knees trembled, for he realized that he had spoken rashly.—Judge.

As It Should Be.

"Why do you think so?" queried the persistent solicitor.

TAMING A TIGER.

The Way a Showman Got Friendly With a Fierce Beast.

A zoologist thus describes how an attendant brought about friendly relations with a fierce tiger:

"There was a showman I used to know named Melchior. He once bought a magnificent Bengal tiger, which he got at a low price because it had already killed two men.

"At first Melchior would put his foot or his hand into his cage, but from the way the tiger would leap at him he knew that to put himself entirely in its power would be suicide. Nothing he could do would establish a friendly relationship between himself and the tiger.

"Some originality was needed, and Melchior showed it by taking some old clothes, stuffing them with rags and throwing them into the cage. The tiger in a jiffy tore the old clothes to pieces, thinking that the figure was a human being.

"Next day and the next day and the next Melchior continued to throw in to the tiger stuffed figures, and the tiger continued to destroy them. But as time passed the animal ceased to put heart into its work and in the end it gave up altogether these attacks on the scarecrows. It would just play with them or else not notice them at all.

"Now was Melchior's time. He opened the cage door one morning, walked in boldly and slapped the tiger familiarly on the back. It gave him a friendly look and purred. It took him for another manikin not worth bothering about. It lived seven years with Melchior and became as gentle as a kitten."

WORSHIPERS OF BAAL.

Queer Ways of an Extraordinary Sect in Turkey.

The Yezidees, the Baal worshipers or devil worshipers of Turkey, are an extraordinary people, and, although forced by the laws of conscription to serve in the Ottoman army, the seizure of one or more of their young men by a Turkish recruiting party is such a distressing spectacle that once witnessed it can never be forgotten.

Wails and yells of despair are raised. Men, women and girls kiss the recruit's eyes, cheeks, mouth and hands. Throwing themselves on the ground, they even embrace his legs and feet.

The conscript appears quite dazed with sorrow. He folds in his arms and caresses over and over again his weeping kindred, whom he will never see again. He kisses the walls and the hearth of the cabin in which he was born, but which he is about to quit forever, and wets them with his tears, but when, accompanied by his Turkish captors, he leaves the village the lamentations of the villagers cease.

Then, and as though nothing had happened, the latter go about their ordinary occupations. Never again is the conscript's name mentioned, and on joining his regiment the young Yezidee becomes a Mussulman. His kindred, believing him accursed, affect to forget him, and were he to approach the village from which he has been forcibly dragged away every Yezidee, even his dearest friends, his father, mother, brothers, sisters and sweetheart, would drive him from their presence with curses and pelt him with stones.

Earrings of Romans.

Both men and women wore earrings in ancient Rome. The latter were especially extravagant. Seneca wrote that some earrings worn by women were so costly that a single pair was worth the revenue of a large estate.

The Katydid's Song.

Everybody is familiar with the music of the katydid. It is the male that has the voice. At the base of each wing cover is a thin membranous plate. He elevates the wing covers and rubs the two plates together. If you could rub your shoulder blades together you could imitate the operation very nicely.

An Old Windmill.

At Buckingham, Sussex, England, there is a windmill which was built in 1668.

MAHOGANY WOOD.

The Way It Came to Be Used In the Making of Furniture.

Chippendale owes his reputation to the fact that he published a book of designs with over 200 copperplate engravings, so that today any one who wishes may get them and reproduce them exactly or with such changes and improvements as suit his fancy. That they are capable of improvement Chippendale himself was the first to declare. Chippendale was one of the first makers of mahogany furniture. Before his time this precious wood was valued only for the medicinal qualities it was supposed to possess.

The idea of making furniture of mahogany wood appears to have been the result of chance. A certain physician in London had a great many mahogany planks, and, wanting a candle box, he sent for a cabinetmaker and instructed him to use the mahogany for the required article of furniture. The man objected that the wood was too hard for his tools, and the doctor told him to get harder tools. The man did so, and when the doctor saw the box he was amazed at its beauty. Patients and friends talked about it, and at last the Duchess of Buckingham came to see it. She was enraptured and persuaded the doctor to give her wood for a similar box. As a result mahogany got to be the fashion.

HORSEPOWER.

The Unit as It Was Originated and Defined by Watt.

When steam engines were employed to drive mills, pumps and other machinery which had been previously driven by horses, it was natural to attempt to express the work done by them in terms of the working power of the horse.

James Watt was the first to define the unit of horsepower, which by experiment he found to be 33,000 foot pounds a minute. In other words, a one horsepower engine would raise 33,000 pounds one foot every minute, and so on proportionally to the number of "horsepowers" indicated by the engine.

He arrived at this conclusion by observing the work done by heavy dray horses in breweries working eight hours daily and found that a horse going at the rate of two miles and a half an hour could raise a weight of 150 pounds by a rope led over a pulley, which is equal to 33,000 pounds raised one foot in one minute.

Watt, for the credit of his engines, selected horses of more than average power.

Engineers' Watches.

It is vitally important that railroad engineers should have accurate timepieces. One is seldom seen with an expensive watch unless it has been presented to him by the company as a memorial of long and faithful service or for some deed of heroism. A dealer tells me that the works in engineers' watches are of standard make, costing the uniform price of $18. The style of the case depends on the purchasing ability of the buyer, the price ranging from $2 to as many hundreds as one wants to waste on gold and gems. Most cases are silver. For many years the works were manufactured by a firm in the west. Ere long wireless electric clocks will be used in engine cabs, so that the time all over the road will be the same to a fraction of a second. There will be fewer accidents then.—New York Press.

Saving Money Orders.

The postal authorities have discovered that the money order system is now being extensively used by people who like to hoard their money. Those who formerly used their stockings now purchase money orders and lay them away. The order is payable within seven years and unless destroyed or defaced is as good as a government bond without the interest within the period named.

Not Wholly Useless.

"Can't you discover one thing your son-in-law is good for?"

"Yes, I know of one thing, but I do not happen to have any sharks to fat him."

A WOODEN INTRODUCTION.

How Gainsborough Got Acquainted With Thicknesse.

Gainsborough, the artist, was born at Sudbury, in England, and there, says Lord Ronald Gower, he designed his first work of art. The orchard of his father's place had been repeatedly plundered of fruit. No one knew who the thief might be until one day young Gainsborough saw there a rough looking man leaning his elbows on the brick wall. He made a sketch of the fellow, and from this portrait the thief was afterward identified.

Later the boy cut out a rough figure from wood and painted it in oils in the likeness of this man. The scarecrow was known as "Jack Peartree." It probably represents Gainsborough's first attempt at working in oils.

It was the means of introducing the artist to one of his most intimate friends, Thicknesse, the lieutenant governor of the Landguard fort, near Ipswich. Thicknesse was one day walking with a friend when he perceived what seemed to be a melancholy faced countryman, with his arms locked together, leaning over the garden wall.

He pointed out the doleful figure to his companion, who, it seems, was acquainted with it.

"He has been there all day," said the gentleman. "I pity him. He must be either mad or very miserable."

Thicknesse insisted on approaching the wretched man and to his delighted surprise found him to be Jack Peartree. So changed was he with Jack that he lost no time in becoming acquainted with the author of Jack's being, with the result of a warm and lasting friendship.

Doubtful Economy.

"Of course," he said, "I appreciate the motive that actuates you in your efforts to get along without a cook, but"—

"Well?" she said inquiringly as he paused.

"Taking everything into consideration," he went on, "is it true economy?"

"Isn't it?" she demanded.

"Well, I hardly feel competent to pass judgment on the question," he replied. "I have just received our family physician's bill for the treatment of those three cases of acute dyspepsia that developed in the family during the last month. Now, perhaps"—

But she was just as mad as if he hadn't tried to break it to her gently.

The English Face.

An American woman not long since returned from abroad was heard to say that what chiefly struck her in the English faces she met during her walks was their resigned expression.

"They didn't look sad, and they didn't look happy," she explained, "but they one and all had the air of awaiting the worst and being prepared for it. And that," she added vindictively, "is the only state of mind possible with the English climate."

Worried.

"Why, dear," said the poet's wife after the acceptance of his first poem by a magazine, "what is the matter? You seem to be awfully downcast."

"Yes," he sadly replied. "I am. I'm worried about our child. The sons of great men seem to have such a poor chance to turn out well, you know."

Too Busy.

"De man dat goes through de world findin' fault," said Uncle Eben, "has picked out sech an easy job for hisse'f dat he can't expect much appreciation."

To Loosen the Cough

AND BRING ABOUT A THOROUGH CURE OF COLDS, USE

It is sometimes dangerous to stop a cough.

The aim should be to loosen the cough, relieve the tightness and pain in the chest and aid expectoration so that the obstructing and irritating mass may be passed out of the air passages.

This is exactly what is accomplished by the use of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine.

It is not a mere cough mixture, and not intended to stop the cough, but rather to cure the cold.

If you have tickling in the throat, pains and tightness in the chest, sensations of irritation, of oppression, or suffocation this great family medicine will afford almost instant relief and thoroughly overcome the cold which gives rise to these symptoms.

Not only is Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine a positive cure for croup, bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma and severe chest colds, but is also a preventative of all diseases of the lungs.

It has time and again proven its right to a place in every home, and is the standby in thousands of families.

Mrs. F. Dwyer, Chesterville, Ont., says: "My little girl of three years had an attack of bronchial pneumonia. My husband and I thought she was going to leave this world, as her cough resisted the doctor's treatment. I bought a bottle of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine from our popular druggist, W. G. Bolster. After the first two or three doses the child began to get better and we are thankful to say is all right to-day, after seven weeks' sickness."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

The Substitute

By WILL N. HARBEN,

Author of "Abner Daniel," "The Land of the Changing Sun," "The North Walk Mystery," etc.)

Copyright, 1903, by HARPER & BROS.

"I said I felt relieved to have 'im go off," whimpered Mrs. Buckley, "but after awhile I missed 'im, an' of I could 'a' had 'im back without the responsibility of what he'd do I'd 'a' been willin'. When me 'n' 'im got married it was so different. George, I'd 'a' picked yore pa out of a thousand men. I was so proud of 'im, an' was the happiest woman alive for several years after you was born. George, of he gits well and serves his time out I think me 'n' 'im had better move off somers whar we don't conflict with yore interests. I see my duty clearer now. I'll stick to 'im fer better or worse as long as me or 'im lives."

George Buckley's head sank for an instant, then he looked up and gazed at her tenderly.

"There is nothing, mother, that can keep me from being with you and him. When his time is out we'll all live together. I've made up my mind on that point. He's a convict, and I want things different, but he's my father and you are my mother, and that settles it."

The old woman started away. She had reached the door, but turned back and stood near him. "George," she said huskily, "you are a good boy," and then she slowly walked away.

She came in about the middle of the afternoon ready for her train, and as he was walking with her to the station she surprised him with a confession.

"I don't think I ort to keep back a thing from you, George," she said, "an' I'm goin' to tell you some'n' I did that I don't feel right about."

"What was that, mother?"

"George"—she looked up hesitatingly, as it creating an displeasure—"I used Lydia Cranston ag'in. Jes' a day or two before she accepted the governor's invite to Atlanta she driv out home in her buggy an' come in to see me. She didn't ax me not to tell you, but I'm sure she wouldn't want you to know. She told me all about her trouble, cryin' like 'er heart ud break. Her pa was in a critical condition an' wanted 'er to go, an' 'er ma was dingdongin' at 'er night an' day. She didn't say right out that she loved you, but her actions said it, an' she knowed I understood. She don't like that man a bit, but her pa wants 'er to marry 'im, an' she's afeard it will kill 'im of she refuses. George, she axed me right out what I thought she ort to do, an' to save my life I didn't know—I couldn't tell. She told me she loved me, George, that her own mother never'd been good to 'er an' never understood 'er an' that she'd come to me fer advice. I hugged her up in my arms, an' she sobbed like a baby, but we never got no nigher solvin' the riddle. When she went down to the big party the governor give 'er, I thought maybe she'd decided to marry to suit 'er folks."

"She has," Buckley said, swallowing his emotion. "But let's not talk about it. That's all over, mother. She and I live in absolutely different worlds."

"No, you don't, nuther," said Mrs. Buckley. "She's jest a good, natural, lovin' woman that wants to do her duty accordin' to her lights, but thar is a sight agin you both, an' thar's no gittin' round it. A heap o' people blame a sin like yore pa's on a child, an' that family, folks tell me, has never mixed with crime o' any sort."

She broke down and began to cry again.

"It was all my fault," he answered sadly. "I ought not to have visited their house so much. My trial will come, mother, when she is Telfare's wife. I get desperate when I think of that."

"Well, try not to think of it," she said.

Her train was coming, and he went to buy her ticket. He found her a seat and then kissed her goodby.

"Telegraph if you need me," he said. "I'll come on the first train."

CHAPTER XXIX.

THE next morning, when George was alone in the office, a middle aged, hard faced countryman slouched in.

"Is this Hillyer's warehouse?" he asked.

"Yes," said George. "Anything I can do for you?"

"Well, not exactly fer me," said the man, "but old Squire Deck—I reckon you know him, over in Gilmer?"

"I know of him," George responded.

"Well, he sent me to ax of you ums would let 'im put his will in your safe—that is, of you got one; the squire didn't know whether you had or not." The man was looking about the room. "I don't see none, I'm shore."

"It's there in the vault," George explained, pointing to the big steel door.

"Oh, it's in thar? Well, I reckon it's good an' strong."

"One of the best in the country," George said, leaving his high stool and opening the outer door.

"One o' them com-combination locks?"

"Yes—that's it. Did you bring the paper with you? We are always glad to accommodate people."

"No; I didn't fetch it. He told me to inquire. I never did like the notion o' them combination locks, as fer's I'm concerned," said the man. "Too many folks has got the password into 'em. Now, a good, stout key that shoves a steel bolt into a good, strong socket is hard to beat."

"I'm the only one about here that knows this combination," Buckley explained politely. "We change it quite often too. Even Mr. Hillyer doesn't keep up with it unless I'm going away."

"Oh, well, I reckon it will be safe enough, an' I'll tell the squire about it when I go back."

The man turned out of the warehouse, crossed the railway tracks and walked on till he was in the woods on the edge of the village. Here he was met by two other men who, glancing about furtively, came out into the open to meet him.

* * * * * * *

George had considerable work to do that night in the office. The safe was already closed and the front and rear doors of the building were locked and barred. Countrymen often came about the warehouse early in the evening, and, as he wished to be undisturbed, he closed the door to keep them from knowing he was there. He also closed the heavy wooden shutters of the front windows that the light of his lamp might not show through to the street. He worked on unconscious of the passage of time from 8 o'clock until near midnight. Suddenly he detected a sound like the crunching of a grain of wheat under foot, and, looking round, he saw three men standing behind him with leveled revolvers.

"What does this mean?" he asked, his eyes fixed on the rigid face of the man who... he recognized as his visitor of that afternoon. "Is this a trap?"

"That's about the size of it, young man," was the cool reply. "Now, you keep yore seat on that stool an' don't bat yore eye. The fool on my left's got a gun that's powerful easy on trigger, an' it's all he kin do to keep his finger up. Don't shoot 'im, Bill, till I've give 'im a chance."

"What is it you want?" George asked. He was not frightened, but the situation certainly was a grave one, and he felt that he had little, if any, chance for his life.

"We are mountain hoosiers," said the leader of the men, "but we hain't fools by a long shot. We know our business as well as you know yore'n, an' that's no need talkin' you ef you don't git a move on yorself an' open that safe you'll never open it agin."

"That's it, then?"

"Yes, that's it. This is one time when you've got to knuckle ur git the wust of it."

George glanced toward the front door.

"You needn't be lookin' fer a way out," said the mountaineer, "an' you needn't expect the night watchman to be pacin' along by here. He's dead drunk. I know, kase I furnished the liquor an' aged it take effect."

"So you think you can force me into this thing," said George. "Do you know, I'd rather die right here than let you rob that safe while it is in my care?"

"Oh, come off; you are no fool, Buckley. Open the safe. We are not here to palaver. At least say positive whether you will or not. I'll jest give you sixty seconds by that clock up thar. Boys, ef he don't open the safe in one minute from now pull down on 'im an' don't miss fer all you do. You'd rather die, had you, Buckley? Well, we'll see if that's so or not. He's a chip off'n the old block, boys. His daddy couldn't keep his hands off'n other folks' things, an' his life wasn't at stake. He'll wilt, all right."

"So that's the reason you thought I'd give in," said George, now quite pale, his lips quivering.

"Well, that's one reason," said the man. "But what's the use o' talkin'? Time is passin'. Jest another half minute, boys. Git ready. He may be fool enough to want to defy us."

Hundreds of thoughts flashed through George Buckley's brain. There was, indeed, a large amount of money in the safe, and thousands of dollars of it belonged to poor people who had brought it to him and Hillyer in absolute faith as to its security. Could he give up their money to save his own life, and—

"Another quarter," said the leader of the men. "I'll count six, and of he don't move when I say six, pull down together. Listen! That's the 12 o'clock train. Fire just as it's passin', boys. We won't take no reak on the sound reachin' outside."

George heard the coming train. The rumble of it was felt in the walls of the building. The mountaineer was measuring its approach by counting slowly: "One—two—three—four"—

"Put down your guns," said George Buckley. "No man can expect another to sacrifice his life for a little money. I've done the best I can. Put down your guns."

"That's the talk, young feller. You are no fool. For a minute you tuck this thing so darn cool I—thought you was goin' to commit suicide. But keep 'im covered, boys. We don't take no chances on him, nur no other chap."

"You needn't be afraid," said George, with a cold, hard smile. "You fellows are simply too much for me. They say every man has his price; I reckon you'll give me part of the money. I want to leave the country. They will all say I was concerned in it—because of my father. Is that understood—I'm to get part?"

"Yes, that's understood," said the leader eagerly. "Boys, we'll have to divide with 'im—he's the right sort."

The train rattled by. George left his stool and went to the safe. With a hand that gleamed like that of a dead man's in the lamplight, he twirled the combination bolt back and forth; then he suddenly turned to them, passing his hand wearily over his brow.

"Look here," he said, "I'll have to confess that you've rattled me. I opened the lock today, and the letters of the combination have slipped my mind."

"Ah!" snarled the man addressed. "You can't come that on us. Boys, he's tryin' to gain time. He thinks we can't git in the safe. Sock it to the"—

"Hold on!" George held up his hand, still smiling mechanically. "Don't fly off the handle. I can figure out the combination in a few minutes if you'll only take those blasted guns off me and stand back. I'm not made of stone. How can a man get his mind on a thing like that while you are pointing revolvers at him. Leave me alone a minute. I'm with you, but give me a minute to collect myself—to think it out."

The leader laughed. "Boys," he said, "he's scared a sight wuss 'n he looks. That's a compliment to us. Stand outside the office. I'll stay with 'im, but of you hear the slightest noise run in."

The two men did as ordered, and George sank into a chair at Hillyer's desk. He drew a blank sheet of paper to him and dipped a pen.

"Now git to work," said the leader, approaching and looking over his shoulder.

George glared up at him. "Not unless you keep away from me. Get back," he demanded sharply, "or I'll threw it up."

"Well, you needn't be so tetchy," and the burglar retreated to the door, where he stood leaning against the wall. George had gained his point. Under the pretense of trying to recall the combination he had gained time for something he had in view. He was going to write a note to Hillyer and cautiously slip it into the old man's day-book on the desk. This is what he hastily penned and addressed to Hillyer:

Three unknown men have me covered with revolvers to force me to open safe. They think I am now studying out combination. Escape impossible. I know you would rather have me give in, but I can't. The world believes the son of a thief will steal, and it would say I was a party to the crime. I'm tired of the struggle anyway. I never would have committed suicide, but am not averse to this chance to prove I despise dishonesty. Do this one thing for me: Tell L. C. I died hoping it would show that I am an honest man. I don't believe these men can possibly get into the safe, and by refusing them the combination I can save your money and the money deposited by many poor people who need it. Tell her the only horror I have in facing this thing tonight is in leaving her to become that man's wife. God knows he cannot take care of her or make her happy. I discovered in Atlanta that he is a bankrupt. Tell her that—

"Say, are you goin' to take all night?" cried the man at the door.

George deftly slid the unfinished letter into the book on the desk and drew another sheet of paper to him. This sheet he held before his eyes as if studying it as he turned to the speaker.

"I say, are you goin' to set thar all night?" repeated the burglar testily.

George tore the sheet into small bits and threw them on the floor. "I've been thinking it over," he said. "You've got the upper hand of me, but"—he stood up and leaned on the back of his chair, grasping it firmly. "I'm going to refuse."

"Refuse?"

"Yes, I'm going to refuse." George's fingers closed on the posts of the chair like prongs of steel, and, swinging it upward, he sprang toward the man on guard. But he was not quick enough. With a grunt of alarm the burglar fired directly at his breast. George had seen his peril and tried to dodge, but the shot struck him in the forehead, and he reeled, tottered against the wall and fell. The others rushed in and would have fired again at the prostrate form, but their leader stopped them with a motion of his hand. Kneeling, he put his hand in the vicinity of Buckley's heart.

"That will do," he said grimly. "He's done for. Now, git yore tools and set to work. We can't afford to miss on this job now."

WILL IT CURE ME?

That's the personal question a woman asks herself when she reads of the cure of womanly diseases by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription.

Why shouldn't it cure her?

Is it a complicated case? Thousands of just such cases have been cured by "Favorite Prescription." Is it a condition which local doctors have declared incurable? Among the hundreds of thousands of sick women cured by the use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription there are a great many who were pronounced incurable by local doctors. Many have been worried by "well-meaning" neighbors in the cure of leucorrhœa, unnatural drains, inflammation, ulceration and female weakness. It helps. It almost always cures.

PETERBORO' LADY WAS HONOURED

Miss H. P. Bennett Made Receptient of a Beautiful Painting.

The Ottawa Citizen of Friday said:—

A very pretty ceremony took place at Mutchmor Street school this morning, when the teaching staff bade farewell to Miss H. P. Bennett, who has left the staff to take a position in the civil service. As a token of affection and appreciation of her genial character her associates presented her with a beautiful carbon copy of the painting Dante's Dream by Rosetti. Principal Miller made the presentation, giving in connection therewith a short address, in which he spoke very highly of Miss Bennett's four years' service in the school. The recipient of the gift made a short reply. The vacancy upon the staff was filled by the public school board by the appointment of Miss Ardley of Gladstone avenue.

TO-NIGHT'S LECTURE TO FORTNIGHTLY CLUB

Mr. Edmund Jones of Toronto to Give an Illustrated Lecture.

Mr. Edmund Jones, a lawyer from Toronto will deliver his lecture on the Temiscamingue District, before the Fortnightly Club, at the Y.M.C.A., this evening. The lecture will be illustrated by lantern slides. Mr. Jones is an explorer and has been all through the Temiscamingue and Timagami country. It will be a matter of much importance to those interested in the development of the northern country to know at first-hand a good deal about it. In many ways it is a most romantic and attractive region and is said to be a paradise of the hunter and fisher and to those who seek peaceful pursuits in pure air and fine scenery.

As membership tickets for the whole course is only 25c., the admission to to-night's lecture will be to members only.

ANNIVERSARY AT GEORGE STREET

Rev. Caleb Parker, of Norwood Preached Yesterday

Two Practical Semons—The Music During the Day.

Anniversary services were held in the George street church yesterday, the Rev. Caleb Parker, of Norwood, being the preacher of the day. Mr. Parker took for his morning subject "Eternal Life," basing his remarks on the text, I Tim. IV, 8.

The evening sermon was an exposition of the text, Rev. ii, 17, "To him that overcometh will I give to eat of the hidden manna, and will give him a white stone, and in the stone a new name which no man knoweth save he had receiveth it."

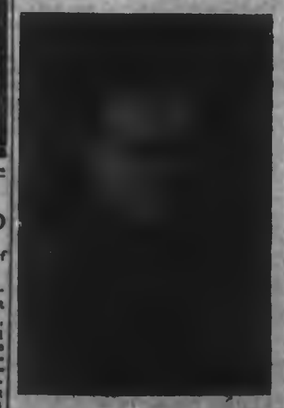
Great men, like great thoughts, are very scarce. The writer of these words was truly great. He was not heard of, however, in the halls of science, and the philosophers of the time knew very little of him. He was intensely good; goodness of the highest type was his possession, and to him was given the power to look into the future. First of all we have in the text the overcomer Man fits his place. "As I study God's laws and God's character, and come in contact with mankind, and look at his destiny, and at the great world of nature, I see that the one great Being that made the one, made the other. Look at man in his first condition, living with no sinful tinge upon his conscience. Then comes transgression, and it becomes necessary for the visit of the Lord Jesus Christ to the world to redeem man. But powers were placed within him and man was made the arbiter of his own destiny. First of all, man has to overcome self, and man has had placed within him the great force called Will. It may be a great thing to go out and fight the battles of the world, to solve the great problems of the world, to have a high place in the affairs of the country, but to conquer self and the evil propensities of our nature, and to make it possible for God to live with us, is a grander and greater thing still. Then, there is the world to overcome. God has made a beautiful world for man to dwell in, but there is a hostile element in it that the Christian has to contend with. Finally, we have the arch enemy, Satan, to contend with. To him that overcometh is promised the hidden manna. Whatever the religious life may be it is largely hidden. We cannot see how God works in the human soul, but the results are apparent. "And to him that overcometh, will be given the white stone," the talismanic stone significant of the secret understanding and covenant between man and his Maker. What God wants is not a race of cowards, but a race of overcomers. God has entrusted the destiny of the world into the hands of His followers, and as we work out our own destiny we are working out the divine purpose in reference to the world."

The music throughout the day was given with good effect. The morning anthem was "As Christ upon the Cross." In the evening the choir sang, the anthem, "Sun of My Soul," and a male quartette, Messrs. Davis, Browne, Gardiner and Cunningham, sang "The Wayside Cross," Mr. Browne taking the solo.

Large congregations were present at both services, which were of a very interesting nature.

CONSERVATORY CLASSES IN GERMAN.

Classes in German, Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, teacher, will open at the Peterborough Conservatory of Music on Wednesday, 11th, at 3 o'clock.



REV. E. A. LANGFELDT, M.A.

These classes will afford an excellent opportunity to learners. There will also be evening classes, which will be appreciated by vocalists preparing themselves for examination, when a knowledge of German is necessary or desirable.

EXPLANATORY.

A disgusting error crept into the Examiner on Saturday, through the failure of the printer to furnish a proof of a heading in an article referring to the Goodfellow incident in Toronto. In the heading the words, "I Don't Care for the Lord" were written "I Don't Care for the Law."

A DOUBLE CALLA LILY

A Botanical Rarity Grown by Mr. Daniel Hennessy, Fifth Ward.

Mr. Daniel Hennessy, Fifth Ward, has left with the Examiner, a beautiful rarity in the form of a double calla lily, on a single stem, a very rare sport of this interesting plant. The flower, which botanists say is no true flower, but an abnormally developed leaf, is otherwise remarkable. The outside calyx is of unusual proportions, being nine inches in length and six and a half inches in breadth. Within the larger calyx, and surrounding the pistil, common to both, is a smaller calyx, three and a half by five inches, with the tip turned in an opposite direction to that of the outer calyx. The plant producing the double calla lily is said, by florists, who grow them by hundreds, to be very rare, perhaps one occurring in a thousand blooms, sometimes none, in that number. Mr. Hennessy's double beauty was grown on a plant ten years old, which has been blooming for seven years, but not in the heterodox manner it has recently exhibited.

THE TOWN COUNCIL ORGANIZES FOR WORK

The Standing Committees for the Year are Appointed—Board of Works to Deal With Assessment Commissions Question

The Money Bylaws Approved by the People Receive Their Third Reading—Town Business Attacked with Promising Energy

This is Peterborough's civic cabinet and executive council for the year of grace 1905. These are the men to whom we look, and it is to be hoped justifiably, for the efficient management of the town's business for the coming twelve months.

The Standing Committees of the Town Council for the year 1905, are as follows:—

Board of Works — Ald. Adams, Chairman; Tovey, Batten, Johnston, Hall and Hicks.

Manufactures (Railways and Franchises)—Ald. Hicks, Chairman; Begley, Adams, Tovey, Hall and McIntyre.

Finance (Licenses and Printing) — Ald. Mason Chairman; Batten, Leary, Adams and Crowe.

Legal (Legislation and Court of Revision)—Ald. Scott, Chairman; Johnston, Mason, McIntyre and Begley.

Property (Building and Market)—Ald. Batten, Chairman; Hicks, Leary, Crowe and Scott.

Fire, Water and Light—Ald. Johnston, Chairman; Hall, Tovey, McIntyre and Crown.

Supervision (Reception and Health) Ald. Hall, Chairman; Scott, Mason, Johnston, Leary and Begley.

The above arrangement of Committees was last night adopted on the recommendation of the Committee appointed to strike the list for the year. A clause granting the Mayor $400 to defray the contingent expenses of his office was adopted.

THE EVENINGS' BUSINESS.

The new Council made a good record last night by beginning well on time, and devoting the whole of an hour and a half's session to business.

A proposal to change the mode of assessing by the appointment of a commissioner was referred to the Board of Works.

The third readings were given the $20,000 and $12,000 by-laws recently approved of by the ratepayers.

Messrs. Robert Fair and Vincent Eastwood were appointed School Trustees, and Messrs. Wm. Eyres and George Schneider, members of the Board of Health.

Immediate action will be taken with reference to the extension of streets, in accordance with the by-law just passed. The request of W. H. Meldrum for a siding on East Simcoe street will also receive early attention.

Indignation was freely expressed with regard to post office conditions, and the Council will memorialize the Government in that regard.

The appointment of an inspector of plumbing and sewer construction will be reported upon at next meeting by the Legal Committee.

The Property Committee will see what can be done towards erecting a carters' stand on the market square.

Ald. Tovey evidenced that he knows considerable about the requirements of the South Ward when he pointed out that snow-plowing was not done well in that section, and that the arc lights were put out too early in the morning. He also complained of the inclination of loafers to cluster on George street.

Last night's Council meeting may well be considered an important one, the new members evidencing a healthy desire to take hold. There were present, His Worship, Mayor Best, Aldermen Adams, Scott, Batten, McIntyre, Tovey, Hall, Leary, Crowe, Mason, Hicks, Begley and Johnston.

The minutes of last meeting were confirmed.

A communication was read from the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company, stating that as they purposed erecting a smokestack on their premises it would be necessary to plant a pole on Aylmer street. They asked for the necessary permission.

On motion of Ald. Adams, seconded by Ald. Johnston, the request was granted, subject to the supervision of the Town Engineer.

Ald. Adams presented the report of the Committee appointed to strike the standing committees, which recommended as above.

THE ASSESSMENT ACT.

Ald. Adams, referring to the proposed change in the mode of assessing, moved that the matter be left in the hands of the Committee of the Whole. It was advisable that action be taken at the earliest possible date, in order that the new Assessment Act be thoroughly understood by the official or officials appointed.

Ald. Johnston seconded Ald. Adams' motion which was carried.

BY-LAWS PASSED.

Ald. Mason, as Finance Minister, introduced the third reading of a by-law to authorize the borrowing of $20,000 for the purpose of making improvements, extensions and alterations in the waterworks system of the town of Peterborough. This by-law was approved of by the ratepayers at the municipal elections, and it was given its final reading last night.

Ald. Hall and Ald. Tovey introduced a by-law to appoint High School Trustees and member of the Board of Health. The Trustees selected were Mr. Robert Fair and Mr. Vincent Eastwood. The appointments were moved by Ald. Hall and seconded by Ald. Johnston.

Ald. Crowe moved in amendment on the by-law that Dr. Boucher be substituted for Mr. Eastwood. He had heard of some complaints with regard to the putting in of a heater and purchasing of supplies.

Ald. Johnston said he had considered the complaints referred to and discussed them with Mr. Eastwood, and the conclusion he had come to was that Mr. Eastwood might benefit by the experience of the year and should be given another term.

Ald. Crowe's amendment was not seconded, and the original motion carried.

The members of the Board of Health appointed were Mr. George Schneider and Mr. William Eyres.

An amendment to substitute Mr. James Middleton for Mr. Eyres was defeated by a vote of seven to five, and the by-law was read a third time and passed.

Ald. Mason moved the third reading of a by-law authorising the borrowing of $12,000 for the purpose of re-constructing and repairing bridges in the town of Peterborough, and purchasing land for the opening of new streets. The by-law was passed.

In reply to a question, the Mayor pointed out that the work intended under this by-law was in the hands of the Board of Works.

OPENING OF STREETS.

In connection with the opening of the streets, Ald. Adams pointed to the necessity for immediate action, and moved that a committee be appointed to secure the necessary rights of way for street openings and that the committee have authority to instruct the solicitor to give notice of appropriation of any property needed, if satisfactory arrangements could be made, the committee to be Ald. Mason, Ald. Hall and Ald. Adams.

The motion was seconded by Ald. Johnston and carried.

D. BELLEGHEM,
Issuer of Marriage Licenses
Office, 180 Hunter Street, Peterborough

In reply to Ald. Hall, the Mayor stated that the town solicitor had the matter of purchase of the Separate School property in hand, and that it would undoubtedly be closed up as soon as possible. He did not think that any difficulty would arise in getting the Government to pay their share.

MR. MELDRUM'S SIDING.

Ald. Batten pointed to the necessity of action being taken to give Mr. Meldrum the required siding rights at the east end of Simcoe-st. Mayor Best replied that the hitch seemed to be with the owners of the Dawson property and the engineers interested. So long as the parties in the case assumed all responsibility with regard to the Dawson people the town was willing to agree. He suggested that a committee of the whole receive the railway people at any time when they were ready to meet.

This was embodied in a resolution and carried.

POST OFFICE CONDITIONS.

Ald. Johnston emphasized the importance of the Council memorialising the Government for improvement of the post office. The conditions here were disgraceful. A promise had been made some time ago, but no action had been taken. There should either be better facilities in the office or free delivery.

Ald. Tovey in speaking on the by-law, said that conditions at the office were only fit for the back woods. He had been a witness of a disgraceful scene there on the 2nd of January, when a gang of men used brute force in ploughing their way through the crowd gathered about the solitary wicket. It was surprising that the merchants had stood for these things so long.

Ald. Begley also stated that he had been promiscuously hurled into the stampede at the office, and he had seen one man lose a coat sleeve, and a lady thrown against the ledge. The greatest good to the greatest number should be considered. There was here no system whatever, and he questioned whether there was anything to equal it even in the Yukon. The existing state of affairs was disgraceful, and the Council should insist on a remedy. The time was at hand when the town should have free delivery. Many people had spoken to him on the matter. The conditions were such as to place a blot on the fair names of the town, in the opinion of strangers.

Ald. Hall pointed out that the member for West Peterborough had impressed the Government on this matter and the Minister of the Department had assured him that just as soon as the holiday rush was over immediate action would be taken in connection with the office here. The conditions existing were disgraceful and some step should be taken, even if the police were necessary in order to have some system adopted.

Ald. Johnston was of opinion that the present office was too small even if there were three wickets and Peterborough should be satisfied with nothing short of postal delivery.

Ald. Hall explained that the excuse given by the Government was that if Peterborough secured delivery other towns from 5,000 up would be after the same thing.

PLUMBING INSPECTOR.

Ald. Adams impressed the necessity that an inspector of plumbing be appointed. This was important when the public health was considered. Last year the Legal Committee had charge of the questions.

Mayor Best said that it was also

SUNDAY SCHOOL WAS PROSPEROUS

Annual Meeting of Murray Street Sunday School Last Week

Election of Officers and Report of the Secretary—Good Work Being Accomplished.

The annual meeting of the Murray Street Baptist Sunday School was held on Friday evening and was well attended. The reports showed that the school was enjoying prosperity and that the work was being carried on successfully.

The officers were elected as follows for the ensuing year:—

Superintendent—E. B. Edwards.
Assistant Superintendent—A. Martin.
Secretary—Miss Mary Garbutt.
Treasurer—Mr. J. Barnard.
Librarian—A. J. Raddon.
Assistant Librarian—Miss E. Smith.
Organist—Miss Aldridge.

Executive Committee—Messrs. E. B. Edwards, Geo. Lee, A. J. Raddon, Miss Nicholls, Miss Ellis and the Secretary.

The Secretary's report was presented as follows:—

The past year is, in many respects the ber of scholars have united with the church. While Mr. Bastow was with us, he and Mrs. Bastow were untiring in their efforts for the religious welfare of the scholars and Mr. Edwards and the teachers have likewise been very much in earnest in this regard.

In the matter of attendance there has been a very marked improvement. Last year our average attendance was 161, but this year we are pleased to be able to state it reaches 197, a net gain for the year of 43, which is a very creditable showing. As usual we held our Sunday School, during the months of July and August at 10 a. m., and with very satisfactory results. Our average attendance for these two months was 145, compared with 96 for the corresponding two months last year, or almost double. Last year we were able to report three scholars as being present every Sunday; this year there have been 16 scholars and 2 teachers who have not missed a Sunday, or if they have not been present at our school have brought a card showing their presence at some most satisfactory, the Sunday School has ever had. The religious interest has been very marked and a large number school out of the town. The names of these scholars are:—Bessie Elcombe, Willie Hardwick, Samuel Oliver, Anna Green, James Ellis, Robert Lang, Agnes Eastwood, Ethel Rutherford, Selina Oliver, Ethel Hardwick, Mamie Robinson, May Stabler, Minnie Ellis, Ethel Kennedy, Clifton Kidd, Bertram Cross, Mr. Geo. Lee and Mrs. Ellis. In addition to these 11 scholars missed only one Sunday.

In regard to star classes, last year Miss Bradshaw's class headed the list with a total of 76 Sundays. This year Mrs. Elcombe's class has the largest number to its credit with a total of 79 Sundays. Other classes with a good record are:—

Mrs. Ellis—33 Sundays.
Mrs. Martin—30 Sundays.
Mrs. Chalmers—29 Sundays.
Miss Miller—29 Sundays.

According to the records furnished the secretary, Minnie Ellis and Mabel Stabler have each recited verses on 48 Sundays of the year, Emily Miller on 44 Sundays, Mamie Montgomery on 37 and Hazel Kidd on 32.

The average attendance of teachers and officers for the year is 21, being 2 more than last year with the same number on the roll.

In keeping with the increased attendance our collections have also shown a gratifying increase. Last year our average daily collection was $1.09, while this year it is $1.34, but the average collection per scholar per Sunday remains about the same, namely, about 1-4 cents. Our total collections amounted to $264.66 as compared with $230.36 last year, or an increase of $34.71. The comparison of amounts given to Missions and benevolent objects is as follows:—

	1903	1904
Sick Children's Hospital	$21 61	$19 62
Man. and N. West Missions	3 11	20 73
Foreign Missions	23 17	49 43
Home Missions	35 00	45 00
Grande Ligne Mission	46 50	53 00
Bungalow Fund (for 1902)		2 86
Peterborough Cot Muskoka		13 32
Totals	$130 39	198 24

Increase of $68.45.

While these nearly all show an increase our expenses show a heavy increase. Last year our supplies cost $71.65, while this year they reach a total of $124.40 and as a reward for increased attendance we spent during the year on stars and other rewards for regular attendance the sum of $20.35, with the stars for the last six months still unpaid for.

The statement of receipts and expenditures for the year is as follows:—

RECEIPTS.

Balance on hand last year	$108 61
Monthly collections	264 04
Home Department Collections	20 34
Interest on Money loaned to Church	16 73
Interest on Deposit	4 26
Proceeds of Excursion	3 50
Total	$422 49

DISBURSEMENTS.

Stars and duty on same	$56 25
R. M. Roy, pictures of star classes	16 50
Foreign Missions	49 43
Sick Children's Hospital	19 62
Man. and N. West Missions	20 73
County S. S. Work	10 00
A. H. Stretton & Co.	23 45

Grande Ligne Missions	53 00
Examiner Printing Co., repairs to books	1 70
Peterborough Cot. Muskoka	13 23
	$300 35
Balance	$154 26

Since last year we have lost Mrs. Bastow, and after she has gone we realize fully, if we did not before, what a help she was in the Sunday School. Not only as Assistant Superintendent, but as a general lookout committee Mrs. Bastow did wonderful work. Besides her the following teachers and officers have left the Sunday School, Mrs. Wilson, Mrs. White, Miss Bradshaw, Miss Hunter, Miss Roberts and Miss Perrin. Mrs. Chalmers and Mrs. Roberts have, however, been a very welcome addition to the teaching staff and with Mr. Lee's class and Miss Mitchell's it is not so difficult to get a supply teacher when one is wanted. As far as we know there have been no deaths in the school during the year, for which we have to be thankful.

Our annual excursion was held on July 7th per train to Lakefield and thence by steamer Stony Lake to Sandy Point, where dinner was partaken of. After the sports had been run off the party enjoyed a sail to Burleigh and had tea. The day was ideal and about 300 took in the trip which was perhaps the most successful the school has ever had. In addition to all the enjoyment the scholars had, we have the additional pleasure of being able to report a surplus of $3.50 after all expenses were paid.

According to the last report received from the secretary of the Home Department, all visitors have reported good work as being done, but that the number of lessons studied cannot be reported as strict account was not kept. The total collections for the year amount to $29.34, which is quite a source of revenue.

In closing the secretary wishes to thank the teachers and other officers for their assistance on various occasions during the year and for their kindness in giving any information asked for in regard to the class books and records.

Sec.-Treasurer.

TO TAKE OVER THE LINE.

Government Railway to New Liskeard Is Now Completed.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—At a meeting of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway Commission on Saturday it was decided to take over from the contractors on Saturday next, Jan. 14, the new Government road from North Bay to New Liskeard. For the present, it is announced, the line will be operated with the existing staff of the contractors.

Superintendent Black, whose appointment was announced sometime ago, will have charge of the operations, and will from time to time make recommendations for the regulation of the freight tariff.

For the extension to the junction with the proposed G.T.P., the rails are laid for a distance of 22 miles north of New Liskeard. The line has been located for 65 miles, and graded for about 45 miles. There is a ravine at the 25th mile that will cause some delay.

Gooseberries and a Cat.

Not long ago, says Collier's Weekly, officials of the department of agriculture were much amused by a letter sent the department by an occasional correspondent in Virginia.

Among other things the writer hastened to advise the secretary of the department to this effect:

My wife had a Tame cat that dyd. Being a Torture shell and a Grate faverit, we had the same berred in the Gardin, and for the enrichment of the soil I had the Carkis deposited under the roots of a Gooseberry Bush. (The Frute being up to then of the smooth variety.) But the next Seson's Frute, after the Cat was berred, the Gooseberrys was all Hairy—and more Remarkable, the Catapilars of the same Bush was All of said Hairy description.

The Government's Music.

A certain congressman who takes an interest in musical matters presented a bill advocating a larger appropriation for the care of the music in the Congressional library. He spoke briefly on the subject, and after the session a fellow congressman approached him confidentially.

"I say," he said in a low voice, "I like that bill of yours. But, tell me, what sort of music does the government have over there in the library? Is it a band or just a hand organ?"

How Mand.

"Sir," began the timid youth as he entered the office, "I am in search—or—that is, I came to seek your daughter's hand"—

"Well, it isn't anywhere in this vicinity," interrupted the stern parent. "She's probably using it as a piano thumper about this time of day."

Do Not Suppress a Cough.

When you have a cough do not try to suppress it, but remove the cause. The cough is only a symptom of some disease, and the disease is what you should cure, then the cough will stop of itself. The most common cause of coughing is a cold. Anodynes will promptly suppress the cough, and preparations containing chloroform, opium, etc., are used for that purpose, but they do not cure the cold. Chamberlain's Cough Remedy on the other hand does not suppress the cough, but relieves it by removing from the throat and lungs the mucus which obstructed the breathing and allaying the irritation and tickling in the throat. It also opens the secretions and effectually and permanently cures the cold as well as the cough. For sale by all druggists.

ON COLONIAL VISIT

Holman Hunt's Great Picture to Make a Tour of the Colonies.

"THE LIGHT OF THE WORLD"

The Parting of the Ways As Seen By Earl Percy—Sir Robert Finlay, Attorney-General, On the Proposed Conference At Inverness — Country Ought to Have the Facts Placed Before It.

London, Jan. 10.—(C.A.P.)—The Right Hon. Charles Booth, is sending Holman Hunt's great picture, "The Light of the World," to be exhibited in the principal cities of Canada, Australia, New Zealand and South Africa, after which he will offer it as a gift to the nation.

Writing to Mr. Booth, Colonial Secretary Lyttleton, says: "I feel great sympathy with your desire to add to the ties which bind together the various populations of the self-governing states of the Empire by that lofty bond of union consisting in common admiration for the great and elevating works of national and religious art."

Colonies Are Loyal.

Earl Percy, speaking at Selby, said we were standing at the parting of the ways, and it might be that the people of this country would have to choose between the two fundamental conceptions of Empire. The colonies would remain loyal whatever we did, but the question was whether our connection with the colonies was to be based on sentiment and blood relationship or on mutual community of interest.

Get At the Facts.

Sir Robert Finlay, Attorney-General, referring to the proposed conference at Inverness, said that both sides would enter it absolutely free, pledged to nothing. Any recommendation the conference made would be submitted to the electors at the general election. Before any action could be taken the country ought to have the proper facts placed before it. He personally believed that taxation of food was neither desirable or practicable, but they should have the facts.

Lord Durham's View.

Speaking at York, Lord Durham said the Liberals' defence of free trade involved no antagonism to the colonies. It was merely a foolish cry of protectionists to discredit the Liberals. It was the Liberals who gave the colonies the most cherished privilege of self-government. Liberals recognized the loyalty, the power and the importance of the colonies. Even if there were a few Liberals who were not sound on the matter they were less dangerous than those protectionists who said the only way to maintain the integrity of the Empire was by an ignoble system of barter. Liberals regarded the Empire as based upon a far different basis, upon the freedom of Government, religion and commerce.

NEWCOMERS IN ONTARIO.

Figures For the Year Will Probably Reach 24,000.

Toronto, Jan. 10.—Thomas Southworth, director of colonization, has received returns showing the total immigration into Ontario, exclusive of those coming from the United States, up to Dec. 1, to have been 28,206. For the full year the figures will probably reach 24,000. The number of immigrants last year was 19,000. In 1900, when the department was organized, the number was only 8,000.

Canadian Sues For $25,000.

Ogdensburg, N.Y., Jan. 10.—Canadian capitalists have begun suit in the Supreme Court against the Village of Waddington, St. Lawrence County, for $25,000 for breach of contract. The village recently voted to sell the water power, which supplies the place with light and water for $4.000. Before the property was transferred the Remington Paper Co. of Watertown obtained an option on it at $1,500, intending to build a railroad at Norfolk to carry Canadian pulpwood to the mills at Racquette. The village electors then decided to control their own light and water service, and unanimously rescinded their previous action.

Off to the Sunny South.

Norfolk, Va., Jan. 10.—Headed by the first-class battleship Kearsage, flying the blue pennant of Rear-Admiral A. S. Barker, eighteen warships of the United States navy last night were on their way down the coast to the winter manoeuvring grounds, after having been inspected and reviewed in Hampton Roads yesterday by the Secretary of the United States Navy, Morton, and Admiral Dewey.

500 Try to Break Jail.

San Francisco, Cal., Jan. 10.—News from Manila received yesterday tells of an attempt of about 500 convicts at Bilbid Prison to break jail on Dec. 7. Sixteen prisoners were killed and forty wounded. Six of the wounded are not expected to live and twenty-six others are in a critical condition.

Apology Accepted.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—The libel suit instituted by Hon. F. R. Latchford against The Free Press has been settled out of court. The apology offered by The Free Press was accepted by the Minister.

Lowther Denies.

London, Jan. 10.—J. W. Lowther, M.P., denies the report circulated by The Liverpool Post, that he is to succeed Lord Milner as High Commissioner in South Africa.

Facial Paralysis.

Mr. W. J. Brennan, Western Hill, St. Catharines, Ont., writes: "My face was twisted all out of shape by facial paralysis, and five doctors failed to cure or even relieve. By the persistent use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food I have been entirely cured and have returned to work well and strong. I have gained in weight and feel that I have a new lease of life.

COACH JUMPS THE TRACK.

Turns Turtle and Ten Rolls Over An Embankment With Her 15 Passengers Bumped Around Promiscuously.

Brockville, Jan. 10.—The worst accident in the history of the Brockville, West Point & Northern Railway occurred about 5 o'clock last evening at a point half a mile west of Lyn, and was caused by the spreading of the rails while a mixed train was running about twenty miles an hour en route to Brockville. The train was made up principally of freight cars, with a combination passenger and baggage car at the rear, said to contain about fifteen passengers, mostly women and children.

Suddenly the passengers were startled by the wheels of the coach bumping along the ties, indicating that it had left the track. Efforts were made to signal the engineer, but all to no avail, and finally the coach plunged over the embankment and rolled to the bottom, a distance of several feet. The passengers were thrown promiscuously from their seats and while not one escaped from a cut or a bruise, strange to relate, none sustained serious injuries.

They managed to extricate themselves from the coach in the darkness, the lamps having been extinguished. Conductor Horton was severely cut about the head, but pluckily stuck to his post, directing operations with blood streaming down his face. He would not leave the scene until all others had been cared for. Horton will recover. Among those severely cut or bruised were: J. C. Ross of Athens, Miss Laishley of Chaffey's Locks, a little daughter of A E. Shaver of Brockville, and Harry Johnston of Delta.

The passengers were conveyed to Lyn in sleighs and subsequently brought to Brockville by special train.

Fell Three Storeys to Death.

Toronto, Jan. 10.—A three-storey plunge down an elevator shaft at the warehouse of T. Kinnear & Co. yesterday afternoon resulted in the death of George Stacey of 752 Broadview avenue. How the unfortunate young man happened to fall will never be known, but it is thought he did not get a stable footing when he stepped on to the floor. He plunged backward down the shaft to the basement, alighting on his head and shoulders. He was picked up and hurried to the Emergency, but expired in a few minutes, without regaining consciousness. Stacey was married but a short time ago, and leaves a widow. He was about 80 years of age.

Fireman Jumps to Death.

Montreal, Jan. 10.—Arthur Abraham, 20 years of age, of Three Rivers, a fireman on the Canadian Pacific Railway, was killed Saturday night by jumping from the cab of his engine in the yards of the Angus shop. It is said that Abraham became alarmed on seeing the headlight of an engine approaching on the track next to the one which his engine was on. Thinking the engine was on the same track, he feared a collision and jumped from the cab. In jumping his head struck one of the switch semaphores, fracturing his skull.

This Man May Die.

Toronto, Jan. 10.—W Weesey, a plumber in the employ of Keith & Fitzsimmons, sustained what may prove to be fatal injuries from a fall while working on the roof of the Hendrie stables yesterday afternoon. Weesey, along with some others, was working on the roof, when losing his footing he slid down the incline, crashed through some scaffolding and plunged to the ground, some 40 feet below. He was taken to the Emergency Hospital, where it was found that he had injured his skull. He lapsed into unconsciousness, and has remained so ever since. His case is critical.

Alps Claim Victims.

Geneva, Jan. 10.—The death roll in the Alps during the recent blizzard reaches a total of 24. Fifteen others narrowly escaped death. The dogs at the Hospice St. Bernard recovered three more bodies from the snow yesterday. Two more Trappist monks died last night of cold in the mountain monastery near Brescia, making a total of four. Thirty guides and villagers recovered six bodies of Italian smugglers Sunday from the summit of the Col. Valsarey and transported them to Bourg, where they were buried yesterday.

Rescued in Mid-Ocean.

New York, Jan. 10.—After a rescue in mid-ocean and narrow escape from death, Capt. William Nelson, his wife and five seamen of the two-masted schooner W. R. Chester, arrived last night as passengers on the Atlantic Transport Line steamship Minnehaha. The schooner was abandoned in latitude 39.30, longitude 59.30, the crew being taken aboard by the steamship Anglo-Chilian, which landed them at Havre. The rudder was broken.

Capt. O'Hagan Dead.

St. Catharines, Jan. 10.—Capt. Daniel O'Hagan, a well-known mariner and boat-owner, died very suddenly at an early hour here yesterday morning of heart failure, being ill but a few minutes. Deceased was 49 years of age and a native of Picton. Twelve years ago he came to this city, and in company with Capt. John Malcolmson, purchased the Welland Hotel. He retired from this and since has owned and run many different boats.

Australian Wheat Shortage.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—According to D. H. Ross, Canadian Commercial Agent at Melbourne, the Australian Commonwealth will have approximately about 20,000,000 bushels of new wheat available for export, against 40,000,000 bushels exported in 1903-04. The effect of this serious decline is likely to be noticeable in European markets, and should harden prices.

Permanent Cure for Bronchitis.

"My second daughter was troubled with bronchitis from the age of three weeks. Oftentimes I thought she would choke to death. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine brought relief, and further treatment made a thorough cure. This trouble used to come back from time to time but now the cure is permanent."

RESUMED ITS SESSIONS.

North Sea Incident Is Now Being Investigated.

Paris, Jan. 10.—The international commission appointed to enquire into the North Sea incident resumed its sessions at the Foreign Office yesterday. Admirals Von Spaun (Austria) and Doubassoff (Russia) were present. The latter's appointment was officially announced, thus making permanent Admiral Kasenakoff's retirement on account of illness. Admiral Fournier (France) was unanimously chosen permanent president. In the course of his speech of acceptance, Admiral Fournier said he hoped the commission would be inspired with the same moderation and wisdom which induced Emperor Nicholas and King Edward to refer the question to arbitration.

Fled With Her Child.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 10.—Mrs. Lawrence, a good looking German woman, 35 years of age, of Staten Island, N.Y., was before Judge Lafontaine yesterday afternoon on a warrant of extradition, charging her with having kidnapped her 8-year-old daughter from New York. The woman's husband, who is manager of a patent medicine concern in New York, secured a divorce from her two weeks ago, and he was awarded the custody of their two children, a boy of 10 and a girl of 8 years. Before the written decision of the judge, who had heard the evidence in the divorce proceedings, had been served on Mrs. Lawrence, she left the court room and a few hours afterwards took a train for Montreal, with her little girl. When she arrived here she took a room at 1147 St. Lawrence street, and a private detective, who was put to work on the case in New York by the woman's divorced husband, located her here through a letter that she wrote to her sister in New York.

Ruddick Commissioner of Dairying, and Mr. Clarke Seed Commissioner.

THE CAMPAIGN IN SMITH TOWNSHIP

Opened Last Night at the Temperance Hall.

Well Attended Meeting in Spite of the Storm.

The first of the series of Liberal meetings in the Township of Smith was held last night in the Temperance Hall on the Fourth Line and was well attended in spite of the storm. The chair was occupied by Mr. Wm. Graham, the veteran Liberal stalwart, who opened the meeting with a short address in which he emphasized the importance of having every vote in the Township polled. They had in their candidate a young man of great talent and unblemished reputation and of whom after many enquiries he had heard nothing but the highest praise. He believed in sending young men to the Legislature and he hoped they would all make the utmost use of this opportunity.

Mr. F. D. Kerr followed in a clever speech of three-quarters of an hour. He endorsed what the chairman had said of the candidate and referred to his high standing amongst the young men in town. He dealt with the sensational charges made against the Government for the purpose of distracting the public attention from the real issue in this election, which is the Government's record of business advancement. They heard much from the Opposition newspapers of the Minnie M. episode, but nothing of the expedition of the Rooth, and nothing of the gross corruption on the Conservative side, which had made that bye-election necessary. He then took up the administrative work of the Government and particularly that of the Department of Agriculture. In spite of the Conservative party including Mr. Whitney, the Government had created a department devoted exclusively to the interests of the farmers and placed at its head practical successful farmers. As a result of Mr. Dryden's honest, faithful service the agricultural interests of the Province had been looked after in a manner that was the envy of all competing states and it should be for no slight cause that any farmer should vote against those who had so well looked after his interests. On the contrary, the Opposition had opposed the establishment of the Agricultural Department had opposed the dairy school, the experimental farm, the aid to the Poultry Association, and had advanced nothing of substantial importance to the farming interests. In this, and in all the other departments the Government had shown that practical knowledge of the conditions, which is the first condition of successful administration, and they owed it to themselves to show their appreciation of what had been done on their behalf, and they could only do so by casting their votes for Mr. McWilliams.

Mr. McWilliams defined the main issues of the campaign as being the answer to the question whether the Government led by Mr. Ross, had maintained the high standard of Sir Oliver Mowat, and had kept abreast of these growing times. They had heard in detail of the manner in which the agricultural interests had been cared for and if time would permit a similar record could be shown in every other department. The Government had spent large sums of money in promoting education, agriculture, colonization roads and railways and maintaining the institutions for the afflicted. They had been able to do this on so generous a scale because of the manner in which they had looked after the revenues of Ontario. The manner in which the great resources of lands and timber had been cared for, and disposed of by public auction, had brought into the public treasury millions of dollars, which had been used in aid of the work carried on by the municipalities, and thus very largely kept down the local taxation, instead of, as in the States of the American Union, adding a provincial tax. Especially did the Government deserve credit for the imposition of the succession duties, and the taxes on the large corporations, by which they had increased the revenue several hundred thousand dollars annually.

Mr. McWilliams stated his personal position on the question of corruption and urged on the audience the importance of getting the whole truth, instead of an unfair and exaggerated report on one side. Upon the question of temperance the record of the Government was, and and would continue to be one of progressive reform, a policy with which he declared himself to be in full sympathy.

After a short address by the chairman eulogistic of the premier and of the candidate, the meeting closed with three cheers for the King and Mr. McWilliams. It is evident that West Smith will give one of the best majorities for the Liberal candidate that has ever been recorded.

Started off With a Hurrah.

This extraordinary sale of winter suits, overcoats and furnishings at H. LeBrun & Co's, which has started off with so many inducements, is an occasion of interest to men, young men and boys. The surprising reductions in the tailoring department, especially, in black dress suits, and scotch tweed and worsted suits, made to order, comes in good time. Gentlemen who need a dress suit for the long social season ahead, will save good money by leaving their measures at LeBrun's at once. Full dress suits that formerly were made to order for $30 are now reduced to $25; formerly $35 and $40, reduced to $28 and $30, with a very large stock of cloths to choose from. Men's dress trousers that were formerly made to order for $7.50 are reduced to $5; and Scotch tweed and worsted trousers are reduced from $4 and $4.50 to $3 and $3.50. We take your measure and make up just as carefully as if you were paying the full extra price. Our cutter Mr. Thompson, will fit you just as fashionably and as accurately as he always does. H. Mr. Fair presented the estimates and a statement of receipts and expenditures for the current year, which will be published to-morrow.

APPOINTMENTS.

Mr. Hill, chairman of the Committee on Appointments, presented the report of the committee to the effect that, according to instructions, the committee advertised for a teacher to fill a vacancy on the public school staff, and that Miss Minnie R. Walker, of Meaford, had been appointed at a salary of $350.

The report was adopted.

Mr. R. Fair moved, seconded by Mr. F. J. Jameson, that the Town Council be and are hereby required to pay the treasurer of the Board of Education, in monthly instalments, the sum of $33,000 for current expenditure of the Collegiate Institute and Public Schools.

RETIRING TRUSTEES.

Moved by Mr. W. H. Hill, seconded by Mr. F. J. Jameson, that in view of the retirement of Messrs. W. H. Wrighton and J. J. McBain from membership of this board, after respectively twenty-five and thirteen years' service that this Board place on record, its regret, both at losing the benefit of their services, and also association in the meetings of this Board, and also place on record this Board's high sense of appreciation of the faithful and efficient services rendered by them, and of their devotion to the best interests of education in the town, and that the secretary be instructed to forward a copy of this resolution to the above mentioned gentlemen.

Mr. Hill, in moving the resolution, paid a high tribute to the efficiency and faithfulness of the services given by these gentlemen, to which the chairman in putting the motion, added his own tribute, and the motion was unanimously adopted.

SUPERVISION MATTERS.

Mr. Stevenson, verbally, and briefly, reported that little of importance took place during the first part of the year. In regard to the contract for text books and supplies, Mr. Pringle stated that Mr. A. H. Stratton had very fully carried out the terms of the contract. The system had worked satisfactorily, and no complaints had been received, and the financial features were very promising. The success of the system was largely due to the Inspector, whose systematic habits were responsible for its smooth working. During the past year there had not been reported a single complaint concerning the town schools, showing to how gratifying an extent harmony and good feeling prevailed. Mr. Pringle said that we had an excellent public school staff, both in the matter of scholarship and personal qualities. There had been some little difficulty with two members of the Collegiate Institute staff, but changes had been made, and of the two new teachers appointed, Miss Weir, modern languages, was an excellent choice. With the appointment of Mr. Hodgson, also an efficient teacher, the staff was now in an excellent condition. We had a strong Collegiate Institute staff, each a specialist in his or her subject, and well known throughout the province as efficient and capable teachers. Mr. Pringle concluded by hoping that we should have at no distant date an Institute building to correspond in character with the present Institute staff.

Mr. Eastwood verbally reported that the heating apparatus in the Central School building was receiving attention, with a view of remedying defects in radiation in two of the lower rooms, and that he expected that during the week the work of overcoming defects would be satisfactorily completed. He also made reference to the conditions in some of the other school buildings.

Mr. Stevenson offered a few words of criticism in regard to the mode of making repairs and alterations, without inviting tenders. He was perfectly justified in objecting to such work being done by day work. The Board had thrown away $3,000 in the matter of this heating affair.

The Board then adjourned.

CONCERT WAS A SPLENDID SUCCESS

Opera House Crowded to the Doors Last Evening.

Anniversary Concert, in Connection With St. Peter's T.A.S.—Address by Rev. Father O'Sullivan.

There was not a vacant seat in the opera house last evening on the occasion of the concert under the auspices of St. Peter's Total Abstinence Society in commemoration of the fifth anniversary of which, the concert was held. This flourishing society has during its existence in town established a reputation of carrying to a successful issue everything which it undertakes, and last evening there was no exception to the rule. An excellent programme was provided, and the audience, which was in every way a most appreciative one, evidenced their pleasure by the very enthusiastic manner in which every number was received. The whole affair was a triumph for the society, which will enter upon the next five years with prospects which could hardly be brighter. As Rev. Dr. O'Brien stated last evening, their membership was over 600 at present, and it would be the aim of the society to swell this number to at least 1000, before the tenth anniversary was celebrated, and with the earnest co-operation of the members, and the sympathetic and material assistance of those outside its membership, there seems no doubt that these figures would soon be reached.

The programme last evening was opened by the T.A.S. band of twenty pieces, which made its first appearance in public, considering which fact the organization made a creditable showing, and under the leadership of Mr. L. A. Halley, will no doubt continue to improve. Mr. Halley is a clever musician, and will no doubt soon bring the band to a high standard of efficiency. Their numbers were "The Canadian Medley March," by Baugh, and "La Pitteri Waltz, by Riviera. A vocal solo, "Kings of the Road," by Bevan, was sung by Mr. R. N. Jolliffe, who responded to an encore with "The Minstrel Boy." A violin solo, Czarda op. 32, by Huda, was played with artistic finish by Mr. Gilbert Markle, attached to the teaching staff of the Peterborough Conservatory of Music, the rising violinist, who was heartily recalled. Miss L. Hallihan's voice of very pleasing quality, sang Luder's "Message of the Violet, with a nicety of expression, and was enthusiastically recalled. A recitation, "Yes, I'm Guilty," by Miss Carrie White, was a very enjoyable number. This little girl shows remarkable elocutionary powers for one so young, and has a brilliant future before her. She responded to a well-marked encore.

A vocal solo, Balf's "Killarney" was sung by Miss Lillian Bell, a contralto with a voice of rich quality and beautiful tone. The number was very expressively rendered as was her encore number, "The Slumber Boat."

At the conclusion of the first part of the programme an address was given by Rev. F. J. O'Sullivan, of Lindsay, the founder of the Society. On the platform during the address were Rev. Father McColl, Rev. Dr. O'Brien, Mr. M. O'Hearn, President, and Mr. F. Cook, the retiring President.

Rev. Father McColl, in a short speech, introduced the speaker of the evening. He was pleased to see so many present for it spoke well for the interest the public had in the T.A.S. The Society was accomplishing a great good but he believed it was not realizing its greatest results at the present, but these would be seen in the future. He paid a high tribute to the founder, Rev. Father O'Sullivan, and to its spiritual adviser, Rev. Dr. O'Brien, whose work would never be forgotten as long as the Society existed. The work of founding the Society was an arduous one, and more than courage was needed in carrying on the work; the grace of God was needed also. He was greatly pleased to welcome Rev. Father O'Sullivan to Peterborough again.

THE ADDRESS.

Rev. Father O'Sullivan was greeted with vociferous applause upon rising to speak. He felt deeply gratified at having the privilege of being present on such an auspicious occasion and was happy because the faces of many of those before him were familiar, especially of those of the earnest men who were present at the first meeting of the Society. It recalled many happy souvenirs of his first years in the priesthood in Peterborough. He was glad to be present because the work had been blessed and was productive of so much good and had brought honour to the parish and to the town of Peterborough.

What was the origin, source or cause of the phenomenal success of this Society? At the time of its foundation there were many who were very dubious as to the success of the undertaking and who were of the opinion that the enthusiasm would soon die. But those who were most enthusiastic at the start were still the most enthusiastic. The work had had God's blessing for it was God's work. Another reason for its success was because it was fostered and aided by the mothers, wives and daughters of the members for it was known what it meant to these to have a father, husband or son a total abstainer. And the unselfish, untiring energy of the Chaplain, seconded by the hearty co-operation of the Rector and Catholic clergy was also a prominent feature in the success. Another source of success was the work of the earnest men and women who were aiding the good priest in his work. They were the men and women behind the guns who went to the neighbours and strove to help them in difficulty and to influence them to take the pledge of total abstinence. They were not the criticisers who found fault with the Society at large because of one or two who had fallen by the wayside. Those who assisted in the work at the rooms, preparing concerts, etc., were also great promoters of the Society's welfare.

The work of the Society has been to make happy homes and to save many souls from ruin. Many of the successful business men of the town owe much to this Society which had engendered a temperance sentiment not only in Peterborough, but in other places. A society such as the T.A.S. would do more towards settling the temperance question than all the legislation of our Governments.

The Society had introduced many features besides the temperance work. It had every reason to be proud of its athletes, and he was glad to see how highly the press of outside towns spoke of the T.A.S. lacrosse and hockey teams. The debating club was an important feature of the Society, and one which should receive every encouragement. He was glad to see that one of the present aldermen of Peterborough had received his early training as a speaker at the T.A.S. Debating Society's meeting.

Rev. Father O'Sullivan was delighted to be present, and he hoped that when the tenth anniversary was celebrated there would be the same enthusiasm with many new members.

After the address Rev. Dr. O'Brien, who was heartily applauded upon rising to speak, made a few remarks thanking those present for their attendance, and stating that it was pleasing to state that both Catholics and Protestants were in sympathy with the cause which the society espoused. The membership of the society was over 600 at the present time, and he hoped that after five years more had elapsed the membership would be at least 1000.

PART II.

The second part of the programme opened with a violin solo "The Harp that once Through Tara's Hall," by Farmer, which was played very effectively by Mr. Markle. Mrs. K. Eardley-Wilmot scored a great success in his rendition of Welling's, "Forget, Forgive," which she sang with splendid expression, and for an encore gave Brigg's "Hold Thou My Hand." A drill song, "The Sea Fairies," by twenty tiny pupils of the Convent, was a delightful number. The costumes of the little tots were exceedingly pretty, the colours being red and green; the marching and singing were most creditably done. The audience enjoyed the number most heartily and an enthusiastic encore was demanded. Mr. R. N. Jolliffe sang "My Bonny Barque," after which a male quartette, Messrs. J. Legg, J. Browne, R. N. Jolliffe and R. H. Shepherd sang "Juanita," arranged by Parks. The voices blended well and the shading was effective. For an encore the quartette sang "Story of a Tack." The closing number was a tableau, "The Angel of Temperance," depicting a scene of a happy home, with the Angel of Temperance at the door refusing admittance to the demon Satan, with his flask of liquor. The tableau was very effective.

The programme closed with the National Anthem.

The accompanists, each of which performed her duties most efficiently, were Miss L. Hurley, Miss M. Doherty and Mrs. W. J. Morrow, who played for her pupils, Miss Bell and Mr. Jolliffe.

A Heintzman piano of splendid tone, was supplied for the occasion.

The stage decorations were most attractive and reflected great credit upon Messrs. B. Shaw and W. S. Merrell under whose direction the work was carried on.

The committee which had the arranging of the concert in charge are deserving of every credit for its splendid success. They wish to thank those who supplied the material for the decorations and also Mr. Lendrum who furnished the piano; Mr. R. M. Roy, who manipulated the flash light in the tableau, and the Ladies' Literary Committee of the T.A.S., which co-operated so cheerfully in the preparation for the concert.

The Convent Sisters who so carefully trained the little girls in their drill, come in for a share in the praise also. It is no easy matter to train children of such tender years as were those of last evening, but they performed their part without the slightest mistake.

The large picture of the T.A.S. lacrosse team made by G. E. Whiten, photo artist, occupied a prominent position on the stage at the concert last evening.

The whole affair was a triumph for the Society which to a member may well feel satisfied and gratified with the splendid success of their undertaking.

SPLENDID LECTURE AT THE Y. M. C. A.

Under Auspices of the Fortnightly Club Last Evening

Mr. Edmund, Jones of Toronto, Gave Capital Lecture on Interesting Subject

The Fortnightly Club meeting in the Y.M.C.A. last night, was well attended by those interested in the Temagami country. Mr. Edward Jones, of the firm of DuVernet & Jones, Toronto, who was accompanied by his wife, gave an exceedingly interesting pictorial account of his canoeing trips through the Temagami and Temiscamingue country. The slides revealed immense lakes, beautiful rivers, most picturesque falls and the forest primeval. The waters are full of fine fish, and if the lumberman's fire can be kept out of the country it will be a paradise for those in search of health and recreation. He informed the Club he had been told the unexplored country of the north-west of the district he was describing, was still more bold and beautiful.

Mr. Burnett moved a vote of thanks and in seconding it Mr. Fife complimented the lecturer on his description; he himself had been through a portion of the country described. To put it tersely, the country straight through, north of Central and Western Ontario, is a continuance of Muskoka and the Lake-of-Bays district, on a more extensive scale.

Rev. J. C. Davidson joined heartily in the praise of the lecture, as did also Mr. E. B. Edwards, K.C.

Mr. Burnham the president, put the resolution to the meeting, and it was carried with loud applause. In tendering the resolution to Mr. Jones he expressed the gratitude of the Club to Mr. Jones, and those of like information and ability, who appreciate the necessity of keeping alive little centres of intelligence and information in the outlying districts.

The next meeting of the Club is early in February when Mr. J. S. Willison will be the lecturer.

PUBLIC LIBRARY ANNUAL MEETING

Reports of Committee and Election of Directors Last Evening

Some Suggestions by the Members—Sale of Periodicals on Monday.

The annual meeting of the Public Library Board was held last evening, Dr. Burnham being in the chair.

The following directors were elected: Dr. Burnham, Messrs. T. A. S. Hay, W. H. Hill, Jas. English, J. Corkery, H. S. MacDonald, R. Robertson, — Anderson, and J. S. Knapman.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

The report of the Board of Directors was presented as follows:—

Annual report of the Board of Management of the Peterborough Public Library for the year 1904.

Your Board of Management have pleasure in presenting to the members the following report of the affairs of the Public Library for the year 1904.

The past year was, in most respects, an uneventful one in the history of the Library, through a reasonable amount of progress was made, and a moderate increase in the number of members. The heating arrangements have been improved by placing a large base burner coal stove in the Library which is much more comfortable than in former winters. Other improvements might be desired, but with the limited means at the disposal of your Board, they can not be effected. The income of the library does not increase in proportion to the growth of the town; for while there is an increase in the number of members, the amount received from the Government is much less than formerly, and the magazines and periodicals sold bring in a smaller amount.

The Library has been in existence for 4 years, and as might be expected, a great many volumes have been worn out, or lost, during that period; but as each year a large number has been added, our shelves are well—in fact, too well—filled, and we will soon need more shelf-room. A large number of books, some of them being the most popular ones, are the more likely, through frequent handling, to be put out of order, are laid aside for repairs, and we should have some difficulty in finding room for them if they were repaired.

The following list contains the number of books added to each class in the Library, and also the number in each class issued during the year.

Several of the members made suggestions as to improvements which might be made. Rev. J. C. Davidson suggested that canvassing be done to secure new members and that the higher classes of literature and philosophical works be secured for the library.

Dr. Burnham referred to a recent letter in the Review and stated that the Town Council had nothing whatever to do with the Public Library Board, that they gave no money and had nothing to say in its affairs.

A meeting of the Directors will be held next Monday night when there will be a sale of periodicals.

MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION

Regular Monthly Meeting Held This Morning.

A meeting of the Ministerial Association was held Monday morning. There were present:—

Rev. Messrs. J. C. Davidson, A. H. Brace, Dr. Crothers, J. G. Potter, F. J. Scott, J. G. Lewis, Dr. Torrance and W. J. Jolliffe; visitors, Rev. Messrs. C. Parker and R. McKnight.

The Hospital visitation for January will be as follows:—

January 9th, Rev. A. H. Brace,
January 16th, Rev. J. G. Potter,
January 23rd, Rev. J. C. Davidson,
January 30th, Rev. J. G. Lewis.

A practical paper was read by Rev. A. H. Brace on "The Drifting of our Young, its Cause and Cure". The cause is an oversight and neglect of children by the home and the church. The cure is in giving first place to the care of the children in both home and church.

A most interesting discussion followed, in which all the members took part.

REV. DR. KETCHEN'S STRONG ADDRESS

Enthusiastic Meeting at the Y. M. C. A Yesterday.

"That man speaks as if he had lived what he spoke" was one of the comments on the address of Rev. H. B. A. Ketchen, acting assistant pastor, of St. Paul's at the Y. M. C. A. men's meeting yesterday. The subject was "A Man's Purpose", it being handled in a forcible manner by the speaker. The climax was an appeal to young men to live to glorify God through the surrender of their lives to Him. All who heard Mr. Ketchen yesterday will want to hear him again next Sunday with many others. Miss Florence C. Hall, sang a solo which was a decided addition to the meeting and Mrs. MacGregor very kindly played the accompaniment.

BLOCKED COUNTRY ROADS

The Results of Last Night's Howling Gale.

It is not surprising that the country roads are in an almost impassable condition in some directions. Mr. Walter Stocker started north this morning on a business trip, but he didn't and couldn't get any further than Milburn's Hill, on the Communication Road. The high-piled drifts—hourly becoming worse—barred his way. A snow-drift that turns Mr. Stocker—the type of energy and push—must be a stiff proposition.

The street cars are doing well. They ran all day on schedule time, thanks to the all-night work of the rotary snow plough, which kept the tracks clear not only for the cars but also for pedestrians who find the car tracks splendid walking compared to the half-clogged sidewalks.

JAP ATTACK FAILED

Driven Back by Russ Bayonets From Kuropatkin's Centre.

WHAT CZAR NICHOLAS MAY DO

Battle For Political Reasons May Be Ordered For Kuropatkin to Fight—Emperor Holds Conferences With His Advisers — Effecting the Transfer of Prisoners—Many Russians Refuse Parole.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 9.—General Kuropatkin reports the frustration of a Japanese attempt to surprise his centre front on the night of Jan. 6, and the bayonetting of twenty-one Japanese the night of Jan. 8 by a cavalry reconnaisance in the valley of Taitse River, in the direction of Sianchan.

It is expected here that the Czar will order Kuropatkin to take the offensive immediately before Nogi's veterans can join the Japanese forces on the Shakhe, and at any expense to gain some success to offset the effect of the loss of Port Arthur upon the Russian people. Such instructions will place Kuropatkin in a most difficult position.

The severity of the winter in Northern Manchuria makes extensive military operations next to impossible, even with troops having the best equipment. It is known that the Russian army is suffering great deprivation of such necessaries as boots and overcoats, owing to the wholesale robberies of supplies, and a battle fought solely for political reasons would be with advantage strongly on the side of the Japanese.

Advance Not Yet.

Huanchan, via Mukden, Jan. 9.—The expected advance of Japanese, which the Chinese prophesied would take place on the Russian Christmas, has not occurred. Even the usual cannonading has not taken place. The troops celebrated Christmas Saturday quietly. There were Christmas trees in many companies and little celebrations in various officers' quarters. Many men exchanged presents, mostly their own handiwork, quaint and curious gifts, there being little obtainable in the way of conventional presents.

To the Bitter End.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 9.—The conferences which Emperor Nicholas has been holding with members of the council of the empire, M. Witte and other ministers and advisers on the internal and external situation have not yet been concluded, but nothing has occurred which would indicate that the Government is prepared to depart from its present program of continuing the war to the bitter end.

Nevertheless talk of peace was heard Sunday in many quarters, the foundation for it being ascribed to Foreign Minister Lamsdorff's alleged position in favor of such a course on the ground that aside from the humiliation to military prestige involved, it would only mean the relinquishment of Manchuria, to which Russia already is formally pledged. There is no confirmation of this statement of Count Lamsdorff's position beyond the general knowledge that he always has belonged to the peace party.

The army in Manchuria has not been informed of the fall of Port Arthur.

TRANSFERRING THE PRISONERS.

Total On Saturday Reached 878 Officers and 23,491 Men.

Tokio, Jan. 9.—Gen. Nogi's report, received here at 11 o'clock Saturday night, announces that the transfer of Port Arthur prisoners was completed Saturday afternoon; total of 878 officers and 23,491 men.

The total number of officers and men transferred on Saturday was as follows:

Gen. Stoessel's Kwantung command, 48.
Gen. Stoessel's headquarters, 21.
Engineers Co., 280.
Telegraph corps, 65.
Railroad detachment, 56.
Cavalry, 131.
Officers and crews of war vessels: Retvizan 22, Pobiedo 22, Pallida 11, Peresviet 15, Poltava 327, Sevastopol 536, Bayan 274, Robri 11, Storoshevoi 56, Otvashni 130, Gilyak, 77, Amus 130. Naval defence headquarters 328, harbor office 985, naval brigade 90, torpedo brigade 152, field posts and telegraphs 56.

Of the number 366 were officers and 8,654 soldiers and sailors.

Three judges and three clerks of court were also transferred.

Refuse Parole.

Headquarters of Japanese Army, at Port Arthur, via Fusan, Jan. 9.—Lieut.-Gens. Fock and Smirnoff have decided to go to Japan as prisoners of war. Gen. Smirnoff was in command of the forts at Port Arthur and Gen. Fock commanded the fourth division of the army there. Fifty per cent. of the Russian officers will go to Japan and share with their men the fate of prisoners of war. There are five Russian admirals at Port Arthur, one of whom will go to Japan. Among the admirals is a prince. Twelve foreign naval attaches have visited Fort Arthur and inspected the remains of the Russian fleet.

Stoessel Leaves Jan. 12.

Tokio, Jan. 9.—Lieut.-Gens. Fock, Smirnoff and Goldbakuski and Rear-Admiral Wilmann will be brought to Japan as prisoners of war. Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel will leave Dalny, Jan 12, on a Japanese transport for Nagasaki. He will be accompanied by the other paroled officers. The Russians probably will remain in Japan a few days and then proceed on a French steamer to Europe, going by the way of the Suez Canal. General Nogi reports that the officers paroled to date number 441 and orderlies 229.

To Transport Prisoners.

It is understood that the San Yo Railway has been instructed to make preparations to transport 20,000 Russian prisoners from Shimonoseki to Kure. The most serious cases of sick and wounded will be left at Port Arthur in the field hospitals for the present. Those capable of being moved will be brought to Japan. Plans and arrangements for housing them have been completed.

Left For Port Said.

Suda Bay, Jan. 9.—Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron, consisting of the battleships Oleg, Izmud, Dnieper and Rion, and the torpedo boat destroyers Gromaki and Rezity, which had been delayed in Suda Bay, left yesterday afternoon for Port Said.

JOYFUL JAPS AT VANCOUVER.

Speeches, Processions and Bands in Honor of Port Arthur Victory.

Vancouver, B.C., Jan. 9.—Local Japanese residents celebrated the fall of Port Arthur Saturday. Their places of business were closed early in the day and stores and houses were all gaily decorated.

In the afternoon they assembled on recreation grounds, where the surrender of Port Arthur was officially announced by Hon. K. Morikawa, the local Japanese consul. Congratulatory speeches were made by several prominent Japanese, the tenor of the remarks being that if Japan were successful in war she would proffer terms of friendship to her present foe and endeavor to assist in giving people of Russia more liberty in a better civilization.

A procession was then formed and, headed by two bands, marched through the principal streets to the Japanese consul's residence. There were several hundred Japs in line, each carrying a lighted Chinese lantern. The procession then returned to the grounds, where the celebration kept up till a late hour.

ASSAULTING AND ROBBING.

Trio in Recent Desperate Attacks Are Now in Custody.

Winnipeg, Jan. 9.—At last three men who have been playing the hold-up game in Winnipeg are in custody. The leader of the gang, John Sandercock, was placed under arrest on Saturday night at Port Hope, Ont., by Chief Bond of that place, acting under instructions received from Winnipeg.

His two associates, William McDonald and another, were taken into custody on Saturday afternoon by Detectives Chatterson and Stodgell here. An officer left this city yesterday for Port Hope to bring Sandercock to Winnipeg.

The trio are charged with assaulting and robbing Bronsoos Frank, fruiterer, 577 Main street, Dec. 21. Frank was badly beaten and robbed of $80. Another charge is that they assaulted and robbed James Ferguson on Thursday, Dec. 29, at the corner of Magnus and Main streets.

In this case over $25 was stolen and Ferguson was terribly beaten about the head by his assailants.

LIBERAL WINS THE SEAT.

Chamberlainism Dealt a Stunning Blow in Old England.

London, Jan. 9.—In the Parliamentary bye-election at Stalybridge, Cheshire, Saturday, J. F. Cheetham (Liberal), defeated M. White Ridley (Conservative), by a majority of 961. Hitherto, for 20 years, Stalybridge has returned a Conservative.

The election, which was warmly contested turned almost completely on free trade as against Mr. Chamberlain's policy. Mr. Ridley announced that he was opposed to the taxation of food, but that otherwise he would support Mr. Balfour's program.

This capture of a Conservative stronghold has aroused great Liberal enthusiasm.

$500 For Broken Leg.

Mitchell, Jan. 9.—The case between John Waters and John Connolly of Logan, both well-to-do farmers of Logan, was aired here Saturday in court. The trouble happened on Christmas Eve in the Hicks House, where a scuffle ensued and in the mix-up Waters got his leg broken above the knee. He claimed that Connolly kicked him in the leg with the above result. Connolly stoutly denies doing anything of the kind. Connolly must pay $500 damages and $70 costs, amounting to $570 in all.

C.P.R. Train Ditched.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—An accident was reported yesterday to the C.P.R. train westbound near Trudeau, on the North Shore. Owing to a disarranged condition of the telegraph wires, no details have been received by officials beyond that a portion of the train was ditched and that no one was seriously hurt. A telegram received by a Toronto man from his son read "slightly hurt in wreck to-day."

Died in Winnipeg.

Winnipeg, Jan. 9.—R. J. Wilson, registrar of the Court of King's Bench, died yesterday of typhoid, after two weeks' illness. Twenty years ago he arrived here and opened up a law office. Eleven years ago he was appointed to his present position, which he held until his death. He was 50 years of age, unmarried, and lived the first 30 years of his life in Toronto.

CLARKE VS. HOSSACK

First Says Latter "Had Fished the Grit Pond Dry."

A CHALLENGE TO THE REV'D

"Come Down to West Northumberland and Speak"—There, He Is Best Known—Mr. Sam Clarke's Powerful Arraignment—An Applicant For Many Liberal Favors—Splendid Liberal Convention.

Cobourg, Jan. 9.—A challenge to Rev. D. C. Hossack to come back to his old home and make his political arguments before those who know him best was boldly presented Saturday by Mr. Sam Clarke, who was unanimously renominated Liberal candidate in West Northumberland. Mr. Clarke devoted the greater part of his speech of acceptance to a reply to Mr. Hossack's famous "open letter" and presented new information on Mr. Hossack's record, which shows him to have had several ambitions for political preferment from the Liberals. In fact, as Mr. Clarke said, he "had fished the Grit pond dry," and had gone over and written the letter when he had nothing to lose from the Liberals and perhaps something to gain from the other side. The reception which the Liberal delegates gave to Mr. Clarke's remarks showed that Mr. Hossack is not taken with seriousness down here. The convention had a surprisingly large attendance, considering the storm and the state of the roads, and Mr. Clarke has little to fear in this contest, unless it be the overconfidence of his own friends.

HUGGERY-MUGGERY.

Mr. Whitney's Wierd Contribution to Campaign Phraseology At Ingersoll.

Ingersoll, Jan. 9.—"Huggery-Muggery" is Mr. Whitney's latest contribution to the phraseology of the Provincial campaign. He threw it without warning at the people of Ingersoll and vicinity at a meeting held in the town hall here Saturday night in the interests of Mr. Donald Sutherland, the Conservative candidate for South Oxford, and it so surprised them that they were unable to applaud it. The hall was crowded, many people, in fact, were unable to obtain admission, and there was considerable enthusiasm. Mr. Whitney did not reach the meeting until 9.30, the train from Toronto being delayed by the heavy snowfall. He was somewhat hoarse and tired, and his address, while new in its treatment of several subjects and comprising a few points not touched upon in his previous speeches, was more disconnected and shorter than usual. Very little was said about the policies of the parties, and the temperance question was not once referred to by Mr. Whitney. The Opposition leader was bitterly sarcastic in his references to Premier Ross

Speaker of the Senate.

Ottawa, Jan. 9.—It is understood that Hon. Raoul Dandurand of Montreal, will be the new Speaker of the Senate, in which honorable office he succeeds Hon. Lawrence Power. Mr. Dandurand is a lawyer of prominence, with a keen mind, great energy and large business experience. He was called to the Upper House in 1898, and since then has completely mastered Parliamentary procedure. He has taken a prominent part not only in debates, but in the committee work of the Senate.

SHE STRANGLED HERSELF.

Katherine Brisley's Continued Ill-Health Preyed On Her Mind.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—Ill-health drove Miss Katherine Brisley of 328 Rusholme road to suicide on Saturday morning by hanging. Miss Brisley, who was a woman of about 30 years of age, had for some time been subject to attacks of epilepsy, and her condition so preyed on her mind that she determined to end all. Her sister, Josephine, went out to attend church on Saturday morning and upon her return found her sister dying. When Dr. Brand arrived a short time later he found the unfortunate woman expiring in her sister's arms. Coroner McConnell is investigating.

Humanity's Cry.

"More life and fuller," was the cry of humanity, and variety, color, form, flavor and sensuous movement supplied and increased the demand, and brought on the tragic phases of material life, in which the masses worked and others played continually. For long, men passed through these, moved by impulses, rarely recognized, and not understood when felt. Then came an awakening, the dawn of a finer consciousness, the manifestation of a spiritual life. In reverence and obedience these dumb motions of our vital life, true oracles of Deity, became real and permanent, and were slowly recognized and relied upon. The emotional nature urged to pleasure and forgetfulness; the intellectual to forget in work; but the spiritual nature prompted to remember and to know peace.—From Mrs. Cutter's lecture on "Literature and Life."

"I reckon not," said the man called Bill, and he hurried out into the darkness of the warehouse. While he was creeping about over the rough, grain strewn floor with massive, crunching tread the remaining two stood facing each other, their faces paling under the growing realisation of what had been done.

"He fetched it on hisse'f," said the man with the smoking revolver. "He didn't intend to give up the combination. He was playin' us to gain time an' done it well. I'll say that fer 'im."

He stepped to the office door and called out, "What in thunder are you doin' back thar?"

A smothered oath was all that came to him and the jangling clatter of a pair of iron floor scales, against which the searcher for the tools had stumbled. Suddenly rapid footsteps sounded on the sidewalk near the front door, and a hand was laid on the latch.

"George! George Buckley! What's the matter in there? Killing rats, old man?" It was Bob Hanks' voice.

It was the signal for flight. The man who had gone for the tools could be heard unbarring the door in the rear. The two in the office tiptoed out into the warehouse, and then, seeing the door open, panic seized them, and they ran for their lives. Bob Hanks heard them, and, having had no reply to his question, he suspected foul play and darted at once round the warehouse toward the back end. He was just in time to see three figures running at the top of their speed down the railway. He pulled his revolver and fired an ineffectual shot after them. With the weapon in his hand he entered the open door and groped toward the light in the office, calling loudly for Buckley. Reaching the office, he found George stretched upon the floor. Turning him over, he saw the wound in his head and hastily felt his heart.

"My Lord, they've killed 'im!" he gasped. Hastening to the front door, he opened it and ran out. In the half moonlight down the street he saw a man standing motionless.

"What's the matter over thar?" the man called out. "Shootin' at somebody, Mr. Buckley?"

"Buckley's been shot!" Bob answered. "Run for a doctor, quick!"

"My God!" the man exclaimed. "I'll be as quick as I can. Dr. Jobe's at home."

When the physician came ten minutes later Bob met him at the door. "I thought he was dead just now," he said, "but he's still breathing."

"Hold the lamp for me," said the doctor as he bent over the wounded man, and as Bob obeyed he quickly made an examination of the wound. The firm pressure of his fingers seemed to revive Buckley somewhat, for he groaned and began to struggle.

"Is this all the wound he has?" Dr. Jobe asked.

"I think so," said Hanks. "I heard only one shot."

"Are you sure of that?"

"Yes, I am. I was on the far corner of the vacant lot going home. I'm pretty sure only one was fired."

The doctor made another examination.

"Is it bad?" asked Bob anxiously.

"Can't tell yet," said the doctor, "but I think he has a good chance to pull through. He's badly stunned, but I don't think there's any fracture of the skull. We must move him up to Hillyer's. This is no place to nurse a man as bad off as he is."

CHAPTER XXX.

THE next morning half the village dropped in to see where George Buckley had fallen. No one was able to say exactly how the thing had happened. The doctor, while reporting that George was practically out of danger, had forbidden any one to question the young man, and all sorts of speculations and rumors were in the air. It was not until late in the afternoon that even Hillyer had a full explanation, for it was not till then that he ran across the letter George had written. Several old men were in the office at the time. Hanks was there, and Bascom Truitt, wiping his eyes and vowing revenge on the miscreants who had so cowardly attacked a brave man.

Major Cranston, well wrapped in rugs and braced by pillows, had come down in a carriage with his negro manservant and sat with the rest, pale of face and weak looking, yet relieved to discover that some valuable papers he had left in Hillyer's keeping were intact. He had heard that the safe had been opened, and then he had heard that report contradicted and could only rest satisfied by coming himself, weak as he was. Hillyer had been strangely silent all the afternoon, but when he came upon George's letter he rose and began to talk in a voice that sank deep and shook with uncontrollable emotion.

"I've jest found the key to it," he said, the letter in his hand, "an' I'll bet you all will think well o' that pore wounded boy when you know what I do. Last night three armed men slipped up on 'im right here in this office. I reckon, from what I gather, that they told 'im his daddy was a convict, an' folks in general didn't expect 'im to be honest nohow, an' that ef he didn't open the safe they'd kill 'im an' bore in it the'rselves. He wasn't tempted one minute, but he [illegible] leave a line to me before he died." Hillyer choked up and was silent for a moment. The group bent toward him, with working features and eyes distended. "So he told 'em all right, the jig was up, but they'd have to give 'im time to work out the combination. They 'lowed he was doin' it, but instead he was writin' a last word to me. He said he was tired o' livin' anyhow, the world was so down on 'im, an' that he'd ruther die 'an take a hand in lettin' a gang o' thieves steal the savin's o' pore folks, an' so he said he was goin' to refuse. He said he hoped it would give the lie to the belief that he was dishonest beca'se his old daddy had gone wrong. Thar was another matter he writ about, but that was private. I want to say, though, that George Buckley wasn't happy; he hain't been happy fer a long time. Thar are men in this world that think they are too good to mix an' mingle with men o' his stamp, but I've got sech a durn contempt fer that sort o' thing that I feel like slappin' the jaws o' folks that do in this day of enlightenment."

The shot struck him in the forehead.

"Same here!" said Bascom Truitt.

They were all somehow looking at Major Cranston. Even Hanks had fixed him with a curious stare. The invalid stirred uneasily in his chair. One of his pillows fell to the floor, but the negro man behind him forgot to restore it. Negroes comprehend the most delicate workings of the Anglo-Saxon brain, and this black creature knew that his master had incurred the displeasure of his neighbors. Cranston seemed to feel that he ought to speak, but he did not like the expressions on the faces of Truitt and Hillyer, and their voices had rung with accusing defiance.

"What do you think ought to be done, Mr. Hanks?" he asked.

"I don't know," said Hanks. "I don't know."

"Well," ventured Cranston, interlacing his white, thin fingers, "I see no harm in wiring the governor to offer a reward for the arrest of the men. The editor of the Citizen told me as I came down that he'd publish anything free of charge. If the governor would offer $500, or even three"—

"Governor!" snorted Truitt. "Do you reckon I'd go to that cowardly skunk to help in a matter like this? Ef we hain't able here at home to stand behind a boy that offered his life to save the money o' the widows an' orphans in this county we ort to be whipped."

"Huh!" ejaculated Hanks suddenly. "Five hundred dollars fer the man that shot George Buckley. I'll give $5,000 in cash out o' my own pocket! You tell the editor that fer me, an' tell 'im the quicker he prints it the better it'll suit me. Tell 'im to git out a extra an' handbills an' send 'em on hosses an' trains in all directions. I'll foot the bill." He was standing now, and his glance was bearing down significantly on the major. "I never met a better man than George Buckley. He's wuth more to the community than forty-'leven fluted bosom ring politicians. 'Seems to me I heard some fool woman or other say thar was a few people in this town that tried to hold their heads above 'im on account o' his affliction. By gum, them sort ud have to climb a powerful high mountain to look over that boy's head, an' don't you forget it."

"That's the ticket!" said Truitt, following Hanks outside.

"Seems to me," said Cranston, his proud lip quivering as he turned to Hillyer, "that I'm being hit at. I didn't come down here to talk over my—my family matters with anybody."

"We are all worked up in sympathy for George," Hillyer said coldly. "But, knowing what I do about the hearts o' pore daughter an' George Buckley, I feel like tellin' you to go to the deuce with yore notions o' family honor, Major Cranston."

"I have not said I wanted to discuss the matter with you," retorted the major sharply.

"I don't care whether you want to discuss it or not," answered Hillyer. "You are blind as a bat. The man you are trying to make yore gal marry is a dirty, sneaking coward, an' "—

"Why don't you tell him these things?" broke in Cranston angrily.

"He's been told twice to his teeth by friends o' mine an' took it like a whipped pup."

"You mean to tell me that Governor Telfare let any man insult him without resenting it?"

"Yes; he was low enough to meet George Buckley on yore own lawn an' order him away as if he had been a dog. The boy cussed 'im fer everything he could think of, all o' which yore brag man took like a egg suckin' dog. After that Bas Truitt went to Atlanta an' told 'im what he thought of 'im in his own house an' then pulled his ears good an' sound an' left 'im. That's the man you are tryin' to link to your lordly name—a man who today, accordin' to reliable information, is a bankrupt an' don't own the shirt on his back—a man who never had any standin' an' only got into office as a dark horse by the skin o' his teeth when the party disagreed between two respectable men. You want the truth; I'm givin' it to you. Yore gal knows what he is an' despises 'im from the bottom of her heart. She loves George Buckley, an' she would marry 'im today if she wasn't afeard you'd drap dead of heart disease. I don't believe yore heart's got that sort o' disease. Dr. Jobe says yon dat too much an' that it's nothin' but yore old liver."

Cranston was as white as the pillow behind him.

"Can you prove that Telfare is—is insolvent?" he asked.

"Yes, I can."

"And that he refused to fight under an insult like you say Buckley and Truitt gave him?"

"Yes."

"Well, I'd like to have the proof."

"I'll git it fer you," said Hillyer. "I hain't got no time fer that now. I see Kenner comin' from home. He'll know how the pore boy is."

"He's doin' fine," Kenner declared as he entered a moment later. "The danger is entirely over. It's just good nussin' he needs now. Lord, he had a close shave!"

Hillyer's face melted into tenderness. Reaching out his hand to Cranston, he said impulsively:

"We cayn't afford to quarrel at sech a time, major. I'm so happy over that boy's escape that I cayn't entertain hard feelin'."

"Well, I'm sure I wish him no harm," said the Virginian as he gave his arm to his servant and turned from the room.

"You got that news straight, did you, Jim?" asked the merchant eagerly.

"From Jobe hisse'f. Oh, George 'll pull through!"

"An' thank God fer it," replied Hillyer reverently as he sank into his chair.

"We certainly have had a time of it this week," said Kenner. "Jest think how old Trabue's suffered."

"An' I'm thankful he's doin' so well," said Hillyer. "They told me this mornin' at his house that he was much better."

"Better?" cried Kenner. "Why, he's dead!"

"De-ad? Oh, no, Jim—no, no!"

"Yes, he's gone, Mr. Hillyer. They come a-runnin' fer Jobe about two hours ago, but he didn't git thar in time. They thought he was goin' to make the rifle, but he tuck a bad spell all of a sudden, an' thar wasn't no holdin' 'im back."

Hillyer turned his back to the speaker and leaned his head on his hand. Kenner looked at him curiously for a minute; then he said:

"I 'lowed I'd say, Mr. Hillyer, that I know how to do George's work, an' I'd take it as a favor to keep it up till he's able to come down."

But Hillyer was not listening.

"I say, I 'lowed"— But the merchant was still inattentive, and Kenner left the room, his eyes fixed in a puzzled stare on the old man at the desk.

"I'll swear he's a quar old duck," Kenner mused as he walked toward the compress, his hands in his pockets. "I never know how to take 'im."

CHAPTER XXXI.

THREE days later George was able to sit up in bed and take light nourishment. Mrs. Hillyer proved the best and tenderest of nurses. On the afternoon of the third day she came in and sat beside him.

"I ortn't to bring my worries to a sick man," she said, with a little forced laugh, "but you know Mr. Hillyer mighty nigh as well as I do, George, an' it's his actions that's troublin' me now. Ever since he set up all night with the old men over Trabue's body he's been actin' curious, an' this mornin' he saddled a hoss an' went off to the mountains, sayin' he wouldn't be back till tomorrow. I axed 'im what he was goin' fer, an' he jest said, 'Business,' but it's powerful quar fer 'im to leave the warehouse in Jim Kenner's charge an' you flat o' yore back. I 'lowed at fust that maybe he was after the thieves that shot you, but Mr. Hanks told me that nobody had claimed the reward he'd offered an' that it was believed the men had got clean off out o' reach. No, it wasn't that, an' what Mr. Hillyer did go fer is a mystery to me."

George fancied he had the key to the matter, but he did not feel at liberty to disclose it, so he made no reply. "Poor fellow!" he said to himself. "He has gone to see Mrs. Hambright to confess what he has been doing in regard to her supposed pension."

"Pore boy," Mrs. Hillyer went on sympathetically, "I reckon you've got enough troubles o' yore own without me pushin' mine on you, but you manage never to show yore'n."

"We all have them," said Buckley philosophically. "I try to remember that and put up with mine."

The woman sighed. "An' through all this last affair you hain't mentioned one person that's been on yore mind constant, George. I know you been thinkin' about 'er, fer when you was delirious the other night her name was on yore lips all the time. I set thar at the window, my boy, an' had the hardest cry I ever had in my life. I jest wish she could 'a' come in the room an' overheard all you said. George, you must 'a' been dreamin' that you 'n' her was fetched together, fer I never in all my days heard such tender words. You actually set up once an' put yore feet on the floor, an' held out yore arms an' called to 'er."

"I did have a dream of that kind," Buckley admitted under his breath. He was silent for a moment, and then he went on: "It was the most wonderful thing I ever experienced. It seemed so real. I thought I was lying helpless out in the sunshine and that she came to me across a meadow—an endless meadow covered with fragrant flowers. I thought her hands and arms were full of them and that she came to me laughing, singing, dancing. She seemed to have on the dress that she wore that night in Atlanta, though her hair was down and blown about by the wind. I thought she threw the flowers over me and held out her hands to help me up. And when we stood together, looking toward the setting sun, I—I thought I kissed her and that we stood alone in all the world—just she and I. I seemed to be unable to speak, but she told me that we were never, never to be parted. Then I thought something struck me like a stone in the forehead, and it began to grow dark and she vanished. It was a twinge in my wound that waked me."

DANGER SIGNALS.

No engineer would be mad enough to run by the flag which signaled danger. It is different with the average man or woman. They attempt constantly to run by the danger signals of Nature and that attempt costs thousands of lives every year. When the appetite becomes irregular or entirely gives out, when sleep is troubled and broken, when there is a constant feeling of dullness and languor, Nature is hoisting the danger signal. The stomach and its allied organs are failing in their work and the body is losing the nutrition on which its strength depends.

Such a condition calls for a prompt use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cures diseases of the stomach and other organs of digestion and nutrition, purifies and enriches the blood and builds up the body with sound, solid flesh.

"I have had so much benefit from your medicines am glad to say a few words that you may use for publication," writes Mrs J. R. Degroes, Crystal Falls, Conn. "I had been troubled with a combination of diseases for over two years, but Kidneys and liver bothered me most. Some of my worst attacks were headache, frontal pains around heart and under right shoulder-blade. My hands and feet were cold nearly all the time, and I had such chilliness between shoulders. Seven days could but little for food; I lost flesh; felt so tired and miserable it seemed I couldn't do any housework. Took medicine from my physician, but received no benefit. Bought a bottle of 'Golden Medical Discovery,' and after taking it I felt so much better we determined to give it a fair trial. Appetite soon improved and gradually the disorders disappeared until now I am well."

Dr. Pierce's Pellets Cure Constipation.

A ROSY COMPLEXION denotes a healthy heart. Too many people use cosmetics to brighten their complexion, temporarily, when by making their hearts strong they could have health, strength and a rosy complexion permanently.

Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure removes the cause. It builds up the tissues and walls of the heart. A weak heart cannot distribute the blood properly and in consequence we see pale, sickly faces everywhere. Make your heart strong with this great cure and you will bless the day you saw this advertisement.

Miss Mary Hartt, Irvington, Cal., writes—"What is the price for one bottle of Dr. Agnew's Heart Cure? I used this remedy while in Canada and I think it the best medicine for the Heart and Stomach ever made. —45 advisable that sewer connections be properly inspected.

Ald. Mason pointed out, that the Legal Committee was preparing a report on these questions and this would be presented at next meeting night.

Ald. Johnston moved and Ald. Begley seconded, that the question of extension of the town's fire limits be referred to the Committee of the Whole.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Mason, seconded by Ald. Hicks, that when the demand from the Board of Education for the year be received, the treasurer be authorised to pay the sum required for January.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Johnston, seconded by Ald. McIntyre, that the mayor and clerk be authorised to sign a memorial to the Dominion Government from the Council showing the great lack of accommodation and facilities at the post office here and the need for a free postal delivery and hand it to Mr. R. R. Hall, M.P., for presentation to the Government.—Carried.

STAND FOR CARTERS.

Ald. Johnston suggested that a carter's stand be constructed on some part of the market square. He said it would be appreciated by the men who now have to stand on the streets.

Ald. Leary considered this a good idea. The carters would undoubtedly be willing to equip the stand with a telephone and this would be a great accommodation, not only to them, but to the public.

COMPLAINTS MADE

Ald. Tovey suggested that action to have the arc lights be kept burning until at least seven o'clock in the morning. At present the employees of the C.G.E. Co. had to go to their work in the morning in the dark.

Mayor Best and Ald. Johnston agreed to interview the Peterborough Light and Power Co. on the matter.

Ald. Tovey also pointed out that the snow plowing, particularly in the south end, had not been done properly. The men ought to be kept up to the work. It should be done at night, if necessary.

The Mayor explained that the town officials had charge of this matter. Until a couple of new snow-ploughs were procured, more should be put on with snow shovels. Mayor Best promised to look into the grievance.

Ald. Tovey further pointed out that ladies had frequently complained to him of the impossibility for them to pass along George and Charlotte streets for the loafers who were allowed to congregate.

The Mayor stated that he would bring the matter to the attention of the Chief of Police.

The Council adjourned.

BEWARE OF BAD FIVE DOLLAR BILLS

Now in too General Circulation in Business Circles in Town

Mr. Peter Campbell, local manager of the Bank of Toronto, showed the Examiner this morning a counterfeit of a Bank of Montreal $5 bill. The public are urged to be on their guard as these bad bills seem to be in pretty general circulation. Two were received with merchants' deposits at the Bank of Toronto this morning. The counterfeit is a very clumsy one—a photograph of a genuine bill done on poor flabby paper. The bogus is signed by "Plunkett" on the lower left hand margin. A very cursory scrutiny will show its bogus character.

MR. ANDERSON'S KEEN CAMPAIGN

Excellent and Enthusiastic Meetings in Different Sections

Notes of Coming Meetings—Promising Success of Mr. Anderson's Canvass

The political campaign in the East Riding is proceeding with great vigour judging from the fight that Mr. Wm. Anderson, the Liberal candidate is waging. Notwithstanding that even Mr. Anderson's opponents concede that his election is beyond a doubt, the Liberal candidate seems determined to leave no stone unturned to secure his election by an increased majority. Mr. Anderson has meetings for every night this week. In fact he has meetings arranged for almost every night between now and the 25th of January. He is being assisted by very able campaigners, having had already two Cabinet Ministers speaking in the riding during the past week. Mr. Anderson on Monday night of this week addressed a meeting at Haultain. He was accompanied by Mr. G. K. Martin, of town. Tuesday night of this week Mr. Anderson speaks at Apsley and is accompanied by Mr. F. D. Kerr, barrister, of town, and Mr. Martin. On Wednesday afternoon the same three gentlemen will speak at Clydesdale, and at Lasswade in the evening.

On Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of this week, Mr. A. M. Peterson of Colborne, will speak at Cordova, Blairton and Rush Point, in the Township of Belmont.

On Thursday night Mr. Anderson will speak at Hall's Glen, and will be accompanied by Mr. W. S. Davidson, barrister, of Peterborough, and Mr. Hartley Dewart, D. C., of Toronto, one of the best platform speakers in the province will address a meeting in Mr. Anderson's interests at Warsaw.

Mr. Anderson will hold a large mass meeting in the town hall, at Havelock, on Monday night next, when prominent speakers will address the electors of Belmont and Havelock.

Mr. Anderson has a meeting arranged for Cottesloe on the evening of Thursday, Jan. 19th, and for Westwood on the evening of Friday, Jan. 20th. A meeting at Stewarts, Otonabee, will be held on the evening of Monday, Jan. 24th.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell, barrister, is also giving Mr. Anderson a helping hand and will speak at Havelock and Westwood.

The Liberal Candidate in East Peterborough is everywhere meeting with success in his personal canvas, which is being carried on in the same vigorous manner as the platform side of his campaign. His election by a handsome majority is almost an assured fact.

BOTH SEPTETTES MET DEFEAT

Intermediates Lost at Lindsay and Juniors at Port Hope

Scores were 8-4 and 2-1—Seniors were off-color—The Teams

Last night was evidently an off-night, as far as the Peterborough hockey teams were concerned, both junior and intermediate O.H.A. teams being defeated by old-time rivals. The juniors went to Port Hope and lost by 2—1, after a close and very exciting game, while the intermediates were trimmed in Lindsay by 8-4 in what was only a fairly good game of hockey. Both teams however, should have little difficulty in reversing the scores in the returning games, which will be played shortly.

LOST AT LINDSAY.

Lindsay will naturally crow loud and lustily for having scored a victory over Peterborough in hockey, something which has not occurred in recent years. Let us congratulate the Scugogites on their victory, and the locals are making no squeal, but taking their medicine like sports The year the boys won the championship, they lost the first at Lindsay, but did not lose another game during the season. The game was not a good exhibition of scientific hockey but was fairly fast and the checking was hard and sometimes rough. Lindsay had the better of the first half, scoring 6 goals to Peterboros, 2. Things were more even in the second half, the Peterboroughs doing much better work, and the score was tied in this half. The change of Cavanah to cover-point, instead of on the wings, made a considerable difference.

The Lindsay rink is small and not nearly so well lighted as our own, and the wings cannot "play the boards" as on a proper rink, so that the losers style of play was materially affected, and there will be a different tale to tell when the teams meet here on Friday night. Lindsay has a good team, however, and will bear watching. The line up was as follows:

Lindsay — Goal, McGrath; point, Reilly; cover point, Irving; rover, Duffus; forwards, Taylor, Parkin, and Sylvester.

Peterborough — Goal, Wasson; point, Glover; cover point, Mahar; forwards, Morgan, Parnell, Crowley.

W. A. McCord of Toronto, refereed, and gave good satisfaction.

The Lindsay Post will now raise its melodious voice in telling how wonderful is Lindsay, and how rank is Peterborough.

LOST AT PORT HOPE.

The juniors made a most creditable showing in Port Hope, and with a little luck would have come out on top. The game was very closely contested throughout, neither team having any material advantage. The locals were stronger than at any time this season and should turn the tables in the return game. The score was 2—1. The teams were:

Peterborough — Goal, Fitzpatrick; point, Moore; cover, Parker; forwards, McWilliams, McFarlane, Lang, Hall.

Port Hope — Goal, Gamble, point, Hume; cover point, McLean forwards Mercer, Rowden, Alcott, MacMillan.

THE EXPLOSION OF A MINE.

Notice Received of a Disastrous One at Port Arthur.

NOGI'S ARMY HURRIED NORTH

Captive Victims of the War Furnish a Pathetic Spectacle—Gallant Russian Garrison Starts For Japan—Announcement of Return of Baltic Fleet By Jap Secret Service—Gen. Stoessel Talks.

London, Jan. 10.—The Daily Telegraph's correspondent at Che Foo telegraphs that the Japanese Consul there has received notice that there was a disastrous mine explosion at Port Arthur.

The same correspondent asserts that a large portion of Gen. Nogi's army has been already hurried north to Liaoyang.

A despatch from Port Louis, to The Daily Mail, says: "Nothing has been seen or heard of the Russian second Pacific squadron. It is supposed it is sheltering either in some harbor off Madagascar or off Comoro Islands.

"There are mysterious rumors here of the approach of Japanese cruisers and of the receipt of strange wireless messages."

Founding the Japs.

Huanchan, Jan. 9, via Mukden, Jan. 10.—The news of the fall of Port Arthur was received here first unofficially from the Japanese, who let loose numerous paper kites bearing letters and triumphal inscriptions.

These kites were picked up by Russian soldiers, who received the announcement doggedly, regret being expressed that the troops had been unable to relieve the garrison.

Russian artillery is steadily pounding the section of the Japanese line west of Sinchinpu and about Baitoshan and Sintunglun.

The Japanese are using balloons and searchlights in efforts to locate Russian batteries which have been causing great annoyance.

The past two days the Japanese have made two unsuccessful attempts to break through the Russian advance lines.

Gen. Stakelberg, who has been ill, has returned to the front.

A Pathetic Spectacle.

Headquarters of the Third Japanese Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 6, via Kinkow and Tientsin, Jan. 10.—Five thousand men of the Russian garrison at Port Arthur to-day were marched from Yahutsui to Chang Ling Tzu, and the other detachments followed soon after. Each detachment was accompanied by six loaded transport carts. The Russians during the night will be taken on special trains or open trucks to Dalny, and they will immediately embark for Japan.

The long procession of remnants of the gallant Russian garrison was a pathetic spectacle. The first arrivals at Chanlingtzu were four droskies, drawn by sorry looking horses. They contained the staff officers who had refused to give their parole. All were their swords, as they were allowed to do under the terms of the capitulation compact.

A few minutes later the first detachment arrived. The regimental officers marched with their men, their heads bowed and their faces seamed with lines, showing the result of the mental and physical strain they had undergone during the long defence.

The prisoners were treated with the greatest respect and kindness, though they were regarded with much natural curiosity. The soldiers were given food, cigarettes and beer and the Japanese soldiers voluntarily carried the effects of the prisoners when they were overcome by fatigue.

Original Garrison.

Tokio, Jan. 10.—In well informed circles it is estimated that the original garrison of Port Arthur numbered about 38,000 to 40,000 men, including sailors. The killed, those who died of sickness, and the missing, are placed at over 10,000.

Wounded Prisoners.

Nagasaki, Jan. 10.—One thousand wounded Russian prisoners of war from Port Arthur have arrived at Dairel Hospital.

THE BALTIC FLEET.

Secret Service of Jap Navy Makes An Important Announcement.

Tokio, Jan. 10.—The secret service department of the Japanese navy has definitely informed the Government that Russia's Baltic fleet is on its way back to Europe. This information, posted last night in the Imperial navy board, explains the prolonged stay here of Admiral Togo and Vice-Admiral Kamimura. From the beginning Japan has been accurately informed with regard to both divisions of the Baltic fleet, and is now able to announce that the warships are returning.

They will go through the Suez Canal in three divisions, the first led by Admiral Botrovsky and the battleship Oleg. He has with him three cruisers, two colliers and a small torpedo boat flotilla. There was some hope here that the Baltic squadron would sail as far as the South China Sea, in which event its return would have been doubtful. Admiral Rojestvensky's division of warships was south of Diego Suarez Bay Sunday, the Imperial board was informed, but it would be dangerous for him to remain on the northeast coast of Madagascar for any lengthy period. His return through the canal could be cut off by Jan. 20. It is expected here that he will sail not later than Wednesday for Port Said.

The belief now is that the warships will set out in March, reinforced by the news ships of the Baltic squadron. They could not arrive in the Sea of Japan before June. Before that period Japan will have three new armored cruisers built at home, and, undoubtedly, some of the battleships in Port Arthur harbor. That these sunken vessels can be raised is regarded now as most likely. The Government's opinion is best expressed by the departure for Port Arthur yesterday of Vice-Admiral Shibeyama, chief of the Kure navy yard, who has designed the construction of all cruisers built in Japan in the last five years. It is clear that the Government hopes to add the Pobieda, Pobieda, Peresviet and Retvizan to its war fleet.

GEN. STOESSEL TALKS.

Had Been Promised Relief and Could Not Credit News of Kuropatkin's Defeat and Heavy Loss.

Headquarters Third Japanese Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 7, via Tientsin, Jan. 10.—Capt. Tsunoda, the Japanese staff officer who was sent to Port Arthur to inform Gen. Stoessel of the contents of the message of the Emperor of Japan, saying that the garrison should be treated with the greatest consideration, says:

"Gen. Stoessel's first inquiry was about the whereabouts of Gen. Kuropatkin. I did not know exactly, but understood he was somewhere about Mukden. Gen. Stoessel remarked that he had last heard from General Kuropatkin Oct. 6, saying he would relieve Port Arthur soon. General Stoessel added that he had sent out spies who returned and reported that General Kuropatkin, with a relieving army, was at Kinchou, twenty miles north of Port Arthur.

Didn't Believe the Story.

"Gen. Stoessel was plainly incredulous at my statement that Gen. Kuropatkin had been defeated and driven back towards Mukden, so I produced maps, showing the position of the two armies near the Shakhe River, and gave Stoessel details of Kuropatkin's defeat with the loss of 50,000 to 60,000 men, at which the Russian general expressed amazement and quickly remarked that he had been misled.

"Gen. Stoessel then asked where the Baltic fleet was, and I told him that some of the ships had not passed the Cape of Good Hope.

"With a hopeless expression look, Gen. Stoessel said: 'Now that Port Arthur has fallen, there is no use for the fleet coming any further.'

"I then asked Gen. Stoessel what had caused the most damage to the garrison during the siege, and he replied: 'Your eleven-inch Howitzers. After they arrived our defensive works became useless.'

FIRE AT NORWOOD THIS MORNING

Residence of Mr. L. H. Kirkpatrick Badly Gutted

Roof Fell on Charles McNicholl, Rendering Him Unconscious.

Special to the Examiner

Norwood, Jan. 10.—The two-storey private residence of Mr. L. H. Kirkpatrick, Peterborough street, was this morning badly gutted by fire, the cause of which is unknown.

During the progress of the fire the roof of the kitchen collapsed, falling on Charlie McNichol, who was rendered unconscious. There were three other men on the roof but were uninjured. There is an insurance of $600.00 on the house. The contents are also insured. Owing to the high winds it is certain that if the whole house had been burned the balance of the street would have gone as well.

Russ and Jap Squadrons Cruise in Indian Ocean—Mines Blow up 20 Japanese—Kendrachenko, Who Was Killed at Port Arthur Dec. 15, Was Actual Defender of Fortress According to Stories of Prisoners, Who Also Say Stoessel Was Inclined to Quit in August Last

Port Louis, Island of Mauritius, Jan. 11.—It is rumored here that a Japanese squadron is at Diego Garcia, Chagos Islands. The Russian admiral was informed Jan. 20 that Japanese warships were proceeding to meet the Russian squadron and the vigilance of the latter was redoubled.

Japs Off Labun.

Sandakan, British North Borneo, Jan. 11.—Two Japanese transports were reported off Labuu on Jan. 4. Two colliers for the Russian second Pacific squadron were at Labun on Jan. 7.

Mines Blow Up 20 Japs.

London, Jan. 11.—The correspondent at Port Arthur of The Daily Mail says that on Jan. 8, twenty Japanese were killed by the explosion of a contact mine inside the forts, and two miners in the town also exploded.

The Daily Telegraph's Port Arthur correspondent says that, according to stories by prisoners, the real defender of the fortress was Major-General Kondrachenko, commander of the 7th East Siberian Rifle Brigade (who was killed Dec. 15), and that had he lived it is probable that the fortress would not have surrendered.

Gen. Stoessel, the correspondent adds, was inclined to surrender as early as last August. The garrison, he concluded, included 10,000 Poles, who were indifferent fighters.

Have Exploded 395 Mines.

Tokio, Jan. 11.—The Navy Department says that the district covered with submarine mines had a radius of forty miles outside of Port Arthur. It reports the destruction and explosion of 395 of these mines to date.

Show Fearless Magnificent.

Nagasaki, Jan. 11.—The Japanese Government transport Tosa brought 28 Russian officers, who were landed here, and 1,000 men, who were transhipped to Kokura.

Russians Slain in Mongolia.

Marseilles, Jan. 11.—A mail steamer which arrived here yesterday from the Far East reported that Col. Bogodonoff of the Russian army and three companies sent by the forfer Viceroy Alexieff on a mission to Mongolia, were assassinated by natives.

Workers See Chief of Police.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 11.—An extraordinary delegation of factory hands called on Gen. Fullon, the chief of police yesterday, as the result of an indignation meeting held, by the factory hands of St. Petersburg. While no recognized union exists, factory workers to the number of several thousands have a strong secret organization. General Fullon received the deputation and promised such inquiry as the proposition permitted. The working people express themselves as being exceedingly aggrieved, and say they have not hitherto participated in demonstrations, but that the present situation, if not remedied, is full of potential trouble.

Kaiser Rewards Bravery.

Berlin, Jan. 11.—Emperor William has conferred on Gen. Stoessel and Gen. Nogi the order of "Pour Le Merite," in recognition of the bravery of themselves and their troops at Port Arthur. His Majesty has asked the Russian and Japanese Emperors to authorize Gens. Stoessel and Nogi to accept the decorations.

ARMS AND AMMUNITION.

Turkey and Bulgaria Get Ready For Eventualities.

London, Jan. 11.—The active preparations already reported to have been made, both in Turkey and Bulgaria, for a possible war this year are fully confirmed by a private letter received in London from a minister accredited to the Balkan courts. This minister, who has just completed a tour of the Balkan capitals, writes that the Turkish and Bulgarian Governments are energetically preparing for eventualities. Large shipments of arms and ammunition have been made and recruits from Asia Minor are arriving at Salonica weekly for service in the Turkish army. The Bulgarian and Greek bands in Macedonia are increasing daily and are fighting each other and the Turks. This three-cornered guerrilla warfare threatens to assume the bloodiest phase in the spring.

Turkey to Change Face.

London, Jan. 11.—Discussing the effect of the fall of Port Arthur on the Far Eastern question, the correspondent at Sofia of The Times says that belief in Russia's invincibility has received a severe shock, the result of which among the Balkan States, is rather exaggerated fears of Turkish encroachments in Macedonia.

These nervous apprehensions tend to increase Servian efforts at rapprochement with Bulgaria. The effects produced in Constantinople, the correspondent says, are likely to be more serious. Turkey is quick to appreciate the military significance of events in the Far East and is likely to stiffen in her attitude towards the reforming leaders in Macedonia. Turkey is preparing severe repressive measures to forestall the apprehended rising in the spring, but there is reason to fear that these measures may hasten rather than avert the outbreak.

A DAY'S SERIOUS FIRES.

Bad Blazes At Windsor, Woodstock, Southampton and Winnipeg—Bullets Cracked in the Windsor Fire.

Windsor, Jan. 11.—Fighting fire amid the carck of bullets and the occasional report of a can of powder, was the strenuous task of the Windsor fire department yesterday morning at a bad fire in Nelson & Bros. hardware store.

The whole stock and building were entirely destroyed, as well as stocks in adjoining stores. The damage amounts to about $80,000.

The firemen and their apparatus were coated with ice, and a strong wind helped the flames. Assistance was summoned from Detroit and Walkerville, and the fireboat and firemen from Detroit succeeded in subduing the fire, which at one time threatened to destroy many places of business in Windsor's down-town district.

The loss caused by the fire is estimated between $50,000 and $60,000, fully covered by insurance. The Nelson stock was inventoried a short time ago at $35,000, while the building, which was owned by the Nelson estate, was valued at $10,000. W. Moore, the bookkeeper, said the firm carried about $40,000 in insurance on stock and building. G. B. Lodge carries a stock valued at $8,000 or more. His loss will be $5,000 or thereabouts, covered by insurance. The building was owned by J. H. Mann, who placed the valuation at $10,000, and says he is fully insured.

$100,000 Fire At Woodstock.

Woodstock, Jan. 11.—For a period of over four hours yesterday morning the business section of Woodstock was threatened with entire destruction by fire, causing a loss of $100,000. The conflagration originated in the basement of the store of Gardner & Co., the largest hardware store in the city, and rapidly spread to all parts of the building. As a result the entire hardware stock, valued at $35,000, was consumed, together with the new four-storey building valued at $45,000.

The flames also spread to the three dry goods stores of John White Company, Limited, and the drygoods store of Campbell Bros., adjoining on the east, and the Calster House on the west. The stock of the drygoods stores represents in value about $150,000, and practically all the goods were damaged by smoke or water, and thus the loss will be enormous. It is as yet impossible to estimate the loss to the drygoods firms.

Caught Fire From Furnace.

Southampton, Jan. 11.—The extensive plant of the Saugeen Mineral Water Co. was completely destroyed by fire Monday night. Fire was left in the furnaces to keep the buildings warm, and the flames spread and ignited the plant. The fire was fanned by a fierce blizzard, which raged in this section of the country, and all efforts to extinguish it proved futile.

Overall Factory Burned.

Winnipeg, Jan. 11.—Hoover & Company's overall manufactory was badly gutted by fire yesterday morning. The loss will amount to $20,000, but the building is insured.

STEEL RAILS FOR THE G.T.P.

Large Orders Placed in Great Britain Within Past Few Days.

London, Jan. 11.—(C.A.P.)—The Canadian Press learns that the G. T. P. have placed large orders for steel rails during the last few days with prominent firms in Great Britain.

Doesn't Think Its True.

Toronto, Jan. 11.—President Warren of the Soo industries, doubts the report that the G.T.P. are placing large orders for rails in England. "The company is at present negotiating with us, and I have no doubt but that we will be able to fill all their requirements," he said. Yesterday we booked an order of 7,000 tons of rails for the Pere Marquette Railroad."

Foul Play Suspected.

Montreal, Jan. 11.—The body found in the river ice near the Lachine Rapids has been identified as that of Martin Labatt of Bradford, Eng., a young landscape artist. Nothing but papers were found in the clothing, and the body was badly disfigured from having been in the ice for some time. The police are looking into the possibility of there having been foul play. The deceased arrived in Montreal in the latter part of October, 1904.

Taken Guns to Hong Kong.

Victoria, B. C., Jan. 11.—The steamer Keeman is loading two heavy guns, 9.2, and some other smaller guns, which have been held in reserve at Esquimalt, and are being shipped to Hong Kong in connection of the abandonment of the

Bull Fight in Mexico City on Christmas Day

A Graphic Description of the Event—How Mexicans Enjoy Themselves.

Mr. Ed. Conroy, of town, is on a business trip to Mexico, and on Christmas Day, at Mexico City, he had the experience of witnessing a Mexican bull fight, something which few Canadians have seen. A Mexico City paper describes the fight as follows:—

"At the conclusion of yesterday's bull fight, which was markedly exciting on account of the ferocity of the last two bulls, the audience was shown five handsome toros imported expressly from Spain for breeding purposes. The beautiful animals were brought into the ring in the crates in which they made the ocean journey, and when released bounded about the ring with legs that had grown stiff by reason of their long confinement. One or two could hardly stand when the crate door was opened and they gained liberty. A shout of approval greeted their appearance and many were the encomiums passed on their shape and apparent fighting qualities.

"With the exception of the two last bulls, the animals used in yesterday's fight were mediocre. The second and third were lively upon their appearance, but the cloak work seemed to tire them so much that they refused to attack at the crucial moment, when the matador's sword was poised for the death blow. Especially was this true with regard to the second which necessitated seven sword strokes before the final thrust. Mazzantinito was the matador, and was as disgusted with the poor exhibition as was the audience. The fourth bull put up a good fight but his spirits at first seemed daunted by the hisses and catcalls of the audience when he backed away from the picadores and only skilful capa work enraged him to the proper fighting. Then he made things interesting.

Bulls five and six scattered horses and toreros from the time they entered until neat sword play put them away. The last bull ripped four horses in less than that many minutes and assisted a mono sabio to a hurried if somewhat undignified ascent of the fence. A minor feature that evoked loud applause, was the unusually skillful cloak work of Mazzantinito and his daring plant of six-inch banderillas in their proper positions. Chico de la Bima also gained additional prestige by his exhibition of nerve in playing the bull. All in all, the fight was an unusually good one and the audience showed their appreciation by continuous applause after some noteworthy and daring incidents."

Another paper in describing the same fight says:—

There was an area of one acre of land with an elevated grandstand all around and it was about three-fourths filled with people, all Spaniards and Mexicans. The first thing on the programme, two beautiful horses and riders came in the ring. Magnificent horses then followed. Three more horses and riders, then three mules with three riders, then seven bull fighters and their helpers. Then all came in the ring in a procession. Each taking his place in the ring, except the first two horses and riders, which leave the ring. Then the three horses above mentioned stand about twenty feet apart. The ferocious bull is then let out of his enclosure and just as he comes into the ring, through the shoot, there is a fellow who sticks a knife with long red ribbons attached to it between his front shoulders and he simply roars and bellows and looks for trouble. Then the seven bull-fighters shake red, blue and purple blankets at him and then run away. By this time the bull is wild with pain, for the knife is still in his shoulder. Then he makes for the horses. I saw each of the six bulls kill three horses. They simply ripped them open in all shapes and forms with their horns.

ON SPLENDID RECORD.

Hon. G. W. Ross' Appeal For a Continuation of Public Confidence Based Upon the Province's Welfare.

Cornwall, Jan. 11.—Hon. Geo. W. Ross last night delighted an audience which was only limited in numbers by the capacity of the Town Hall by the vigorous defence of his Government and the spirited defiance of his political opponents to prove that he or any of his colleagues in the Cabinet had countenanced any form of political corruption. Admitting with sorrow that there had been electoral corruption by individuals on both sides, which he did not hesitate to denounce, he boldly asserted that the Liberals had not furnished the blacker record of the two parties, pointed to the severe punishment meted out to offenders, and appealed for a continuation of public confidence upon the splendid record of progressive legislation and honest and economical administration of the affairs of the Province for upwards of thirty years. The meeting, which was enthusiastic and responsive, was presided over by Mr. Robert Smith. The gallery was filled with ladies.

Mr. Whitney At Guelph.

Guelph, Jan. 11.—The Opera House was crowded last night on the occasion of a meeting held in the interests of Mr. J. P. Downey, Conservative candidate for South Wellington, at which Mr. J. P. Whitney was the principal speaker. The Opposition leader, who followed Mr. Downey, was, like that gentleman, greeted with enthusiasm, and no untoward incident disturbed the harmony of the proceedings. Mr. Whitney's address was the shortest he has delivered during his tour, and could not be described as a happy effort. He suffered from hoarseness, and in the earlier part of his speech his remarks were disconnected, and apparently did not make a good impression. Later he improved somewhat, but it is doubtful if his address will prove of much aid to the

R. F. SUTHERLAND ELECTED SPEAKER

House of Commons' Session Opened this Afternoon

Official Opening by Governor General To-morrow Morning.

Special to the Examiner.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—The House of Commons was a busy spot all the morning with members-elect signing the roll.

This afternoon at 3 o'clock Sir Hewie Tachereau, Deputy Governor, convened both Houses in the Senate Chamber, and made the formal request for the election of speakers.

On the Commons resuming session Sir Wilfrid Laurier nominated R. F. Sutherland, M.P., as first Commissioner and Mr. Sutherland was accordingly invested with the honour, accompanied by the usual formalities and amidst generous applause.

The House then adjourned to be officially opened to-morrow by Earl Grey.

ALL SAINTS GUILD WERE ENTERTAINED

Very Enjoyable Time at St. Andrew's Guild Rooms Last Evening.

Last evening the members of St. Andrew's Young Men's Guild, entertained the All Saints' Guild, at the regular monthly meeting. Both societies were very largely represented, there being about seventy young men present. The meeting was in every way a most enjoyable one for all present, the programme provided being one of much interest.

After the transaction of business, a debate was given on "Resolved, — That Canada offers more opportunities for young men than does the United States." The affirmative side was upheld by Messrs. R. H. Elliott and H. H. Lloyd; while the negative speakers were Messrs. W. VanEvery and W. Campbell. All four speakers presented their arguments in a clear and positive manner, both sides of the question being well covered. The affirmative, however, had more convincing arguments, and as a result carried the decision of the judges, who were Rev. J. G. Potter, Rev. J. J. Wright, and Mr. B. Rickey. Mr. Reid of All Saints Guild acted as critic.

A banquet followed, the repast being a delightful one. The daughters of Erin waited upon the tables in admirable style.

A short toast list was run off, Mr. Chas. Anderson, president, St. Andrews' Guild, being in the chair. The speeches were crisp and the hour spent very enjoyably.

The toast to "The King" was honoured in the usual manner, after which Mr. H. H. Edmison in a neat speech, proposed the toast to "Our Guests," and Mr. Geo. Major of All Saints responded. Mr. Gilbert Scott sang a popular solo after which Mr. P. Kerr proposed the toast to "Canada. The toast to "The Ladies" was proposed by Mr. Coleman of All Saints and responded to by Mr. Scott. A solo by Mr. White closed the programme.

A very enjoyable programme was brought to a close by the singing of "Auld Lang Syne."

Daily Examiner.

WEDNESDAY JAN. 11, 1905.

NO SYMPATHY WITH PROGRESS.

The Conservative press—the more discerning part of it, at least — is evidently finding the corruption cry as used against the Liberals a close relation of the kicking gun; it hurts the man who fire it more than the game at which it is aimed. So, wisely enough, they are seeking other pleas against the Government and in the search they wander far afield. The Review now would like the electors to vote against Mr. Ross because, forsooth, while Sir Oliver Mowat in twenty-five years increased the outlay of the province $1,181,000, Mr. Ross in four years has increased it $1,177,000.

Perhaps there is someone on the Review staff who can remember the days of the corner grocery. The man who kept it didn't increase his outlays very much each successive year. An extra box of soap or a barrel of sugar was an investment to be watched with anxious care. Nor did he ever dream of trying to enlarge his business by displaying delicatessen wares to tempt the money from his customers' pockets. He knew very well there would be little response to that kind of appeal, any more than there would have been to a new-fangled stove polish being substituted for the old black lead which relied for its shine on its combination with pure and unadulterated elbow grease.

But after a while there arose a new generation which was quite ready for the delicatessen wares and rather liked the new fangled stove polish and was really quite keen after modern things. So the corner grocery expanded and adapted itself to new conditions. In so doing it saved itself from extinction for now-a-days the old corner grocery would stand for lack of enterprise.

It is to this corner-grocery stage that the Review and kindred papers recommend now to the Ross Government; and quite naturally, for a policy that represents no more expansion now than that which was practicable twenty years ago, would have little following from the progressive people of Ontario and the Conservatives might in that case hope to slip into office.

But it is expansion and increased outlay, so long as it can be had without mortgaging or direct taxation, that the people of Ontario want. Without such a policy there would be no great New Ontario with its hundreds of thousands of acres of fertile land and its millions of dollars worth of timber and minerals. Instead there would have been only an inaccessible wilderness, and if Conservative attempts had prevailed we should not have had even the inaccessible wilderness for the Dominion Government would have robbed this province of 160,000 acres which are now our most promising revenue-producing area. Neither would there have been any one of a dozen things that have proved a great boon to the province.

The people of Peterborough will have little sympathy with the effort of the Review to glorify the corner grocery stage. They will vote for Mr. McWilliams on the 25th of January and send a supporter to a Government that expands to meet the needs of the people and the demand of the times.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Due to the inclement weather, work for McWilliams.

The registered voters are for McWilliams in the proportion of three to two. That's the first taste of the victory which will be his, and the Liberal party's, on Jan. 25th.

The session of the Dominion Parliament will open with the Conservative party leaderless. Mr. Borden the late Conservative leader is without a seat. This is something new for the great Conservative party to meet the House without a leader—the first time in the history of Canada.

Those who heard the enthusiastic account of the beauty, wealth and fertility of the Temagami district, and other regions of New Ontario, as given by Mr. James Edmond Jones, at the Fortnightly Club, on Monday evening, could not fail to realise the wisdom and foresight of the Ross Government, in setting aside these, and other, forest reserves, and in making the thousands of acres of fine farm lands easy of access to the would-be settlers who are now rapidly filling up the country. Probably Mr. Jones was entirely innocent of any intention to glorify the Ross Government. His affiliations are Conservative. That only makes his statement the more valuable. There was no bias behind it.

Our evening contemporary is claiming credit for Mr. Whitney, because he is "bold enough to be honest." Yes! Mr. Whitney was bold enough to boast that he had broken the license laws, when rigid enforcement is one of his claims to support, and bad enough lawyer to claim that he was justified in inducing a hotel keeper to break the law. Mr. Whitney buying and consuming "Scotch" in his room after hours, was as much a breach of the law as Mr. Gus Porter, M.P., and his "royatering" companions, buying it over the bar, as they did on the occasion, when Mr. Whitney was serving his apprenticeship to a rigorous enforcement of the license law.

CELEBRATED THEIR WEDDING DAY

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Pilling, Married Thirty one Years.

At the home of Mr. and Mrs. Pilling 14 Bolivar street, there was a gathering of more than usual interest. It was the 31st anniversary of their wedding day.

About fifty relatives and friends responded to their invitations and right royally they were treated, no pains or expense being spared to make the guests happy.

Early in the evening ice cream and choice viands were served and later, when the two hands of the clock were pointing upward, tea and coffee and more substantial food was passed around.

The time was spent in games and reminiscences of the past. Chairs were placed in the centre of the room for the groom and bride of thirty-one years ago, who were surrounded by all their children, except their only son who is in business in the Northwest.

They certainly looked handsome, hale and hearty. Time has surely dealt very tenderly with them.

The Rev. A. H. Brace, of the Park Street Baptist Church at this stage took the chair and in a short address congratulated Mr. and Mrs. Pilling, speaking of Mrs. Pilling's value and industry as a help-mate. He remarked addressing Mr. Pilling, "If you survive you can never place this epitaph over her:—

"Here lies the poor woman who always was tired,
For she lived in a house where no help was hired.
Her last words on earth were "Dear friends, I am going,
Where washing ain't done, neither mending or sewing,
And everything there is exact to my wishes;
For where they don't eat, there's no washing of dishes;
I'll be where loud anthems forever are ringing,
And having no voice, I'll get rid of the singing.
Don't weep for me now, don't weep for me never,
For I'm going to do nothing, forever and ever."

Vocal and instrumental selections were given during the evening, the host contributing by singing an old-timer of his courting days.

Congratulatory speeches were made by Messrs. G. T. Gillespie, W. C. Barrie, M. Mowry and Miss M. Mann and Mrs. M. Mowry.

The chairman gave a Bible reading and led the company in thanksgiving and prayer, this bringing to a close a most profitable and enjoyable evening. The presents were numerous and valuable. —Com.

A BUNCH OF TORY BLUNDERS.

Ontario Opposition Record of Obstruction —The Mistakes of Whitney.

Here are some of the blunders of the Tory Party of Ontario during the last few years:

The fight against Ontario in the battle for Provincial rights.

The fight against Ontario in the control of our license system.

Opposition at one time to appointment of Minister of Education and Minister of Agriculture.

Opposition to erection of Normal Schools.

Opposition to establishment of School of Practical Science.

Opposition to aiding colonization railways in New Ontario.

Opposition to helping the re-establishment of the Soo industries through a guarantee of interest on bonds.

Opposition to the succession duties bill.

Opposition to appointment of a Forestry officer.

Opposition to the appointment of a drainage referee.

Opposition to the appointment of a Provincial Municipal Auditor.

Opposition to appointment of a good roads commissioner.

Opposition to the bill to tax corporations.

Opposition to almost every proposal of the Liberal Government for the advancement and building up of Ontario.

Is it wise to place in power the Party of Blunderers? the Party of Obstructionists?

ONTARIO'S CASH IN BANK IS THE GENUINE THING

And Not as Mr. Whitney Asserts, Borrowed Funds.

Absolute Denial to His Insinuation That the Ontario Cash Balance Included the Money Borrowed on the Temiskaming Railway Bonds—No Doubt of Ontario's Remarkable Financial Position.

Bowmanville, Jan. 10.—Cash in the banks to the credit of the Province of Ontario amounting to $3,747,697 when the banks closed yesterday was the announcement of Hon. Richard Harcourt at a meeting here last night in the interests of Mr. Wm. Rickard, Liberal candidate in West Durham. The announcement was occasioned by Mr. Whitney's recent query as to whether the Ontario cash balance did not include money borrowed on the Temiskaming Railway bonds. Mr. Harcourt, as the Minister who went to England in connection with these bonds, was particularly able to talk on the subject, and he gave Mr. Whitney's insinuation the most absolute denial.

The other speaker of the evening, in addition to Mr. Rickard, was Mr. J. A. Macdonald, who in a brief and forceful address gave several strong reasons why men of independent mind should support the Ross Government. The attendance at the meeting was restricted by the great snowstorm, but there was a splendid gathering and the spirit of the listeners was most cordial towards the Government. Mr. Rickard's reception shows that he has every right to expect re-election on the 25th.

The chair was taken by Mr. John W. McLaughlin of Darlington Township, President of the West Durham Liberal Association, who in opening the meeting said Mr. Rickard had served his riding ably and well and had been of special value in the House in dealing with municipal matters. The Government, he argued, should be sustained because of its development of new Ontario and because of its stimulus to agriculture.

The Conservative Leadership.

Ottawa, Jan. 10.—A friend of Mr. R. L. Borden, writing from Halifax to a gentleman in this city, states that although the Conservative leader is disposed to retire from politics, he will remain at the head of the party if pressed to do so, and will run in Carleton County if he remains in politics. Mr. Borden, it is said, will remove to Ottawa and practice law here.

PROVINCIAL ELECTIONS—1904.

ADDRESS

To the Eectors of the West Riding of Peterborough.

Gentlemen,—Having received, at the hands of a duly constituted convention of the Liberal-Conservatives of the West Riding of Peterborough, the nomination for election to the Legislative Assembly of the Province, I have the honour to submit for your consideration my views respecting some of the important questions which may be expected to influence the Electorate at an early date.

SECRECY OF THE BALLOT.

This is a matter of paramount interest to every elector. It has from time to time been a boast, whether rightly or wrongly, that certain Conservatives have supported the Government candidate, it being openly asserted that this boast was born of actual knowledge. The form of ballot now in use makes this possible, and leaves it open for unscrupulous politicians to coerce voters over whom they are supposed to have some power. It has always been, and still is the policy of the Conservative party to render the ballot absolutely secret.

POLITICAL CORRUPTION.

To assert that the party now in power is as free from corrupt practices as the Opposition, is so idle, and so opposed to the evidence that it requires no answer. The Government cannot escape the responsibility of the many atrocious acts which have come to light; the names of the recognised agents have appeared so often in connection with these transactions, and though the perpetrators have so flagrantly gone "unwhipped of Justice," no sane person will fail to condemn the authorities who have wilfully became accessories.

ADMINISTRATION.

The affairs of the Province have been so conducted that the expenditure has increased enormously out of proportion to the current revenue. Extravagance has been rampant, contracts for supplies for the public institutions have been awarded without competition; orders without number have been given to party friends, and for the purpose of securing the support of political opponents. The business of the Province has been under a management which, in the case of any large corporation, would not be tolerated. This Government, by virtue of its long lease of power, has become imbued with the idea that the people's money is to be spent for the pleasure and aggrandisement of the party in power. It is time that this state of things should be changed.

OPPOSITION POLICY.

It has been untruthfully stated that Mr. Whitney and his followers are unable to, or have failed to, pronounce a definite policy. No statement could be farther from the truth. On the contrary, Mr. Whitney's policy is well defined with regard to the following among other matters:—

1st. The Educational Department; the appointment of an advisory council from among the expert educationalists of the province.

2nd. The administration of the liquor law free from political influence.

3rd. The reservation of the timber, (except pine) for the settler.

4th. A secret ballot fr the protection of the voter.

5th. Breaking up the School Book monopoly.

6th. Localisation of the mining offices.

7th. Public ownership of revenue-bearing franchises for the benefit of the province.

8th. Branch agricultural colleges.

9th. Better inspection of factories, and labelling of prison-made goods, as prison-made.

10th. To enact proper labour legislation for the prompt settlement of disputes.

11th. Encouragement of systems of sewerage in towns and villages.

The Liberal-Conservative party confidently appeal to the electorate at this time in the history of the Province, in the firm belief that the great heart of the people is with them in the determination to place in power men untainted by such debased associates as have brought the fair name of this province into undeserved disrepute.

Gentlemen, if the principles which I have attempted to briefly outline commend themselves to your judgment, I ask your support and influence in favour of myself as the Liberal-Conservative candidate. In my humble way, if elected, I will to the extent of my skill and power, assist in giving effect to these principles.

I have the honour to be,

Yours respectfully,

T. E. BRADBURN.

NORTH MONAGHAN COUNCIL INAUGURAL

First Meeting was Held in Town Hall, Yesterday.

New Council for Otonabee, Holds its First Meeting—Personal Items of Interest.

Special to the Examiner

North Monaghan, January 10th.—The council-elect of the township of North Monaghan met in the town hall on Monday, Jan. 5th, at 1.30 p.m.

There were present Messrs. Jos. Madill, reeve; and J. Brown, R. Fowler, J. Holmes, and J. Morrow, councillors.

After the statutory declarations of qualification and office had been made and subscribed to, the council organized for the transaction of public affairs, the reeve in the chair.

The minutes of the two preceding meetings were read and confirmed.

Communications were received and read from: The Municipal World, asking for subscriptions for 1905; Peterborough Times, asking for the township printing for 1905; J. Ross Robertson, soliciting a grant to the Sick Children's Hospital in Toronto; G. H. May, resigning membership of local Board of Health; account from Dr. Greer, Medical Health Officer of the township, for attendance at various times, $20.

An application for the position of assessor was received from Mr. H. J. Forster, at a salary of $55.

It was moved by Mr. Holmes and seconded by Mr. Morrow, that the clerk is hereby instructed to subscribe for six copies of the Municipal World, one copy to be sent to each member of the council and one to the clerk, and that an order be drawn on the treasurer for the sum of $5. —Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Brown and Fowler, that an order be drawn upon the treasurer for the sum of $5 as a grant to the Sick Children's Hospital. —Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Holmes and Brown, that the account of Dr. Greer be passed and paid.—Carried.

Moved by Messrs. Brown and Morrow, that the account of John Tully, $15.20, for gravel, as rendered at the last meeting of the council be paid. —Carried.

On motion of Messrs. Brown and Morrow, a committee, consisting of Councillors Brown and Holmes, was appointed to let the contract for the township printing for 1905.

The clerk was instructed to send a full account of the expenditure of North Monaghan upon the Cavan boundary road for 1904, to the council of Cavan township.

Mr. G. H. May's resignation as a member of the Board of Health was accepted.

Bylaws Nos. 544, to appoint auditors, 545, to appoint member of the Board of Health, 546, to appoint an assessor, and 547, to appoint caretaker of the township hall, were then introduced, given their necessary readings, and finally passed, signed and sealed.

In committee of the whole council, on the second reading of these bylaws, the following appointments were made:— Auditors, Jas. R. Ball and Jas. Lynch, jr., at a salary of $5 each; member of Board of Health, H. C. Robertson; Assessor, H. J. Forster at a salary of $35; caretaker, R. Sanderson, at a salary of $7.50.

It was decided to leave the matter of opening snow roads if necessary, in the hands of the road commissioners, the cost of the same to be charged against the commutation tax in each district respectively.

On motion of Messrs. Brown and Fowler, the reeve was appointed to arrange with the collector to have all outstanding taxes paid in and returns duly made to the township treasurer forthwith.

The council then adjourned until the second Monday in February, at 1.30 p.m.

AYRSHIRE CLIFF-DWELLERS.

Scottish Shire Is Being Treated to Revival of Savagery—Where the Police Are Helpless.

Ayrshire is just now having a revival of the cave dwelling age on the shore cliffs that is by no means welcome.

Nearly every cave—and the cliffs are honeycombed with them—has its recognized occupants, says The Daily Express of December 5. Large caves accommodate families; some are so small that they can harbor only a single dweller. The laws of civilization are not observed by the cave-dwellers. They have a sort of rude Socialism, which bids fair to degenerate into anarchy. The conditions of life are pestilential, and the habits are degrading.

If the cave-dwellers see something that they want they take it—and they are blessed with sharp eyesight. They laugh at the police.

"We try to turn them out," said a police officer of the district, "but the attempt is hopeless.

"I enter their caves periodically, and turn them out neck and crop, but as soon as my back is turned they return to the caves. I burn their straw, sacks, and bedding, and all their other paraphernalia, but such things are easily replaced.

"I do not relish the job. The caves are filthy and verminous.

"The people go to Ayr or Maybole, and carry back immense quantities of drink.

"The results are dreadful. Men, women and children herd together in a drunken stupor, and no tribe of savages could behave worse.

"The potato pits in the district are robbed, to the despair of the farmers who own them, and the many beautiful species of ferns for which Ayrshire is so famous will, I fear, shortly become extinct owing to these people using them for bedding, and selling the finer specimens for drink."

Large numbers of navvies—there are several gangs employed on the Ayr to Girvan light railway construction—herd with the cave-dwellers, and they supply the bulk of the drink.

These cave-dwellers terrorize the country-side. Expert in poaching, vigorous in chicken-stealing, and sheep-lifting, they flourish exceedingly, and are not likely to be soon banished from the scenes of their depredations.

Nothing can be legally done to oust them. They plead that the air, the sky and the caves are their natural birthright.

Lord Cadogan's Estate.

Lord Cadogan, whom the King and Queen visited in November, lives at Culford Hall, near Bury St. Edmunds, Culford, which is situated in a heavily-wooded country, between Bury and Thetford, is close to Ampton and Livermere, which are two of the most beautiful domains in Suffolk. The estate passed from the Bacons to the Cornwallises, by whom it was sold to the Benyons, and Lord Cadogan purchased it about twenty years ago. The house, which was built during the reign of Elizabeth by Sir Nicholas Bacon, has been much altered and greatly enlarged. There are pleasant gardens, and a small but well-timbered park. The shooting on the Culford estate is now very good indeed, having been greatly improved and extended since Lord Cadogan purchased the estate.

It has expended $5,830,423 on Agriculture since 1872.

It has handed over $2,083,558 to 479 Agricultural and Horticultural Societies since 1872.

It has carried on the most successful Agricultural College in America with an attendance of 728 during the year 1903. Seventy per cent. of its graduates, so far as traced, are engaged in agriculture.

The College has carried on an extensive series of field and feeding experiments.

Traveling dairies were sent through the Province for several years.

Three dairy schools have been established, attended thus far by 2,240 persons.

Fifteen Fruit Experimental Stations are being maintained.

No less than forty-five important Acts, affecting agricultural and kindred interests, have been placed on the statute books since 1883.

Mr. Whitney and his party have opposed many of the important steps proposed by the Agricultural Department for the improvement of our Ontario agriculture.

Labor Legislation of the Ross Government

The Labor Legislation of the Liberal Government of Ontario is among the most advanced body of laws in this department that any country can show. It includes, among other features,

The Labor Disputes Act of 1902 (the Preston Bill), under which no less than thirty-five trade disputes have already been amicably settled by the provincial officer appointed for that purpose.

It has recently established a Provincial Bureau of Labor, in charge of an experienced and able representative.

It has passed labor legislation that is regarded as the most advanced and progressive of any self-governed country.

It has passed the Mechanics' Lien Act, the Employers' Liability Act, the Factory Act, the Railway Accidents Act, the Act for the Relief of Co-operative Associations, the Creditors' Relief Act, the Masters' and Servants' Act, and the Act to Secure Compensation to Workmen for Injuries.

It has enabled trades unions and labor organizations to become incorporated. It passed an important Act regulating bake-shops, an Act relating to truancy and compulsory school attendance, the Woodmen's Lien for Wages Act, the registration of manhood suffrage votes, and the Conciliation and Arbitration Act.

It exempted from taxation living incomes up to $700.

It has regulated the closing of shops and the hours of labor therein for children and young persons.

It has protected the claims of workmen on contracts for public works.

It has legislated on behalf of the employees of street railways.

It has provided that in a contract for printing and binding certain work, union or equivalent wages shall be paid by the contractor.

It has permitted municipal bodies to pass bylaws regulating the hours of certain persons, such as those employed in livery stables, and drivers generally.

Permanent Cure for Bronchitis.

"My second daughter was troubled with bronchitis from the age of three weeks. Oftentimes I thought she would choke to death. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine brought relief, and further treatment made a thorough cure. The trouble used to come back from time to time but now the cure is permanent." — Mrs. Richmond Withrow, Shubenacadie, Hants Co., N. S.

CANADA'S SLAIN.

Canada's Graves in South Africa—List of Graves Which Have Memorials—General Monument in Toronto.

Toronto will have probably the largest and finest monument in Canada when the obelisk to be erected to the memory of the fallen heroes of Canada in the South African War shall have been put in place. At a recent meeting of the general committee of the South African Memorial Association the report of the Plans and Designs Committee, recommending the design of Mr. Walter S. Allward, of Toronto, was accepted. There were fourteen designs submitted.

The chosen monument will consist of a grey granite base and shaft, decorated with and surmounted by bronze figures. The figures at the base represent Canada sending her troops to the war. That which surmounts the obelisk impersonates the Glorification of Peace.

From the ground level to the top of the Peace figure the height will be 70 feet. The figure itself will be ten feet high. The shaft will be mounted on a base which at the ground level will be 32 feet square. The obelisk will weigh 120 tons.

The cost of the monument will be $30,000. Of this sum the Ontario Government has promised $5,000 and the City of Toronto, as soon as it can obtain the power from the Legislature, will give a like amount. It is hoped that the Dominion Government will donate a similar sum, and it is thought that the County Councils throughout Ontario will also contribute. There was some objection taken to going to the Dominion Government for fear that other Provinces might expect a like donation, but the general feeling was that if $5,000 were available from that source, the gift should not be ignored.

The committee did not commit themselves to any site, as it will be two years before the monument will be complete. Several sites were discussed, among them being Queen's Park and the intersection of Spadina avenue and Queen street, but no decision has been arrived at.

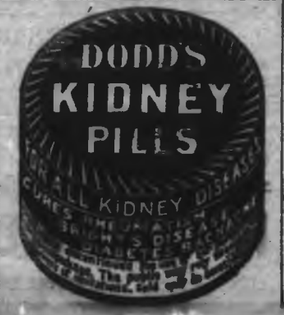
Ontario's Fire Ranging System.

During the season of 1903 there was a staff of 270 fire rangers on duty, 244 of whom were on duty on licensed lands where, through settlement, mining development and tourist travel, there is a greater degree of danger from fire. Twenty-six rangers were on duty along the line of the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway during its construction.

It is satisfactory to record that, thanks to the vigilance of this large force of men, the summer of 1904 passed without any serious outbreak of fire on the Crown domain.



BUILDING OF COLONIZATION AND MINING ROADS.

The Ross Government Policy of Opening Up New Ontario.

The Liberal Government of Ontario has always kept in the forefront its policy of opening up the new districts by means of colonization and mining roads. In these regards they have kept pace with the growth of the Province, as the following figures will indicate:

Miles of new roads built, 1872-1894 inclusive, 5,622.
(Yearly average of 183 miles.)
Miles of roads repaired during same period, 16,494.
(Yearly average of 500 miles.)
Bridges built during same period, 23 miles.

Total expenditure on above public works, $3,879,700.

This large sum is but one of the many substantial returns made to the people from the surplus revenue that, thanks to the able and economical management of the Province, has always characterized its Liberal rule.

The Ross Government and the Supplementary Revenue Act.

The Ross Government brought before the Legislature in 1899, the Supplementary Revenue Bill. It was passed by the House and in the face of the most strenuous opposition of Mr. Whitney and his followers.

Since that time the Act has realized nearly $1,200,000, a legitimate source of revenue that would have been lost had Mr. Whitney had his way.

This revenue goes in large measure to maintain the asylums and public institutions of Ontario.

The following are the receipts, from 1899 to 1903 inclusive, from the different companies affected by the Act:

Sundry insurance companies	$ 471,891.61
Banks	218,664.99
Trust Companies	21,550.00
Loan Companies	135,287.89
Railway Companies	167,900.14
Street Railway Companies	35,484.21
Express Companies	20,991.67
Pullman and Sleeping Car Companies	4,687.65
Natural Gas Companies	39,319.92
Gas and Electric Light Companies	37,552.05
Telegraph Companies	6,581.46
Telephone Companies	28,520.00
	$1,187,881.89

How the Ross Government Has Expended the People's Money.

No less than 83 per cent. of all the revenue of Ontario has been returned to the people.

Out of every $100 of revenue received in 1903, the Province spent:
About $19.33 on Education.
About $18.86 on Maintenance of Public Institutions.
About $8.72 on Public Works and Buildings.
About $9.18 on Administration of Justice.
About $4.46 on Railway Aid and Annuities.
About $7.75 on Agriculture.
About $4.57 on Hospitals and Charities.
About $6.69 on Civil Government.
About $4.89 on Legislation.
About $3.26 on Colonization Roads.
About $5.29 Charges on Crown Lands.
About $1.30 on Repairs to Public Buildings.
About $8.90 on Miscellaneous Expenditure.
About $1.80 on Drainage Debentures, Colonization, etc.

SUFFERED MANY YEARS WITH A COMPLICATION OF FEMALE DISEASES.

Two Robust Women Who Owe Their Restored Health and Usefulness to Pe-ru-na.

MRS. J. E. FINN, 82 East High St., Buffalo, N., Y., writes: The Peruna Medicine Co., Columbus, O.:

Gentlemen: "A few years ago I had to give up social life entirely, as my health was completely broken down. The doctor advised a complete change and rest for a year. As this was out of the question for a time, I began to look around for other means of restoring my health.

"I had often heard of Peruna as an excellent tonic, so I bought a bottle to see what it would do for me, and it certainly took hold of my system and rejuvenated me, and in less than two months I was in perfect health, and now when I feel worn out or tired a dose or two of Peruna is all that I need."—Mrs. J. E. Finn.

Pelvic catarrh is a phrase coined by Dr. Hartman, covering all that large class of diseases that used to be known as female weakness. The lower portion of the abdomen is called by anatomists the pelvis. The organs contained in this portion of the body are known as the pelvic organs. There are several of them, very delicate and very subject to catarrh. Few women escape entirely catarrh of these organs. While each case presents some minor difference as to detail, they are all in reality alike. Peruna does not relieve these cases by temporarily mitigating some symptom, but by a removal of the cause. Many a woman can testify that local treatment does not permanently cure. A large multitude of women are constantly going from doctor to doctor to receive local treatment, with little or no result.

In Peruna these women find a prompt and permanent cure.

Thankful Women Who Have Been Cured by Dr. Hartman's Free Treatment.

Miss Ruth Emerson, 72 Sycamore St., Buffalo, N. Y., writes:

"I suffered for two years with irregular and painful menstruation, and Peruna cured me within six weeks. I cannot tell you how grateful I feel. Any agency which brings health and strength to the afflicted is always a welcome friend, and to-day the market is so filled with useless and injurious medicines that it is a pleasure to know of so reliable a remedy as you place before the public."

Miss Ruth Emerson.

Imitations of Pe-ru-na.

Peruna has come to be recognized as the greatest remedy for catarrh in the world. At first competitors tried to deny this and insisted that their remedies were just as good. This was found to be impossible, however, and now imitations are springing up everywhere.

To successfully palm off an imitation of Peruna even for a short time is sure to be a money-making scheme, but no one who has ever taken Peruna can be fooled on these imitations. No conscientious druggist would sell one of them. Every purchaser should look carefully at each package of Peruna he buys, to be sure that he is getting only genuine Peruna.

Y.M.C.A. CONCERT WAS A SUCCESS.

Miss Jessie Alexander and Mr. H.M. Field Provided Good Programme

Assisted by Local Baritone in Opera House Last Evening.

The Field-Alexander concert in the Opera House last evening attracted a large audience, when a programme of much merit was presented. The concert was under the auspices of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Young Men's Christian Association who are to be congratulated upon bringing to town two such splendid artists as Miss Jessie Alexander, elocutionist, and Mr. H. M. Field, piano virtuoso. The former has been heard in Peterborough before and she appeared more popular than ever last evening, while Mr. Field in his initial appearance before a local audience scored a great success and will be warmly welcomed back at any time. The programme throughout was one of much enjoyment and the audience expressed the pleasure which was afforded them by frequently encoring the artists.

Miss Alexander presented most delightful numbers last evening. Possessing as she does an attractive and unaffected stage presence, a charm of voice, manner and expression and an ability to effectively interpret the humourous, the pathetic and the dramatic, Miss Alexander cannot fail to deeply impress her audience. Her Scotch numbers are given with a true Scottish spirit, while she was equally at home in Irish numbers. The audience was more than delighted with her selections last night. Her opening number was "I Hae Changed Ma Mind," by Manners, a Scotch selection which was given an ideal interpretation. Her second number was a scene from Shakespeare's "Romeo and Juliet" and was very dramatically given. In the second part, she gave "The Kindergarten Tot," depicting the child at school in admirable fashion. By request as a closing number she recited "A Five O'clock Tea Party," a very humourous number. Miss Alexander responded to frequent encores.

Mr. Field is a brilliant pianist, and his equal has not been heard in town for many years. He is a thorough master of the pianoforte, and scored a triumph in his numbers last night. His programme was a lengthy one, occupying nearly fifty minutes, but the audience became more enthusiastic as each number was played, and Mr. Field received repeated recalls. A perfect technique, a delicacy and evenness of touch, a round, rich tone, a brilliancy of execution, and a thoroughly artistic interpretative ability were possessed by Mr. Field to a high degree. In his numbers, whether of the style of Mozart's Rondo in A minor, a simple melody, but played with a charm of expression and sympathy, or of the manner of Liszt's Tarantella, a number full of brilliancy and grandeur, and which aroused the audience to great enthusiasm, the artist was equally at home. It is seldom that the music lovers of Peterborough have the privilege of hearing a virtuoso of Mr. Field's calibre, and it is to be hoped that he will be secured for a return engagement shortly. His programme was as follows: Scherzo, in E Minor op. 16, by Mendelssohn; Rondo in A Minor, by Mozart; Menuetto Capriccioso, op. 39, by Weber; prelude in F. Sharp, op. 28, by Chopin; two studies, A flat, and F minor, Berceuse op. 57, by Chopin; valse in E flat, by Sapellnekoff; mazurka in B flat, by H. M. Field; Wohin by Schubert-Liszt; Lesginka, by Rubenstein-Siloti, Chant, Polonais, by Chopin-Liszt, and Tarantella, by Liszt.

Mr. R. N. Jolliffe, baritone, was heard in two numbers during the evening, Adams, "The Veteran's Song," and Poniatowski's "The Yeoman's Wedding Song." As encore numbers he sang "Time's Roses," and "Because of You." Prof. Milner, organist of the George street church, made an efficient accompanist.

A Gerhard Heintzman concert grand piano, of exquisite tone, was loaned for the occasion.

Through the kindness of St. Peter's T.A.S., the stage decorations for Monday evening's concert, were allowed to remain until last evening, and greatly enhanced the appearance of the hall.

MASS MEETING IN OPERA HOUSE.

Addresses by, Hon. G. P. Graham and Hon. J. R. Stratton.

Important Meeting to be Held in Mr. McWilliams' Interest

Attention is again directed to the important mass meeting to be held in the opera house on Friday evening next, in the interests of the candidature of Mr. McWilliams. The occasion will represent an important contribution to the discussion of the important provincial questions which are at issue in the present contest. In addition to an address by the Liberal candidate, Mr. McWilliams, addresses will also be given by Hon. J. R. Stratton, late Provincial Secretary, and by his successor, Hon. G. P. Graham. Mr. Graham is one of the foremost, and most forceful debaters, and platform orators, in the province. To ready speech and an effective manner of presenting his arguments, he adds touches of humour which serves to relieve the monotony which is so often inherent in the discussion of, to some, dry political details. His presentation of public questions will be well worth hearing. Hon. Mr. Graham's coming will be the first visit of a Cabinet Minister to this riding during the present campaign, and the electors should take advantage of the opportunity of hearing him. The gallery and boxes will be reserved for ladies and their escorts.

NEW ONTARIO IS RAPIDLY OPENING UP

The Government Railway an Important Factor in Settlement.

Dr. R. W. Bell, formerly a well-known resident and medical practicioner of Peterborough, was in town yesterday on private business. Dr. Bell is at present Medical Inspector, Provincial Board of Health, and his duties take him to every part of the province, especially when there are outbreaks of contagious diseases. Recently he was in New Ontario, visiting the lumber camps to inquire into their sanitary condition in the interests of the employees for whose health and comfort, the Government has exhibited practical solicitude. Dr. Bell, who went as far north as New Liskeard, on the Government railway, reports settlement and development of the country as advancing rapidly. Although regular train service is not yet established upon the Government railway, the contractors run a train for 100 miles from North Bay each way daily. On the train by which Dr. Bell travelled there were about eighty passengers and about sixty on th return train, which the conductor says are a fair average. The building of this line is very creditable to the Ross Government, for the part it will play in building up the northern country, developing natural resources and originating increased trade with older Ontario, will be, as it has already been, a very important one.

GOOD RESULTS OF REGISTRATION

A Preliminary Victory for the Liberal Candidate

Three Liberals to Two Conservatives Claimed.

There was much hearty jubilation among the Liberal workers yesterday when after a good deal of conferring and careful checking of lists, it was found that a careful estimate of the Liberal voters registered gave that party over 700 out of the 1117 voters, or about the proportion of over 3 to 2. As a result of this registration there will be about 100 more voters in this election than in the last one. Enough of those registered last time have been added to the municipal list to out down the number to a few over 1000, while this list shows 1117 names without those of the absentees which will be added at the special sitting this evening at which the Liberals expect to maintain their large proportion.

The Liberal candidate has thus won no uncertain victory in the first round of the campaign. He has done so by reason of the hearty generous support he has received from Liberal workers, both old and new. The same hearty hardworking support will again win a victory for Mr. McWilliams and the Liberal party on election day.

The next big event of the campaign will be the meeting in the Opera House Friday night to be addressed by Hon. G. P. Graham, the Provincial Secretary, by his predecessor in office, Hon. J. R. Stratton and by the candidate. This is Mr. Graham's first visit to Peterborough. He is a most able speaker and is sure of an enthusiastic welcome from all friends of the Liberal party.

WAS HERE IN THE EARLY DAYS

Interesting Sketch of Mr. William Jordan.

Some Reminiscences of Pioneer Days in Peterborough—Interesting Story.

The Lindsay Watchman-Warder has an interesting article on "Our Old Folks," and gives under that heading a characteristic sketch of Mr. Wm. Jordan, a gentleman who in the early days was associated with Peterborough, as the following extract from that article shows:—

One of the venerable men about whom cluster the outstanding events of this country's redemption from the wilds is Mr. William Jordan of Fenelon Falls, who at the age of almost 80 years, enjoys in affluent retirement the well-merited rewards of the intelligent and strenous activities of his long lifetime.

In the summer of 1834—that is over 70 years ago—a row boat came up Sturgeon Lake, passed Sturgeon Point, the spring, Green Point, and drew to shore under the shadow of the pine forest that overhung the lake near what is now the Blythe.

In that row boat were three generations, the extremes of which were a lad of eight years and his aged grandmother. The little party were just completing their long journey from Cavan, Ireland. They were of the noble army of pioneers. Jordan was the family name, and the spot of the landing is Jordan's Landing forever. From Port Hope through Peterborough to Chemong Lake and thence by the row boat had they come to the then wilderness of their landing place. Never was there more romantic coming of the pioneers, and as the little band stood on the shore, there beat in their hearts and shone in their eyes that integrity of purpose, vigour of frame, and latent fire of achievement that brought them success in the long future years, and made them the potent factor that they were in creating the material and moral triumph that is now the honour and pride of this community. The 8-year-old lad of that pioneer band is the subject of this sketch. Besides his grandmother his fellow-voyagers were his father and mother, Mr. and Mrs. William Jordan, Sr., and their other four children, viz., Mr. John Jordan, now 81 years old and a vigorous citizen of Ops; Mrs. Graham, who now at the age of 86 lives in town with her son, Mr. Jas. Wetherup; Mrs. Wood, mother of Dr. Wood and Mr. W. Lloyd Wood, of Toronto; and Mrs. Rahill, who lives in Manitoba. Mrs. Wood is deceased.

LOCAL FIRM IN AMERICAN MARKET

Canadian Cordage and Mfg. Company now has Chicago Agency.

The Farm Implement News, of Chicago, dated, Jan. 5th, says: "With a view to increasing their trade in the United States, the Canadian Cordage and Manufacturing Company, Limited, of Peterborough, Ont., have decided to establish an agency in Chicago. Yesterday Mr. R. H. Hall, representing the company, closed a deal with Mr. C. A. Davis, to look after their interests here. Mr. Davis was at one time one of the most extensive jobbers of binder twine, and few men are better posted on this line. He will open an office at 115 Dearborn street. A stock of twine will be carried at a local transfer house."

HAVELOCK WANTS A POST OFFICE

Present Facilities are Said to be Inadequate

Special to the Examiner.

Havelock, Jan. 11.—It is surely time that something was done to improve the post office accommodation of this place. A stranger coming into the town would have great difficulty to find the building at all. After making enquiries he is shown an unpretentious wooden shack which seems at first sight to be something akin to a barn or stable. It seems to be vainly trying to hide itself under the wings of a dry goods store, as though it were fully conscious of its own deficiencies. The inside is certainly in keeping with the out ,consisting as it does of a desk, a pile of wood and several bills of sales of articles lost and found. There was mention made some time ago of an up-to-date post office on the vacant lot opposite the English Church. A post office on this corner would be a great convenience to the town and is a much needed improvement.

SHORT BREAD FROM THE LAND O' CAKES

Mr. E. B. Edwards the Well-Pleased Recipient

Lt.-Col. Edwards received yesterday a tin containing a loaf of short bread, from Dr. Kirk, a member of the team of Scotch curlers who honoured Peterborough with a visit two winters ago. Judging from the stalwart proportions of Dr. Kirk, this Caledonian food must be a wholesome diet, and perhaps a philanthropy a little deeper than good fellowship may have inspired the sender. Perhaps, he has a desire to bring his cis-atlantic curling friend to the same robust physical proportions as consumption of short-bread has invested him with.

THE PHYSICIANS SHOULD REPORT.

As it is necessary that the annual report of the Board of Health should have the number of cases of typhoid fever treated in this town during the past year, it is earnestly requested that every physician in town, who has not already reported the number of cases which he treated, should do so at once. The Health Act makes it necessary, under a penalty, to report all cases of typhoid fever, the same as any other infectious disease.

STORM COULD NOT SPOIL MEETING

Splendid Gathering at Bridgenorth Last Night

Mr. McWilliams' Campaign is Progressing Favourably—The Speakers Last Night

Snow-drifts notwithstanding, the Liberal meeting at Bridgenorth last night was well attended, and the candidate took another step towards the victory which is every day becoming more certain. Mr. Joseph Sucese filled the chair in a most acceptable manner. In introducing the speakers he referred to the high reputation which the candidate in this election bore wherever he was known.

Mr. W. S. Davidson explained that he had come out at the last minute in place of Mr. R. R. Hall, M. P., who had been prevented by the condition of the roads from attending this meeting, since it was necessary that he catch the night train for Ottawa in order to be present at the opening of Parliament to-morrow. The speaker then briefly but clearly and effectively, outlined the position of the two parties in this election. The Opposition sought to distract attention from the main question by shouting corruption. Who are the people who are shouting so loudly about purity? Let anyone trace their record from the Pacific scandal to the McGreevy scandal, and to the present time, and then say that they can pose as apostles of purity. The Liberal Government had established and developed a system of education, which was admitted to be the best on the continent, and in all the other branches of administration had shown the same practical skill and energy. He expressed his pleasure at being present to speak on behalf of Mr. McWilliams, and he trusted that on election day they would give the young candidate a splendid vote.

Mr. McWilliams opened his remarks by a reference to his own part in political and municipal affairs, and this position as a supporter, though not necessarily in everything, of the Ross Government. He believed that the Liberal Government had given the province an efficient and progressive administration of its business capacity and practice, and had placed the province in an unrivalled situation. He outlined the steps that had been taken under the practical leadership of Hon. John Dryden, to direct the efforts of the farmers into more profitable courses, and the immense benefits which had followed the assistance given by the Department of Agriculture. In all the other departments there had been the same wise and liberal expenditures, but yet the province stood in the unique position of being free from debt and from the burden of interest charges.

Upon the temperance question the Government had followed the same policy as in other matters — a policy of progressive reform — and the reduction in the number of licenses issued from 6,000 to less than 3,000, showed how much had been accomplished as a result of their legislation. Temperance men and all the better class of hotel keepers, are agreed in the wisdom of the Government's policy of making the way of the transgressor against the license laws, hard, and of stopping the issue of any further licenses, particularly in New Ontario.

The Opposition offered no policy upon questions of any importance, upon which they could fairly ask the support of the province and though their present leader has had 16 years of opportunity to develop a policy. Their only cry is that of corruption, and in that they carefully concealed the half of the story which told against themselves. If the whole truth were told neither the Ross Government, nor the Liberal party, need fear the record. For himself he had only emphatic condemnation for much that had been done on both sides, but held that the only way to end such corruption was by each constituency sending honest and fearless men to the Legislature.

DIED AFTER TWELVE WEEK'S ILLNESS

Walter Johnston, Son of Joseph Johnson, Died this Morning

This morning at ten o'clock, the death of Walter Johnston, the 12 year old son of Mr. Joseph Johnston, of 96 Chamberlen street, occurred at the Nicholls Hospital, where he has been for the past twelve weeks. He was taken to the hospital at that time suffering from typhoid fever, and later, when he recovered from that disease, a trouble developed in one of his legs, which necessitated an operation being performed, which was done yesterday, but he was so weak from his long illness that his system was not equal to the strain upon upon it, and he died this morning, as stated.

The deceased was a bright, intelligent boy, a member of the Park street Baptist church, and popular with his young friends.

The funeral will take place on Friday afternoon, at 2.30 o'clock, from the family residence, 59 Chamberlen street, to the Little Lake cemetery for interment.

Splendid Ice and the 57th Band at the Brock Street Rink to-night.

THE EXAMINING

Of eyes is not a matter of guess work with us, nor is it a case of trying on pairs of ready-made glasses. It is a science governed by principles which none but those who have studied the anatomy of the eye and the use of proper instruments can understand. We have given our best thought and study for years to this work and give you expert advice. We can fit any eye that responds to light.

Sleeplessness

When the nerves are unstrung, and the whole body given up to wretchedness, when the mind is filled with gloom and dismal forebodings, the result of derangement of the digestive organs, and then sleeplessness comes to add to the distress. If only the subject could sleep there would be oblivion for a time and temporary relief. Parmelee's Vegetable Pills will not only induce sleep but will act so beneficially that the subject will wake refreshed and restored to happiness.

Nervous, Sick Headache.

Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for a long time with headaches, which would come on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. I tried headache powders and quiet cures, which did no good. About eight months ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I have not been troubled with headache since."

LONDON'S NEW TUBE LINES.

Thirty Miles of New Tunnels Soon to Be Completed and Opened—Twopence Will Be the Uniform Fare.

The electrification of the Metropolitan and Metropolitan District and the construction of the new tubular railways are progressing so favorably that it is confidently expected that the electrically equipped underground will be in operation early next year, while twelve months from then the Baker street and Waterloo, and the Great Northern, Piccadilly and Brompton divisions of the Underground Electric Railways will be ready for passengers, says The London Graphic. The completion of the Charing Cross, Euston and Hampstead line will follow shortly, as 65 per cent. of the running tunnels, and nearly half of the station tunnels, of this line, are finished. This work has been going on quietly and without the slightest interruption of traffic. No thoroughfares have been torn up and business dislocated, as in New York during the building of the subway.

One Hundred Miles.

The tubes in course of construction by the company of which Charles T. Yerkes is chairman and Edgar Speyer, of Speyer Bros., is the financier, will aggregate nearly 30 miles, and will form the greatest work of public utility ever planned and carried out for the metropolis. To this new mileage will be linked the District Railway, with its joint ownership and running powers over the Metropolitan and the growing system of electric tramways which extend in various directions westward, and which enter London at its two great modern gateways at Shepherd's Bush and Hammersmith. The total length of line under control of the Underground Electric will be over 100 miles, while the capital cost will amount to sixteen million sterling. The new accommodation thus afforded will not be far short of four hundred millions of passengers per annum for the railways and two hundred millions for the tramways, when the system, as planned and authorized, is finished.

Many New Stations.

London will, moreover, be furnished with 52 new stations. Thirty of the new stations will be in the most congested districts. The most important features are, of course, the three north and south lines, which have been greatly needed. . . . The fares, it is understood, will be uniform at 2d., and the time saved in getting from one part of London to another and from London out into the country will amount to the saving of millions of pounds sterling to the public. . . . The whole of this large system of tubes and undergrounds will be operated and propelled by a power house which has been erected on the banks of the Thames at Chelsea, and which is the largest works of the kind in the Kingdom. From this station go forth 64 cables, each with 11,000 volts of electricity, to Earl's Court, where a sub-station distributes the power, so that it may be taken here and there over the entire system, and used in quantity as required. From the controlling board of the power house the operation of trains in the further sections is managed as easily as a telephone switchboard. The arrangement of the power house is likewise automatic.

Claims Scottish Earldom.

The House of Lords will have before it at the next session a remarkable peerage claim—that of Mr. Robt. Barclay-Allardice, of Lostwithiel, Cornwall, to the Earldoms of Strathern, Monteith and Airthe, all in the peerage of Scotland, which have been in abeyance since 1694. The last who voted at the assembly of the Scottish peers as Earl of Monteith, was the "beggar Earl," famous in the annals of the Scottish nobility. The last Earl of Strathern was that powerful noble whose boast that he had the "reddest blood in Scotland" brought on him the fear and jealousy of Charles I. There are two romances of the peerage that entwined with this claim of Mr. Barclay-Allardice.

Although a resident of Cornwall and serving as Mayor in the ancient borough of Lostwithiel, in 1900 and 1901, Mr. Barclay-Allardice is a Scotsman. His family, long seated at Uric and at Allardice, in Kincardineshire, is a blend of two gentle families of Barclay and Allardice. His grandfather, Capt. Robert Barclay-Allardice, the famous pedestrian, claimed these very peerages before the House of Lords in 1839, but was unable to establish his claim to the exclusion of rivals. His daughter married Mr. Samuel Ritchie, and died only last summer. The present representative of the family took by royal license his grandfather's name of Barclay-Allardice, in 1888, and now claims to hold these three peerages as the twentieth in descent from Robert II., the first Stuart King of Scotland.

Too Realistic Acting.

An attempt to give a realistic touch to a music hall sketch nearly ended in a tragedy.

Miss Geraldine Montrose was playing at the Manchester Palace of Varieties in a sketch entitled "Snakes." The production is of the very gruesome kind, in which the snakes are allowed to coil round the leading actress' neck.

The snakes in this sketch are described as "wild pythons supplied by Cross, Liverpool." In the scene where one is allowed to coil itself round Miss Montrose's neck, the reptile exerted its strength too much, and almost strangled the lady.

She screamed out in agony, and the audience, taking it to be part of the play, applauded.

The stage hands, seeing the true state of affairs, made a rush to drag off the python.

The curtain was lowered, amid the wild excitement of the audience, whose attention was now riveted on the struggle for the unfortunate lady's life between the men and the python.

The snake, by a great effort, was dragged away just in time to save Miss Montrose.

REGRETS OF JAPAN.

Explain Why a British Cruiser's Aid Was Declined.

Tokio, Jan. 10.—The Navy Department announces that it regrets the misunderstanding in the case of the British cruiser Andromeda, which recently sailed from Wei-Hai-Wei for Port Arthur with hospital stores and surgeons to assist the sick and wounded, and was not permitted to land.

The department says the commander at Port Arthur refused the aid offered by the Andromeda owing to the fact that he had not received instructions. The British authorities at Wei-Hai-Wei were late in notifying Sir Claude MacDonald, the British minister at Tokio, of the cruiser's mission.

When the minister received notification, he immediately obtained from the Japanese authorities there their grateful acceptance of the cruiser's cargo. Orders to receive the supplies were sent to Port Arthur, but when they reached there the Andromeda had left on her return to Wei-Hai-Wei.

Know Japs Fighting Power.

"Gen. Stoessel then pointed out that he and Admiral Alexieff had been through the Boxer trouble and had seen the work of the Japanese army. Gen. Stoessel also said he had been associated with the Japanese generals, Yamaguchi and Fukushima, at that time and expressed the opinion that the Russians and the Japanese forces had borne the lion's share of the work. Since then he had had high ideas of the organization and fighting qualities of Japanese army.

"The real cause of the war was, in Gen. Stoessel's opinion, the ignorance of the Russian people of the fighting qualities of the Japanese. The first attack on Port Arthur in February by the Japanese fleet was a tremendous surprise. The forts, he explained, were only partly garrisoned by 2,000 troops.

Always Opposed It.

"At this point Gen. Stoessel said he always opposed the scheme of Governor Sakharoff of Port Dalny, in spending money in building up Port Dalny instead of finishing the defences of Port Arthur. Sakharoff, who was an engineer officer, died of dysentry during the siege.

"Continuing, Gen. Stoessel praised the ingenuity, pluck and patience of the Japanese infantry.

"Referring to the artillery, General Stoessel said that at first he did not think the artillery practice good, but he was soon compelled to recognize how good it was. Gen. Stoessel said that he had served his Emperor in many wars. Now he felt he had earned the right to return to Russia to live in his old age with his family. The general adds that he was taking home with him five children of officers who had been killed during the siege.

"After his conference with General Nogi, General Stoessel expressed gratification at meeting so pleasant a gentleman. He had not expected the considerate treatment accorded to him. General Nogi appeared to General Stoessel as an old friend, rather than as the commander of an army which had forced him to surrender."

Storms Hamper Work.

Tokio, Jan. 10.—The work of removing the mines and other obstructions at the entrance to the harbor of Port Arthur and by examining the Russian war vessels, is hampered by the storms and cold weather. There is every indication, it is reported, that some of the ships are salvable.

Japs of Same Opinion.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 7.—Japan has made no overtures for peace to Russia, directly or indirectly, through the United States or any other power; she contemplates no such action and, now that Port Arthur has fallen, proposes to press the war in the north all the more vigorously by reinforcing the Japanese armies at Liaoyang, with the greater part of the troops which have been besieging Port Arthur. This in brief represents the views of Gogoro Takahira, the Japanese minister.

"The fall of Port Arthur," said the minister, "is but a step in the war which Japan is waging for a principle. Certainly it is an immense step, but nothing could be further from the truth than the assumption that because Japan has captured a stronghold, the fall of which long has been expected, the Japanese Government will now make overtures for peace, nor have the powers approached us with any idea of intervention."

Hon. Mr. Lariviere Appointed.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 9.—Hon. A. A. C. Lariviere, late member for Provencher in the Dominion Parliament, has been appointed immigration commissioner for the Province of Manitoba with headquarters in Montreal. He will enter upon his new duties at once, which will be to secure settlers for the west from Quebec, and also to visit New England States, where there are a considerable number of French-Canadians, who are on the lookout for new homes. He will also meet immigrants from Europe, more particularly from France, on their arrival at Montreal.

Rev. Arthur Browning's Death.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—While out enjoying an afternoon walk, meeting and chatting with friends, Rev. Arthur Browning, one of the oldest and best known of Methodist ministers in Canada, fell on the sidewalk on Broadview avenue on Saturday, and before aid could reach him was dead. He was in his 72nd year, and was born at Launceston, England, coming to Canada in 1859. Rev. Mr Browning was one of the first Methodist missionaries in British Columbia.

Shrinkage Shown.

London, Jan. 9.—(C.A.P.)—Returns show a considerable shrinkage in live stock exports from Canada to Great Britain last year, being 5,420 head of sheep, 4,268 head of cattle, less than the year before.

Harmsworth's Scheme.

Montreal, Jan. 9.—Sir Edwrad P. Morris, Attorney-General of Newfoundland, stated here yesterday that Harmsworth of The London Daily Mail had closed a deal with the timber estates of Newfoundland and the Government, by which they will erect a $4,000,000 plant and ship from Lewisport one shipload of paper and pulp every week. Sir Edward also declares that a fast steamer can make the run from Lewisport to Queenstown in three days, and that the Newfoundland Government will probably subsidize the project. The Attorney-General says that confederation is now further off than ever.

A Secret Papal Bull.

Rome, Jan. 9.—One of the most important acts thus far in the Pontificate of Pope Pius X. has been embodied in a secret bull, the text of which will not be made public until the Pontiff is dead, when it will be read as forming part of the constitution in the next conclave to elect his successor. The bull is in connection with the claims of Austria, France and Spain as to their right to veto the election of any cardinal to the Papacy.

Baked Apples At Brighton.

Brighton, Jan. 9.—Fire broke out in Wm. Wade's apple storage warehouse about 9 o'clock Saturday night and despite all efforts to save it, was completely destroyed. About 2,000 barrels of winter apples were stored in the building. The storage was only insured for $1,000.

$60,000 Bushels of Wheat Burned.

Kansas City, Mo., Jan. 9.—The Maple Leaf grain elevator in Kansas City, Kan., owned by the Chicago Great Western Railway Company, was burned last night, with 800,000 bushels of wheat, entailing a loss of $800,000 on building and contents; fully insured.

Rev. J. I. Gordon Resigns.

Toronto, Jan. 9.—Rev. J. L. Gordon, pastor of the Bond street Congregational Church, yesterday tendered his resignation, to take effect on Feb. 15 next, and will remove to Winnipeg to take charge of the Central Congregational Church there.

Killed On the Street.

Lethbridge, N. W. T., Jan. 9.—A. McKay was killed on the street last night by a runaway.

Whole Municipality Arrested.

Uskub, European Turkey, Jan. 9.—On Dec. 28, by order of Hilmi Pasha, the whole municipality of Uskub, together with the vicar and clergy of Vicorate, were arrested, the accusation being that they had formed a revolutionary tribunal. A search of the domiciles of the accused was without result.

To Succeed Hilson.

Liverpool, Jan. 9.—The Post hears on good authority that J. H. Lowther, M.P., will succeed Lord Hilton as Commissioner to South Africa.

Sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, and Sent it to Friends.

Mr. F. W. J. Fletcher, a druggist in Victoria, Australia, says: "A customer of mine, was so pleased with Chamberlain's Cough Remedy, which she had used for her children when suffering from colds and croup, that during a fortnight's time she obtained at my shop, nine bottles, which she sent to her friends in different parts of the state, telling how much good it had done and advising them to give it a trial." For sale by all druggists.

HE COULD WAIT.

The Way Lafcadio Hearn Pushed Himself Into a Situation.

Lafcadio Hearn at one time in his career was employed on a daily paper in Cincinnati.

He obtained the position by presenting his application in person to the editor.

"We don't need anybody at present," said the editor.

Hearn sat down on a chair, pulled a book out of his pocket, wiped his glasses and smiled.

"I said we don't need anybody," repeated the editor loudly.

"I heard you," replied Hearn affably. "I will just sit here until you happen to need somebody."

That editor was not long in "needing" Hearn.

For lack of anything better the new man was sent out for a descriptive story to be written in the steeple of the Catholic cathedral. When the story was handed in it proved to be a composition rivaling the word painting feats of a Ruskin or a Gautier.

He pictured the city as it looked from the steeple and imparted to his description something besides beauty. There was reality in it. Persons who had viewed the city from the steeple averred that the story was marvelous for photographic accuracy.

Now, Hearn was so nearsighted that ten feet from his nose all objects were misty and indistinct, and it is doubtful if he could distinguish the nearest house from the point to which he had climbed.

THE COMPASS.

The Belief Was Once Held That It Disclosed Men's Thoughts.

A belief that the mariner's compass disclosed men's thoughts was entertained by a number of ancient Mexican companions and allies of Hernando Cortes. His habit of consulting his compass and chart in his advance through the country and the ease and assurance with which he reached whatever town or village he determined to make for tended to confirm this idea.

In the estimation of the Mexicans the compass was a universal oracle. Accordingly in one of the conspiracies which were set on foot against Cortes by the Aztecs a number of the natives, most likely innocent of what was in contemplation, were earnest in entreating Cortes to have recourse to his infallible guide, the compass, that he might ascertain for their mutual satisfaction that they at least were faithful. Cortes himself records the singular idea held of the powers of the magnetic needle by his Aztec associates and their request in a letter addressed to the Emperor Charles V. Their belief, he adds, was one in which he took care to confirm them.

TRUTH TRIUMPHS.

Life Is a Conflict, and Error Dies in the Struggle.

Life is a struggle. Wars end, but the war of the race—the antagonism of thought, the strife between man, between man and the forces external to him, within the soul of the individual—ends not save it be with extinction.

Error gains many a temporary triumph, but the final victory is with truth. There is substance in truth that in the last balance outweighs error.

Nature's process is by test and trial, by unfolding, changing, ripping up, undoing, redoing. By contrast and conflict she tries sincerity and treachery, honor and dishonor, fitness and unfitness, courage and cowardice, truth and error. The conflict of ideas between social and political systems and between creeds and philosophies is as rude as the conflict between the sea and land. Error dies in the struggle.—From "Balance: The Fundamental Verity," by Orlando J. Smith.

Cold Congests the Kidneys

TO PREVENT INFLAMMATION SET THE KIDNEYS RIGHT BY USING

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills

Sitting in a draught, exposure to cold and dampness, sudden changes of temperature, are the frequent causes of congestion of the kidneys.

Pains in the back over the kidneys may be your first warning.

Other symptoms are a constant and pressing desire to urinate. The urine is scanty and highly coloured and sometimes passes with much pain and smarting.

Then there are headache, loss of appetite and flesh, deposits in the urine, sleeplessness, pains and cramps in legs, constipation and diarrhoea alternating and general feelings of discomfort and distress.

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills bring relief and cure more promptly than any other treatment because of the direct and combined action on kidneys, liver and bowels.

All the excretory organs work in sympathy, and can greatly assist one another in carrying off the waste matter.

Hence it follows that when the kidneys, liver and bowels are at once invigorated by Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills relief is prompt and certain.

If neglected constipation of the kidneys is almost sure to result in inflammation and Bright's Disease.

Mr. R. Reach, 225 Sherbrooke street, Peterborough, Ont., states:—"About two years ago I became subject to cramps which were caused I was told by acute indigestion. I was so bad that I would be laid up for weeks at a time. These attacks came on periodically and distressed me greatly.

"I then began using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and have found them a wonderful medicine. They have entirely prevented a recurrence of my trouble, corrected the derangement of my digestive organs, and made me feel like a different person."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills, one pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto. The portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

"What a purty dream!" said Mrs. Hillyer musingly. "An' it seems to me that this life—or the future one—ought to be like that—be jest what a body would want it, I mean. It looks like a shame fer you to be tantalized that a-way, though, at sech a time. I reckon you heard the Cranstons was back from Atlanta."

"No; I didn't know it," replied Buckley. "When did they come?"

"Day before yesterday. They wanted to be here when the New York doctor come. He got here, Mrs. Dugan says, on this mornin's train an' went straight to the house. I axed 'er what he thought ailed the major, but she hadn't heard the last time I seed her. She'll git the news as soon as the family does, you kin bank on that, an' she'll fetch it in to me. She always told me that I was entitled to the fust slice of every pie she picks up. She says Lydia made 'im come home when they did. They was right in the middle of a whole lot o' lunches an' tea parties in the'r honor down thar, an' Mrs. Cranston, it seems, was in fer stayin' over an' gittin' the major's health report by mail, but Lydia said no, siree, it was her daddy, an' she wasn't a-goin' to stay away from 'im a minute at sech a time, even ef he did say they wasn't necessary. So she busted up the picnic, an' is thar with the old white head now. I never seed such devotion, an' that accounts fer the way she's treated you, George."

"Yes, she's a devoted daughter," Buckley agreed, "and he has been very much opposed to—to our friendship."

"Still, I'm puzzled about the way she's doin' right now," said Mrs. Hillyer, with a thoughtful frown. "Ever since you was laid up here I've been lookin' fer some'n' from her. She hain't the woman, I tell you, to be quiet at sech a time. At fust, while she was still in Atlanta, I 'lowed she simply hadn't heard about the shootin', an' when she got back I thought shore she'd write or call to ax about you, but not a word or a line has come, an' I hardly know what to think about it."

"There is one thing which would explain it," said Buckley, and the observant woman saw his tense lips twitching. "She may be engaged to Telfare, an' he may have asked her not to communicate with me. If—if she has promised to marry him, she would respect his wishes. She's that kind of woman."

"George"—Mrs. Hillyer took a deep breath—"do you reckon she has agreed to marry that man?"

"I'm really afraid she has," Buckley answered. "I'm afraid she has given in to the wishes of her people."

There was silence for a moment; then Mrs. Hillyer broke it abruptly as she rose and moved toward the door. "Well," she said almost furiously, "ef she has—ef she has I'd never have the respect fer 'er I once had an' that I still have. The fact is I'm not a-goin' to condemn 'er tell I know she's done it. Thar's some mystery here, an' I'm goin' to find out what it is."

Half an hour later she burst into the room, a huge bunch of white and red roses in her hands. "Them beauties don't grow on but one lawn in this town," she said, with a joyous smile. "They come jest this minute, an' here's a note with 'em. I knowed she'd send some word, George. She ain't the woman to keep quiet when the whole county is braggin' about your bravery an' rejoicin' over your recovery. A natural woman will chip in at a time like this or die."

George took the note while she was putting the flowers into a big vase on a table near his bed. He opened it, and the glad light in his eyes went out. Turning back to him, Mrs. Hillyer noted the blank look of disappointment on his wan face.

"They are from Miss Cosby," he said faintly as with shaking fingers he restored the tinted sheet of note paper to its envelope. His eyes met the indignant stare of the woman.

"Miss Cosby!" she cried. "An' not a word from the other? It's a shame!"

"It's a sort of compromise," Buckley said bitterly. "I was really not expecting anything. Miss Cosby pra-

"Shut your eyes, open your mouth and see what luck will bring you."

Many a woman is weak and sick, nervous and discouraged. She suffers from headache, backache and other ills. She wants to be well, but all she does is to shut her eyes and open her mouth for medicine and trust to luck for results. She "doctors" month after month, often year after year, in this same blind, hap-hazard fashion, and receives no permanent benefit.

Women take Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription with their eyes open to the fact that it cures womanly ills. It cures irregularity. It dries debilitating drains. It heals inflammation and ulceration and cures female weakness. There is no trusting to luck by those who use "Favorite Prescription."

"In the year 1899 my health was poor," writes Mrs. Mary A. Hoyt, of 241 Broadway, Binghamton, N. Y. "I suffered from falling of womb, a disagreeable discharge, painful monthly periods, headache, backache and pains in the limbs. Every month was confined to bed for two or three days. Was weak, nervous and hysterical; life was a burden to myself and I made every one in the family unhappy because I was so irritable. My husband got me four bottles of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, and before I had taken the first bottle I was feeling some relief. The medicine made me well and strong, free from nervousness, aches and pain, and I felt like a new woman. Before I used the 'Favorite Prescription' I had been taking another physician's medicine for nearly three months, but had received no benefit. Your medicine is certainly the best in the world."

A man or woman who neglects constipation suffers from slow poisoning. Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure constipation. One little Pellet is a gentle laxative, and two a mild cathartic. Don't let a selfish seller over-persuade you to accept a substitute for these Original Little Liver Pills, first put up by old Dr. R. V. Pierce over 40 years ago. Think! but never equaled.

[illegible] compliments, assures what I did and is glad I am getting well. She's all right. She's a brick. The other—well, I must forget her, my good friend. I must be a man and forget her."

Tears shone in Mrs. Hillyer's eyes as she bent and stroked his bandaged brow. "George," she said, "they are influencin' 'er—them old folks are. She wouldn't do you this way of 'er own accord, fer she's a good, true girl."

"Perhaps—perhaps that's it," he said wearily and turned his face away.

CHAPTER XXXII.

ON the afternoon of the next day Hillyer returned. Leaving his horse at the door, he went up to George's room. His trousers were bespattered with mud and covered with the white hairs of his shedding horse.

"I've had a trip of it, George," he said, his face glowing, "but I was well repaid. You couldn't guess whar I've been."

"How could I?" said Buckley, with a smile.

"I've got a heap to tell you," the old man ran on, with enthusiasm. He sat down on the edge of the wounded man's bed. "Trabue's death worried the life mighty nigh out o' me tell I tuck a notion all at once that the bite o' the dog couldn't be any wuss'n the bark, an' that I'd better go see that old woman myself an' tell 'er the plain truth. I reckon I prayed a prayer fer every mile o' the way, my boy. I didn't know whar she lived an' had to go by directions to find 'er. I got to the foot o' Bald mountain jest about dark last night, an' a feller that lived on the side o' the road give me directions how to reach her house. I thought they was plain enough, but purty soon it got as dark as pitch, an' I was as bad as a blind man on a blind hoss. One thing the man said, though, was that as soon as I get a mile or two up the road I'd see the light from her kitchen fire. He said it could be seed fer miles—that she never was knowed to shet 'er door this time o' year.

"Well, sir, I got then to prayin' fer a sight o' the light. I begged the Almighty to let it shine out as a sign I was forgiven fer my crime, but it was slow a-comin', an' when it did come I said to myself that a man was a fool to ask the Lord to make a sign out o' some'n' that wasn't any more'n natural, so I wasn't much comforted over that. Howsomever, I did feel a little mite better. It seemed so steady an' bright an' peaceful away up thar among the stars, above them rough rocks an' deep gullies. I started right fer it. The road got so bad I had to git down an' lead my hoss. Sometimes we'd have to step over trees that lay across the way, an' then thar ud be a branch or a creek to ford an' fences to let down an' briers an' rocks an' steep places. But I kept up my heart. Sometimes the light ud be out o' sight completely, an' then ag'in it ud blaze up steady an' strong like a promise writ in fire.

"I got to prayin' more hopeful. Ever' time the light ud flare up out o' the gloom my sperits ud rise, till after awhile I felt as light as a feather. I sung an' shouted an' prayed an' hugged my hoss. It seemed like I was climbin' up to God. The light on the mountain was his presence. Once I fell down a steep bank in the dark, but I wasn't hurt, an' then ag'in I slipped on some rocks while I was crossin' a branch an' got wet to the waist, but when I scrambled out the light was a-shinin' brighter than ever. Finally I crossed a old field an' seed the open door of her house. A dog run out barkin', but I wasn't no more afeard of 'im than the apostles was o' snakes. I walked straight at 'im, called to 'im in a firm, friendly voice, an' patted 'im on the head, an' he licked my hand an' pranced about in front o' me like I was a old acquaintance he was glad to see. Mrs. Hambright was at the fireplace cookin' some'n' t' eat when I got thar, an' she invited me in. I went in an' shook hands an' set down in the chair she give me, an' she put more wood on the fire, fer she seed I was wet.

"'You don't know me, Mrs. Hambright,' says I.

"'No,' says she, 'I don't know you, sir; but that don't make no difference. I take in a lots o' folks that git benighted up here. Nobody would be mean enough to rob ur harm a woman as old as I am.'

"'That's so,' says I. Her head was as white as cotton, an' she was all bent over, but she had the sweetest, most patient face I ever seed. It made me feel easier about tellin' 'er who I was an' what I'd come fer, but I acknowledge I was afeard. Then she proposed to set the table, fer she said she knowed I was famished, but I wouldn't let 'er.

"'No; wait,' says I, 'wait till I've told you who I am, Mrs. Hambright,' says I, an' I couldn't look at 'er then. 'I'm Hiram Hillyer, the man who tuck yore pore boy's life.'

"I seed 'er sorter jump a little, an' then she got as still as a grave rock. I was afeared to look at 'er. 'Ah my new found hope seemed to be leakin' out o' me. I bowed my head an' waited fer 'er verdict. God knows I was miserable, but I was prayin'—prayin' fer pardon—prayin' both to her an' God. She was still a long time. I reckon she was studyin' up what to say to me. Then she spoke. 'Did you come away out here jest to see me, Mr. Hillyer?' she axed in a trembly voice, an' I nodded, still afeard to meet her eye. 'I come to make a confession an' implore you to pardon me,' I said.

"'Pardon you?' she said, slowlike an' aft.

"'Squire Trabue's dead,' I told 'er 'He died two days ago.'

"'I heard he was low,' she said, 'an' I was sorry to hear it, fer he was a good man, but is that all you wanted to tell me?'

"'No,' says I, ''twasn't. Mrs. Hambright, the pension he's been payin' you all these years never come from the government. It was from me.'

"'Hiram Hillyer,' says she in her sweet old voice, 'I've knowed that fer twenty-five years. Squire Trabue told me an' axed me never to let on to you, fer he'd promised you never to let me know; but, Hiram, ef I've prayed God to bless you fer it once I have ten thousand times. I couldn't 'a' lived without that allowance. It has been me in comfort an' enabled me to help my neighbors in time o' sufferin'. I've wanted to tell you how grateful I felt, but the squire wouldn't let me an' said you never wanted that old trouble mentioned, an' so I couldn't do it.'

"Then, George, I broke down completely. I couldn't hold in. I set thar an' cried like a child. I told 'er how long an' hard I'd suffered an' how I had tried in all manner o' ways to git forgiveness an' feel right, an' I never seed sech a look on a human face as was on her'n. She actually set down on the bare floor before the fire an' laid 'er thin, bony hands on my knee.

"'Hiram, my boy, my pore boy!' says she. 'Shorely you hain't been all that time thinkin' yore God was that sort of a God. Why, he's all goodness, all glory, all infinite perfection. You've been blamin' yoreself fer some'n' another man done. It was a man you hain't seed in thirty odd year that shot my son in a hasty passion. God don't hold you—the new man—accountable fer that, but he's been holdin' you accountable fer thinkin' so ill of him, fer all yore worry has come from wrongly accusin' yore Holy Maker!'

"Oh, George, she made it as clear to me as daylight. She was right—she was right. God don't hold a new, repentant man accountable fer what his old dead self done. She thought I wasn't convinced, I reckon, fer she got down on her knees an' sent up a prayer that ripped the roof off the house an' showed the glorious way clean to God's throne above the stars.

"'Lord, Lord o' Hosts!' I kin remember every word the old saint said. 'Show this pore, deluded man the truth. Tear away the mist o' doubt an' misunderstandin' that's clouded his conception an' dampened the ardor of his great soul. Give 'im peace right now, this minute. Pity him, Lord, an' don't let 'im cling to his old self. Show him the new soul that dwells in the old shell o' mortality, an' let 'im walk with bare head unburdened in the sunshine o' thy heavenly smile.' An,' George Buckley, when she riz to her feet I did see an' comprehend. I laughed an' sobbed an' shonted. My fear was all gone—all—an' it will never, never return, fer I understand now. She showed me. Jest think o' that—Lynn Hambright's mother was the one appointed to show me the truth—the old woman I was fearin' more than everybody else. She cooked me a good supper, an' after eatin' it I laid down in

GRIN AND BEAR IT.

People with pleasant temperaments are easily imposed upon by men as well as nature. Very frequently we see this genial sort of people tied down with severe attacks of Rheumatism or Neuralgia and they grin and bear it as though they enjoyed their predicament. They are content to let things take their course and do not realise that this disease will undermine their whole system and shorten their lives by many years. Relatives and friends should intercede and insist that these satisfied suicides take immediate treatment with the great dreams. This mornin' when I woke the sun was shinin' in my room, an' I smelt some good meat a-fryin' an' good coffee a-boilin' an' seed that old woman a-movin' about the big, blazin' fire. George, George, God is good! She didn't want to let me continue the allowance, but when she seed how I felt she agreed to do it an' to come straight to me fer it in future. Now I'm goin' down an' tell Marthy all about it. All these years I've been afraid to mention the subject to her, but I can talk about it now to anybody. I wish I could reach the ears o' all the men on the face o' the earth who are afflicted as I have been. Ef they only knowed, as I now know, that God don't hold them accountable fer what the'r old selves done, they wouldn't suffer needlessly."

CHAPTER XXXIII.

THE next morning George's mother returned to Darley and came directly from the station to his room. As she entered he stared at her in surprise, for she was dressed in black, even to her sunbonnet.

"Mother," he asked wonderingly, "what has happened?"

She did not answer for a moment, but sat down near his bed and folded her bonnet in her lap.

"When I heard how you was hurt an' laid up," she said presently, "I writ Mr. Hillyer not to let you know about yore pa. He was a sight wuss when I got to 'im, an' they didn't see no chance fer 'im to live. He's dead, George; yore pore pa's dead an' buried. All his trouble is over. He's in God's charge now."

They were both silent for a moment; then Buckley said comfortingly: "Well, you must not grieve over it too much, mother. After all, it may be better as it is."

FROST'S
DIAMOND HALL, PETERBOROUGH

AN ASSOCIATION FOR IMPROVEMENT

What has Been Done in the Village of Keene.

Appointments Made for the Year—The Constitution of the New Council.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Keene, Jan. 10. — The Village Improvement Society is in a flourishing condition, and it may be of interest to our readers to give a short account of the work done by the organization during the past year.

One of the first things undertaken by the association in 1904, was the improvement of the town hall, which, on many occasions was found inadequate to accommodate the large audiences at concerts, lectures, etc. To remedy this, it was proposed to take away the partitions of the inside porch and build a porch outside. This would give the hall accommodation for one hundred more people Then there were two posts supporting the ceiling, which besides being unsightly, were a great hindrance to singers and speakers. This, architects said, could be remedied by taking out the posts and putting in trusses to support the ceiling. These proposals met with much opposition from certain members of the township council, who said that if the posts were taken out the hall would collapse. However, the council gave permission to do the work, guaranteeing one third of the cost, the Improvement Association to pay the balance. The carpenter work was done by Messrs. Bryce and McCamus, and the trusses were made by Messrs Wedlock and Bennett. The whole cost was $340, and we have now as good a hall as many larger places.

Arbour Day last year, was as usual, a busy day in Keene. Every member of the association turned out with picks, shovels and rakes, and cleaned the streets of the winter's accumulation of rubbish. All the stones were raked up and drawn away, shade trees were planted along the streets where needed, and a large number set out in the exhibition grounds. All the wooden sidewalks were temporarily repaired till they can be replaced by cement walks. The streets were kept trim and tidy all during the summer, everyone seeming to take pride in doing their share.

During the summer the Improvement Association, assisted by the Agricultural Society, has done a great deal of work at the Exhibition Grounds. The space inside the race track has been transformed from a stony waste into a smooth level lawn. It is their intention to make a park out of it. In the coming spring many shade trees will be planted.

If there is anything more than another on which the Improvement Association takes pride it is the cement walks, which have been laid under their direction. Last year as usual 500 feet were laid on North street. The contractor was Mr. R. Brown. There is now 2000 feet of cement walk in Keene, and each succeeding year will make the board walks less. The following is a list of the receipts of the Association for 1904:

Pleasant Gathering at Residence of Mr. J. J. Turner Jr.

The members of St. Luke's Bible Class met last night at the residence of Mr. J. J. Turner, jr., for their annual meeting and election of officers. Mr. Turner, who is an efficient teacher of the class, combined duty and pleasure, and with his hospitable wife, entertained the class after the meeting. Mr. Turner, as chairman, called upon Rev. Mr. Langfeldt to open the meeting with prayer. After reading the minutes of the last meeting business of much interest was transacted, and the election of officers proceeded with which resulted as follows:—

Hon. Pres. — Rev. E. A. Langfeldt, M.A.

Vice-Pres.—Miss Mabel Scott.
Secretary—Mr. W. F. Turner.
Treasurer—Miss Florence Butcher.

Organist — Miss K. Calcutt.

Mr. J. J. Turner, jr., was also elected delegate for the forthcoming Diocesan church Sunday school convention to be held in Toronto, on Feb. 7th and 8th.

The rector made a few remarks commending the zeal and loyalty of Mr. J. J. Turner, jr. He personally was much indebted to Mr. Turner for the faithful assistance he received from him in church work. He also thanked Mr. and Mrs. Turner on behalf of the class for their kind hospitality and the many opportunities afforded the class of spending pleasant hours in their hospitable home.

Social games were then indulged in and refreshments served. After a vote of thanks to Mr. and Mrs. Turner, and the singing of "Auld Lang Syne," and "God Save the King," the meeting closed.

ONTARIO

A Patriotic Hymn by Mr. John Bell

Ontario, Ontario, how far are you to go,
Thy morals and great men are surely getting low,
Men all over Ontario, disgraceful to be seen,
Are supporting ballot stuffing, and everything that's mean.

There are men in every riding, who claim to be upright,
Thy clergy and lawyers, all mixing in the fight,
To uphold this ballot stuffing, and such dirty tricks,
Ontario, Ontario, you are in a bad fix.

Let all men poll an open vote, it seems to me most fair,
If each man shouts his vote, no trickery can be there,
Then send that cheating ballot box, to that eternal fire,
Then morals of Ontario will be a step higher,

Officials of Ontario, I pray for your release,
From bondage to freedom, where freedom never cease,
I would send all ballot boxes, where trickery should belong,
To that awful, eternal fire, and to oblivion.

JOHN BELL.

January 9th, 1905.

After putting the above poem into type, the Printers' Devil felt that the subject had not been exhausted and that it was only an ex-parte presentation of the subject, quite at variance with his political faith and his anti-alteram-partem principles. He therefore, suggested the following appendix:—

Ontario, if you want to get your morals up a notch,
Take a note of noble Whitney, and his quiet glass of Scotch,
If you want to put down boodling, the place you want to go
Is to Billy Smith's domain, in South Ontario,
Where he proudly swore he spent twelve hundred dollars good,
To wipe out Johnny Dryden and make his fair name "mud",

Why does the post's party want the ballot box to go,
And bring in open voting, to Old Ontario?
Our Tory friends invented, the ballot-switching tricks,
And since their game is known, no more ballots can they fix,

If the post wants to know what's for Ontario best,
He will see "Grit boodling" methods in our bulging public chest,
Where, after thirty years of able Liberal rule,
He'll find it any day, with three million dollars full,

If the Whitney crowd got in, how they'd make the money go,
And leave a gaping deficit for poor Ontario,
For with canny Scotch economy Mr. Whitney's nought to do—
All the "Scotch" that he is fond of, is the midnight mountain dew.

CHINA COCOA SET FOR MRS. SPIER

Ladies of Mark Street Church Remember Her

A most enjoyable social event took place last evening when the Active and Honourary members of Mark Street Ladies' Aid gathered at the home of Mr. John Spier on Monroe avenue and presented Mrs. Spier with a beautiful china cocoa set. The following address was read by Mrs. L. Taylour, President of the society and Mrs. J. G. Lewis, Vice-President, made the presentation:—

To Mrs. Spier,

Dear Friend,—The Ladies' Aid of Mark Street felt that they could not allow the happy occasion of your marriage to pass without expressing to you in some slight way the good feeling which exists towards you and the wish that you may be spared to many years of happiness and continued usefulness in the Master's work.

In asking you to accept this token of our good wishes, we do so that it may prove a tangible expression to you of the high esteem in which you are held amongst us.

Our prayer is that God's blessing may rest on you in your new home and throughout life and that finally we may all meet to spend the great future in the better Home above.

Signed on behalf of the Ladies' Aid of Mark Street Church,

WILBINA TAYLOR, President.
ETA BOWERS, Secretary.

Mr. and Mrs. Spier responded in words of warm appreciation.

Dainty refreshments were served and a most delightful social evening was spent. The gathering broke up with renewed and hearty expressions of best wishes for a long and happy life for the newly wedded pair.

—A meeting of the Ladies' Auxiliary of the Y.M.C.A. will be held on Thursday afternoon at 3.30 o'clock, when all those having tickets for sale for last night's concert are asked to make returns.

LATEST SPORT

GUILD LEAGUE OPENS TO-NIGHT

George Street and Charlotte Street Guilds Will Play This Evening.

The opening game in the Guild Hockey League will be played at All Saints' rink to-night at 7.15 o'clock, the contesting teams being George Street and Charlotte Street Guilds. Much interest has been awakened in this league and the games promise to provide good fast hockey. The ice is in good shape for fast hockey and an interesting game is assured.

HOCKEY.

To-morrow evening All Saints' and St. John's will meet and another good game is assured.

• • • •

The East Ward Hockey Team would like to arrange a game with the Y.M.C.A. intermediate team or Cressman's team at the Brock street rink at any early date. The challengers' team is as follows:—

Goal—Guerin.
Point—Kylie (Captain).
Cover point—Brady.
Rover—Coughlin.
Centre—Quigley.
Right wing—Cherry.
Left wing—Sullivan.

Lindsay plays in Port Perry to-night.

Campbellford won at Keene in a T. V. League game by 7-6 last night in a fast and close game. W. Parnell, of town, refereed satisfactorily.

Chadwick, one of the best forwards in the O. H. A. will play with the senior St. Georges in future games.

The Spinning Room of the Cordage Works hereby challenge a team picked from the rest of the works to be played at earliest date obtainable, on the Brock street rink.

Belleville juniors won at home from Cobourg by 11-3 on Monday.

Though the local juniors have lost two games they are still decidedly in the running. They lost at Belleville by two goals and at Port Hope by one goal and should have no trouble in turning the tables on both teams when they meet here. The team is playing strong hockey at present.

• • • •

The game here on Tuesday night should be a corker. The locals according to reports were decidedly off-colour at Lindsay on Monday, and played in anything but good form. They are confident of reversing the score on Friday night and one of the best games of the season is promised.

• • •

The Guide says the following of the juniors who played in Port Hope on Monday:—

"The Peterborough team is a fine gentlemanly lot of young fellows and, although like all other young hockeyists, inclined to mix it up a little, still their offences are not serious."

• • • •

The Lindsay Post refers to the local team like this:—

"The visitors are a heavier bunch than our boys, but have not got the speed. They played a very gentlemanly game throughout. Wasson, in goal, picked out a few hot ones and ventured occasionally to leave his goal and start the puck down the ice. Glover played a good game, getting in the way of a few rushes. Crowley, the giant at cover point, is a good man, and did not play nearly as rough as last year. He is a clever player, and takes things coolly. He checked in good style. Meagher replaced Chris Graham, and did effective work. Capt. Cavanagh is a good, steady player and takes things coolly. He has lots of speed, but the Lindsay defence did not give him a chance to shoot—his strong point. Morgan played a checking game—more for the man than the puck. Parnell did good work, making numerous dashes in both halves."

MISCELLANEOUS.

A fair-sized crowd saw some good wrestling and boxing bouts in the Opera House on Saturday night.

The first event was a wrestling bout between Bob Long, of town, and L. McDonnel, of Toronto, at 120 pounds. Long won in two straight falls in six and thirteen minutes, having his opponent on the defensive throughout.

George Gauthier won from Roy Steen of Hamilton, in a wrestling bout at 160 lbs. The local man got two straight falls in seven and three minutes.

An eight round boxing bout between D. Chuster, of Toronto, and P. Wallace, of town, was declared a draw.

An interesting event was the fifteen round boxing bout between Pete Barry, of Toronto, and J. Edwards, of Buffalo, at 135 pounds. The men mixed it up in good shape. Edwards was downed by a solar plexus blow in the sixth round after having his man groggy in the third round.

Another programme will be put on, on Tuesday, January 17.

"Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid cured me of a very bad case of Piles of over ten years' standing. I had tried everything but could get no permanent cure until I had used Hem-Roid. I had Blind and Bleeding Piles and suffered struggling. Ointments and local treatments failed but Dr. Leonhardt's Hem-Roid cured me perfectly."

THE POST OFFICE CRUSH AGAIN

Ran out of Stamps Last Night and no Notice Posted

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Your paper has already published a number of articles in reference to the lack of postal facilities in Peterborough, and each has, no doubt, been well founded, but I have a new, and equally vigorous complaint to make. Last night the usual crowd of pushing and shoving individuals was gathered around the single wicket, but a new grievance was experienced. There were no stamps for sale at the only place in town where one is supposed to purchase them. The clerks at the office calmly notified those who, after spending half an hour in the crush, edging their way to the wicket, some of them for the sole purpose of obtaining stamps, that the supply was exhausted. Would it not have been an easy matter to have posted a notice over the wicket that there were no stamps, and thereby save the time and preserve the temper of those who went there for the purpose of purchasing them.

St. Paul's Guild.

There was a large attendance at the regular meeting of St. Paul's Young Men's Guild last evening, when Mr. R. M. Dennistoun gave a lecture on Victor Hugo's "Jean Valjeau." Mr. Dennistoun made the story a most interesting one and the Guildsmen were much delighted with the lecture. Mr. A. P. McLean, president, was in the chair, at the meeting. Rev. Mr. Ketchen was appointed Hon. Vice-President, in place of Rev. J. A. Wilson, owing to the latter's departure from town.

$13,000 For Man's Death.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 11.—Yesterday the special jury in the case of Mrs. F. H. Hackett against the Grand Trunk Railway Company brought in a verdict for 13,000 damages for the death of Mrs. Hackett's husband, who was killed in the Richmond railway wreck last August. Mrs. Hackett sued for $20,000 damages, on behalf of herself and two infant children. The railway company admitted liability and merely left it to the jury to fix the amount of damages, which they did as above after being out a little over an hour.

Escape From Lock-Up.

Galt, Jan. 11.—A daring escape was made from the lock-up last night. Two prisoners, Bernard Trevitt and wife, a young couple, held on the charge of larceny from the Royal Hotel, kept by ex-Policeman Stewart, late of Toronto, removed the bars from a window and regained their liberty. The chief of police sympathized with the couple and had accorded them special indulgences. They took advantage of his kindness.

To Revise U.S. Tariff.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 11.—President Roosevelt favors the earliest possible action looking to a revision by Congress of the tariff. He so informed the Senators and representatives at the conference at the White House last Saturday. He thinks the time has come when the schedules should be thoroughly examined and there should be certain re-adjustments.

PROGRESS OF BALTIC FLEET

Russian Cruiser Izumrud Reported to be Badly Damaged on Her Way to Cronstadt—Botrovsky's Division of the Second Russian Pacific Squadron Has Arrived at Port Said—Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's Squadron Still Sailing Towards the East—Queer Peace Interview Reported

Berlin, Jan. 12.—The Lokal Anzaiger's St. Petersburg correspondent says that the Russian cruiser Izumrud is returning to Port Said on the way to Cronstadt in a badly damaged condition.

The cruiser Izumrud, which is one of the vessels of Admiral Botrovsky's contingent of the Russian second Pacific squadron, with the other ships of that fleet, was, according to a despatch from Suez last night, expected to reach that place at three o'clock this morning.

This is the first intimation that any vessel belonging to Admiral Botrovsky's squadron had been damaged.

At Port Said.

Port Said, Jan. 12.—Rear-Admiral Botrovsky's division of the second Russian Pacific squadron entered the canal at noon yesterday. Its destination is uncertain, but it is probably Madagascar, by way of Jibutil, French Somaliland. The warships were only permitted to ship a thousand tons of coal among the seven ships, besides taking on board provisions.

Rojestvensky Still a Sailing.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 12.—The Admiralty has not given the slightest official confirmation of the recall of Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron. On the contrary, the officials point calmly to the preparations being made to reinforce the squadrons with a division of the third Pacific squadron as sufficient evidence that Rojestvensky will not return to European waters. The Russian ice-breaker Ermak at Libau has been ordered to keep the channel clear for the ships which are being made ready for sea.

Under the French regulations, it is maintained that Rojestvensky's ships could cruise in the Indian Ocean, coaling and provisioning from their own storeships.

A QUEER PEACE PLAN.

Russia Wants a Breathing Space to Re-Arm For Next War.

Paris, Jan. 12.—Vice-Admiral Doubassoff, the Russian member of the North Sea Commission, is quoted by The Echo de Paris as having stated in an interview that he had submitted to Emperor Nicholas a program for a reorganization of the navy which is absolutely indispensable for success in the war against Japan. Twenty months will be necessary for its execution. Admiral Doubassoff thought the prospect for Vice-Admiral Rojestvensky's squadron was hopeless. He unhesitatingly declared that he considered a provisional peace would shortly be probable. Japan retaining Port Arthur and the territories which she has occupied. Russia, meanwhile, the admiral said, would prepare an invincible fleet for a future effort.

The declaration made by Vice-Admiral Doubassoff that an honorable peace is likely to be made is highly significant. Heretofore the imembers of the Russian Embassy and all the other Russian officials here have resented suggestions of peace as humiliating.

There is reason to believe that these were expressive of personal views before hearing from St. Petersburg, whereas Admiral Doubassoff has just arrived from St. Petersburg after a lengthy audience with Emperor Nicholas following the fall of Port Arthur.

The official view is that Admiral Doubassoff's statement is expressive of the growing sentiment within Russia favorable to peace. Reports show that the movement has made notable progress in recent days, particularly at Moscow. Emperor Nicholas has not shown a disposition to check the movement, although personally he disapproves of its opportuneness.

"I am convinced," said Admiral Doubassoff, "of the immediate necessity for the reconstruction of our fleet at all the Russian and foreign shipyards for the purpose of securing strength sufficient to command supremacy at sea. This is absolutely indispensable if we are to expect victory from the next war with Japan. The remnant of our fleet is hardly more than debris and is entirely unequal to Japan's naval strength."

The admiral further said it was necessary to recognize these conditions, however painful they might be to national self-love.

"Therefore," he added, "I do not hesitate to say that we tend toward not far-off peace. We will leave the Japanese Port Arthur and the territory they now occupy in Manchuria. We will set ourselves resolutely at work to prepare a powerful, invincible navy, as this peace will be but temporary, and the next time we shall be amply prepared."

Will Meet Mr. Prefontaine.

Albany, N.Y., Jan. 12.—The special Inter-State Commerce Commission, appointed by the last Legislature to secure uniform laws regarding the netting of fish in the waters bordering New York, Vermont and Canada left here yesterday to meet the Canadian Minister of Marine and Fisheries, Prefontaine, at Ottawa

MET DEATH IN U.S.

Miss Margaret McDowell of Canada Run Down By a Horse.

Detroit, Jan. 12.—Wednesday evening Miss Margaret McDowell, whose home was at Eden Grove, Ontario, was struck by a runaway horse at a street intersection in the heart of the city, knocked down, her skull fractured, killing her almost instantly. Her identity was not learned until yesterday. Her remains will be taken to her former home. The horse was driven by a man, at present unknown, whose carelessness resulted in his rig being struck by a street car. The occupants were thrown out. His companion, a woman, was only slightly injured. She refuses to divulge his name. He made his escape. The police are trying to find him.

Detective Sees Hold-Up.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Last night Detective Forrest was doing office duty at police headquarters. He heard a cry for help, and looking out of the window saw two men holding up and assaulting another on Albert street. The assailants had gone on their way, but Forrest saw a man turning the corner who resembled one of the men he had seen from the window. He arrested him. It was Wilson. The victim of the assault was Harry Cowan, a clerk in a store, 433 East King street. His face showed that he had been badly beaten. Wilson's hands were covered with blood when arrested by Forrest. He admits the assault, but denies the theft of the $8, which Cowan claims to have lost in the mix-up.

Coal Miner's Strike Spreads.

Cologne, Germany, Jan. 12.—The strike of coal miners has spread. Part or all of the diggers in 17 additional mines did not go to work yesterday morning. The number idle is about 35,000, or one-eighth of the total. Division exist among the miners, minorities disapproving of a strike and refusing to quit work, so that the proprietors of some of the striking mines continue to work them on part time.

Life Hangs By a Thread.

Windsor, Jan. 12.—Sergt. Nash put in a good day yesterday and his condition, although very grave, is slightly improved yesterday. Owing to the aneurism of the aorta the least excitement or shock may cause the blood to burst out and death would ensue in a few minutes. It is possible, therefore, that Nash may not be able to resume his place on the force if he recovers, because of the danger from excitement of exertion.

Charged With Wife Murder.

Buffalo, N. Y., Jan. 12.—Antio di Santi, husband of the woman who was found on Monday in her room in a hotel here, strangled to death, was arraigned yesterday on a charge of murder in the first degree and through counsel pleaded not guilty. There was $15,000 insurance on his wife's life in his favor.

May Withdraw Arbitration Treaties.

Washington, Jan. 12.—If the arbitration treaties now pending before the United States Senate are emasculated, the President will withdraw them from consideration.

No Carnival.

Belleville, Jan. 12.—Counterfeit $5 bills on the Bank of Montreal have been passed in this city. They are clumsy imitations and should deceive no one who uses proper care.

They Stay.

Halifax, N.S., Jan. 12.—A. A. McLean and Martin, members-elect in Queen's, Prince Edward Island, were yesterday confirmed in their seats.

Horse Thieves Punished.

McLeod, Alberta, Jan. 11.—At the sitting of the criminal court, presided over by Justice Harvey, a number of cases of horse stealing were disposed of with the result that the convicted parties will spend various terms in McLeod jail. The sentences were as follows: Tom Daley, two years; Percy Steele, two years; Black White (Indian), year and a half; Mrs. Percy Steele, one year; Joseph Shaput, bound over in two thousand dollar bonds and released on suspended sentence for receiving stolen horses, and, Hungry Crow, is held as a witness against Tom Spotted Bull, who will be tried on the 23rd for stealing horses.

Open to the Press.

Paris, Jan. 11.—The International Commission appointed to inquire into the North Sea incident has prepared a protocol of over 20 articles governing the procedure. The question whether the pleadings should be verbal or written has not yet been decided. Provision is made that the press of the various nations shall have equal facilities during the public hearings. THE SHOOTING WAS ACCIDENTAL

Such was the Jury's Verdict in the Duval Case.

The Coroner's Inquest was Concluded Yesterday—Evidence Taken.

We, the jury, believe that the deceased, James Duval, came to his death by a bullet passing through his head from a rifle in the hands of John James Sisson, and we further believe that the shooting was accidental, and strongly condemn the practice of allowing boys to carry firearms.

The coroner's inquest to inquire into the cause of the death of Jas. Duval, at Cordova, was concluded yesterday at the town hall, Cordova, before Dr. Grey, coroner.

The evidence taken yesterday did not add anything material to that already taken at the preceding session, and the jury, after reviewing the evidence, rendered the verdict as above.

During the interval between the session of the inquest on Thursday last, and yesterday, the members of the jury visited the scene of the tragedy, and saw the conditions as they existed, and this no doubt influenced them in the rendering of the above verdict.

William Duval, father of the deceased boy, was the first witness, and said that he was in the shanty when the accident occurred, and did not get any word of it until about four hours afterwards. As far as he knew, his son, James, and the two Sisson boys always got along well together, and he did not know that John James Sisson had any spite against his son, James.

Stewart Crossing testified to having seen the tracks in the snow in which John Sisson had stood, and he was going north east, and Duval was shot at a point about north-east from where young Sisson was standing.

John Sisson was recalled, and swore that he did not put the rifle to his shoulder, and point it at the deceased, Duval, to frighten him fro going back.

Mr. John Brown, foreman of the jury, was the last witness, and gave evidence to having seen the points at which the deceased and John Sisson had stood.

Semi-Ready Dress Suit.

The essentials for a satisfactory dress suit are fit, style, proper balance and fabric.

The dress suitings we buy are from Sir Titus Salt, Bart., Saltaire, England, and Joshua Garnett & Sons, Idle, near Bradford, England—so much for the fabric.

Fit, style and proper balance are the result of artistic designing — expert cutting and thoroughly knowing hand workmanship throughout.

Semi-ready dress suits fit better than those custom-tailored, because every process of tailoring is in the hands of the best tailors of the craft — men who are instinctively, intuitively and naturally artistic tailors.

That's why a Semi-ready dress suit becomes your personality— possesses style—fit and permanent shape retention.

Number of Births, Deaths and Marriages in 1904.

The returns for the year 1904, of births, deaths and marriages, have been compiled by the Town Clerk, and are as follows. The returns for 1903 are also given for comparison:

	1904.	1903.
Births...	253	254
Deaths...	247	174
Marriages...	100	148

It will thus be seen that in every item there is an advance over those of 1903. In 1904 there were 106 more births than deaths, and in 1903 there were but 80 more.

G.T.P. TO USE SOO-MADE RAILS

Transatlantic Rumours to the Contrary Notwithstanding.

British steel rail manufacturers evidently do not regard kindly the ability of Ontario, (due to the aid given by the Ontario Government) to furnish rails for Canadian railways. A rumour has been originated in London that the Grand Trunk Pacific has placed large orders for rails with prominent firms in Great Britain. The Grand Trunk Pacific people flatly deny this report, and Mr. C. D. Warren, president of the "Soo" Company, says that the Grand Trunk Pacific Company is negotiating with the "Soo" rail mills. It would doubtless greatly please Mr. Whitney and his party, who bitterly opposed the Government's action, which led to the operating of the "Soo" steel rail mills, if there should be some sort of failure to justify their unpatriotic pessimism in opposing the "Soo" guarantee bill.

The Tory Party a Party of Failures.

Failures they have been from time immemorial, in matters of legislation; in the presentation of their policy up to the present hour, and with failure written over their whole career, they are now going to the country asking for public confidence. Shall the people of Ontario take into their service a party that fails in presenting an acceptable policy, and that has failed eight times?—Premier Ross at Temple banquet.

DIFFERENT KINDS OF HONESTY

With some people conscience is a matter of bringing up. We have known men who would not polish their boots on Sunday who would as cheerfully blacken their neighbours character on that day as on any other. There are people who would not put a loaf of a Bible in the stove for a fortune who never lose an opportunity to roast everybody they can lay their spiteful tongue upon. We have known men walk ten blocks to pay a car fare they had omitted to put into the fare box who would just as religiously gouge a wholesale man out of an extra discount or the bank charges on a draft. We heard a man, some time ago, who was one of a crowd listening to an atheist exercising his mouth in a public park, when disgusted with the remarks of the unbeliever, called out lustily, as he took his pipe from between his teeth, "Put him out, d—n him! put him out!" This "defender of the faith" would no doubt have fought, bled and died for the faith "once delivered to the saints" as cheerfully, doubtless, as the lay chaplain who in procession staggered along in his white robes clasping a massive copy of the Holy Scriptures in his drunken embrace. From the man whose sanctimoniousness sickens the people who have to live with him to the commercial bird of prey who prays in church and preys in the store, there are samples all the way between of those whose consciences are the result of gross misconception or neglect of the grand principles of the Book whose teaching is preeminently that righteousness not only "exalteth a nation," but men.—Shoe and Leather Journal.

DUTCH COURAGE.

Do any of the Conservative leaders in West Peterborough, we wonder, remmeber their small boy days when, afraid of the dark room at the head of the stairs, it was the approved custom to whistle cheerily as one went up. It was also in those days permissible to stamp one's feet heavily, and really clever strategy was displayed when the small boy managed to get sent off to bed with a ruler or some other such weapon in his hand — which weapon judiciously dragged along the balustrade gave forth an enthusiastic clatter that made the heart stout and must surely have dismayed the bogie man in the dark room. It has become quite clear that the Conservatives do indeed remember, for they are now exhibiting the grown-man stage of the same process. There had already been evidence of the whistle and the stamping feet. But their candidate went to Toronto the other day and, forthwith, the Mail and Empire became the ruler clattering on the balustrade. Something simply had to be done to keep heart in the Conservative rank and file after the disastrous days of the registration, so this paper was induced to go a-shouting to keep their courage up.

But no amount of shouting on the part of the small boy ever made the dark room light. So no number of announcements that the Liberal party have given up the fight will lighten the dark day of January 25, for the Conservative candidate. The Liberals are finding Mr. McWilliams very much "a man to cheer for," the Mail and Empire notwithstanding. They are all too busy working to spend much time shouting now, but they will cheer long and loudly on the night of January 25th, when their hearty work results in a victory for their candidate.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The snow storms are most persistent these days; so are the Liberal workers for McWilliams.

Well, at least, the Liberals try to get to their meetings. Mr. McWilliams has not as yet failed to be on hand for a single meeting.

Landing the salt on the robin's tail, or catching the will o' the wisp, would be simple tasks compared to that of keeping track of the Conservative charges against the Government. Mr. Whitney is going about the province inveighing against the Government because no one reported in an election trial has been punished. But the World—a Conservative organ—wants to know why the Ross Government, should take any credit to itself because these offenders have been punished. That "conference" doesn't seem to have been productive of any great unanimity of opinion.

The Toronto World says, "Mr. Bradburn, the Conservative standard-bearer, is conducting a series of highly successful meetings throughout the riding." We haven't noticed the Review giving any enthusiastic accounts of these meetings lately. In fact it is rumoured that Mr. Bradburn and several meetings have failed to connect. Snowstorms are hard propositions to overcome. The Conservatives should bear their sufferings patiently. The elements are simply following the example of their leader, Mr. Whitney, who has been storming and scolding on the public platform, at the rate of a sixty-mile gale.

LIQUOR FOR LODGERS IS NOT LEGAL.

The Law Forbids the Sale of Liquor to Hotel Guests or any Other Person After 11 P. M.

Can only be Sold for Medical Purposes and Then not Consumed on the Premises.

There seems to be a general opinion, that the law permits a hotel keeper to serve a guest of his house with intoxicating liquor after the forbidden hour of 11 o'clock. This point arose out of the fact proven under oath that Mr. Whitney, leader of the Conservative Opposition at the hotel in Napanee, where he was staying, after the meeting he addressed in the Opera House, purchased and consumed Scotch whiskey after the hour of 11 o'clock. Mr. Whitney admits the facts but contends and others contend with him, that no breach of the law was committed. Mr. Whitney said, speaking at Cornwall, that in obtaining liquor during prohibited hours, he "availed himself of his rights and privileges as a guest of that hotel and that he had nothing to apologize for."

The sections of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, declaring that Mr. Whitney's act was a breach of the law have upheld, by a decision of the Common Pleas Division of the High Court as far back as 1892 in the case of Reg. vs. Southwitch, Ontario Reports Vol. 21, page 670.

It will be observed on reference to the report in question that the language which has received interpretation at the hands of the court is identically the same in sections 54 and 55 of the present liquor license act, being chapter 245 R.S.O., 1897. Section 54 forbids any sale of liquor on licensed premises between the hour of 7 o'clock on Saturday night and 6 o'clock on the following Monday morning, and section 55 forbids any such sale after the hour of 11 o'clock in any city or town on any other day of the week, and to both sections are appended a saving clause in exactly identical words, which are as follows:—"Save and EXCEPT in cases where a requisition for MEDICAL PURPOSES signed by a licensed medical practitioner or a Justice of the Peace is produced by the vendee or his agent, NOR SHALL any such liquor, whether sold or not, be PERMITTED OR ALLOWED TO BE DRUNK IN ANY SUCH PLACE DURING THE TIME PROHIBITED FOR THE SALE OF THE SAME, except by the occupant or some member of the family or lodger in his house."

It will be seen that Mr. Justice [illegible] in dealing with the matter and after quoting the words above given, says: "It will be observed that these words do not afford any license to sell, but are words prohibiting the drinking of liquor during the hours prohibited, whether sold or not, except that the occupant or some member of his family or lodger in his house may be allowed to drink. The fact, therefore, of liquor having been sold to a lodger does not under section 54 excuse the sale."

Mr. Justice MacMahon concurred in this decision, and the result was that the appeal against the conviction failed.

The law is now regarded as being well settled, and is scarcely open to question.

The position of affairs is that Mr. Whitney presumably knew the provisions of the license law, when he denounced the Ross Government for failure to enforce it. Within thirty minutes afterwards he "procured" a breach of that very law upon a point on which there are at least two judicial decisions on record; and, "when his inconsistency was exposed, claimed that he was acting within his rights in obtaining the liquor. Either the leader of the Opposition has been criticising the Government for failure to enforce a law, with the provisions of which he is not familiar, or he must have known that the consumption of the liquor in his room was contrary to the law, the enforcement which he had but a few minutes before pleaded with all the eloquence he possessed should be placed in his hands.

C.P.R. FIGHTING SNOW AT HAVELOCK

Fifty Extra Men Engaged in the Yards There.

School Entertainment was a Great Success—Social News of Interest.

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Havelock, Jan. 10th.—The heavy storms of last week have been a great source of trouble both to the C. P. R. here and also to the authorities responsible for the removal of the snow from the sidewalks. It seems as though the responsible party had come to the conclusion that the most simple and by far the easiest way was to let everyone who had business out of doors, break his or her own road. The C.P.R. have been putting up a great fight with the elements and are rewarded with a large share of success in keeping their track free of the ever-drifting snow. The plow has been in constant use for the last three days and the promptitude shown in sending extra help to remove the snow from the sidings and yard goes to show that the company are determined to keep things moving at all costs. There are now about fifty Italians at this point to fight the snow and keep the switches and sidings in good working order. As a result no trains have been cancelled and considering the quantity of snow and the size of the drifts the delays to the passenger service has been of no moment.

Master Leonard Bennett had a very narrow escape on Tuesday from losing an eye, when some of the boys who were shovelling snow from the school rink. Master Leonard while passing was struck by a shovel just over the right eye, causing a very nasty cut, about two and one-half inches long. Dr. Crawford dressed same and the boy will be around all right in a couple of days.

Miss Annie Mathieson left for Ottawa, where she is attending the Ottawa Ladies' College after spending her vacation with her mother here.

Miss Bessie Rose entertained a few friends in honour of her birthday last Thursday evening.

Miss Lettora Bennett left for Ottawa on Tuesday where she will resume her studies as before the holidays.

Mrs. J. W. Burns and son Leslie and Mr. Jas. Watson, who have been the guests of Mrs. Aleck Rose for the past few days left for their respective homes in Toronto on Saturday last.

A damper to the skating rink enterprise was experienced in the big snow storms which we have had lately, but the manager, Mr. J. Frost, deserves credit for having it thoroughly cleared off and good skating for last night, Mr. Frost is lighting the rink with four fifty candle power incandescent lamps and it is altogether likely he will put an arc lamp in the centre. He is putting up a new comfortable dressing room.

Mr. J. O'Sullivan has been laid up for the past few days with a severe cold.

We are glad to see Mr. Wm. Calligan out again after being laid up for about a week with a severe attack of grippe. He was at his post as despatcher to-night. Mr. Calligan while sick was relieved by Mr. George Wilkinson, of Toronto.

A very enjoyable time was experienced at the English Church Sunday School entertainment given in the town hall last Saturday evening. The chorus by the school was much enjoyed. Then Punch and Judy was put on, which, although seen by many before, was enjoyed by all. Mr. Mat. Swain and A. McGuire favoured the audience with a duet. Next the ventriloquest gave an exhibition with his block heads which was appreciated by all. Mr. King made the hit of the evening. His judicious rendering of that pathetic song "When Father puts the Carpet on the Stairs" may be described as a treat. That so much humour could be instilled into this simple ditty proclaims the singer at once as an artiste of the first rank. Mr. King was encored. A distribution of prizes was then made to the children. Rev. Mr. Tandy as chairman was the same brilliant orator as usual.

Mr. R. E. White spent Monday in Peterborough.

Miss Harrison, of Belleville, is the guest of Miss Cherie Barlow.

Mrs. Jas. Barlow has been ill for the past few days.

Owing to the very severe weather and the different changes, a number of colds are the consequences and a general cough is now the go.

Lakefield, Jan. 10.—Mr. Gray, of the teaching staff of Trinity College School, Port Hope, is in the village, the guest of Mr. F. M. Dela-Fosse.

The Lakefield skating and curling rink was opened for the season on Saturday evening, quite a large number patronizing the rink on the opening night.

Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., writes: "I was troubled for a long time with headaches, which would come on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. CANADA DREAMING

That is the View of The London Morning Post.

OPPOSITION CAN'T AWAKEN US

Wave of Anti-Militarism Now Passing Over Canada—Canadians Unwilling to Pay the Cost of Insuring Their National Welfare—"A Fool's Paradise"—Mr. Chamberlain's Speech At Preston.

London, Jan. 12.—(C.A.P.)—Referring to the support of Sir Wilfrid Laurier by the English as well as the French-speaking Canadians, The Morning Post says: "We cannot help thinking that many Canadian politicians over-rate the force of Quebec's passive resistance to proposals having for their object the participation of Canada in the work of imperial defence. At times we have thought Sir Wilfrid Laurier shared their mistake.

"There can be no doubt of the wave of anti-militarism now passing over Canada, and that the majority of Canadians disregard the necessity of defending even their land frontier, and are unwilling to pay the cost of insuring their national welfare against other war risks.

"As yet little or nothing has been done by the Minister of Militia to bring Canada out of the defenceless state described by Lord Dundonald as a "fool's paradise." The Opposition is so weak both in numbers and debating power that it cannot do much to awaken the Canadian people from their day dream of peace for which no price need be paid."

Chamberlain to Asquith.

London, Jan. 12.—(C.A.P.)—Right Hon. Joseph Chamberlain, speaking at Preston, first replied to Right Hon. Mr. Asquith, probably his most persistent critic, and by profession a lawyer. Mr. Chamberlain said:

"Am I a protectionist? I wonder what Mr. Asquith would say, how he would describe Sir Wilfrid Laurier? Is he a protectionist, that great colonial statesman? If he is not a protectionist, then neither am I, since I agree with his policy in every particular. If he is a protectionist, or if Mr. Asquith calls him so, why I should like to ask why did his cheats, the Cobden Club, give Sir Wilfrid Laurier the greatest honor which it was possible for them to pay him, giving him the gold medal of that magnificent association—cheers and laughter—on the distinct ground of the service that he rendered free trade."

ONE BURGLAR'S NERVE.

Does Much Work and Secures $130 in Ten Minutes.

Hamilton, Jan. 12.—One of the most daring robberies ever committed in Hamilton was pulled off last evening, when the T. H. & B. ticket office, at the Hunter street station, was rifled and $120 booty secured. Albert Craig, the ticket agent, left the office in charge of Edwin Yorick, at 6.40 last evening. Yorick locked both doors of the office at 6.45 and ran to the offices upstairs in the station building. He was gone only ten minutes, but during the time the door leading from the ladies' waiting room into the ticket office had been forced open by means of a jimmy, the thief had grabbed $120 from the till and had disappeared. The door is a stout one and was secured by two locks. The thief, judging by the marks he left on the door, worked like a Trojan, and broke one lock and forced the other. Yorick declares that when he went upstairs there was not a soul in either the ladies' or general waiting room, and there was nobody around when he came back. The office was brilliantly lighted by electricity, and the ticket office door forced is in full view of both James and Hunter streets. There were several men in the baggage room next to the waiting rooms and several clerks in the offices upstairs at the time.

MR. HAVERSON'S CONTENTION.

Nothing in Act to Prevent Sale of Soft Drinks Election Day.

Toronto, Jan. 12.—Eudo Saunders, chief of the Ontario License Department, agrees with James Haverson's contention in the Galt liquor case, that there is nothing in the act to prevent a hotel-keeper keeping his place of business open on municipal election day, provided he does not sell liquor. This question is covered by section 58 of the Ontario Liquor Act, which provides that a hotel-keeper may not sell liquor on election day.

Under section 170 of the Ontario Election Act, a penalty of $100 or six months' imprisonment is provided for each offence, described as follows:

"No spirituous or fermented liquor or strong drink shall be sold or given at any hotel, tavern, shop or other place within the limits of a polling sub-division, during the polling day therein, or any part thereof, under a penalty of $100 for every offence; and the offender shall be subject to imprisonment not exceeding six months, at the discretion of the court or judge, in default of payment of such fine."

In the Galt case, the defendant hotel-keeper is charged with disposing of soft drinks and cigars.

Better Late Than Never.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—It is expected that the South Africa, 1901, clasps will be received shortly from the Imperial authorities for distribution to those officers, non-coms. and men of Strathcona's Horse who are entitled thereto.

Died From Injuries.

Hamilton, Jan. 12.—Mrs. Temple, widow of the late John Temple, who fell downstairs a few days ago, died of her injuries yesterday morning.

Permanent Cure for Bronchitis.

"My second daughter was troubled with bronchitis from the age of three weeks. Oftentimes I thought she would choke to death. Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine brought relief, and further treatment made a thorough cure. This trouble used to come back from time to time but now the cure is permanent." — Mrs. Richmond Withrow, Shubenacadie, Hants Co., N. S.

FAST EXPRESS KILLS.

Norman Hashim, An Assyrian, Killed Near Lancaster, Ont.

Cornwall, Jan. 12.—An Assyrian named Norman Hashim was killed by the fast express yesterday morning, near Lancaster. He had been walking on the track, and the driver of the eastbound freight tried to signal him that the express was coming. He left the track, but a short distance away returned, and was struck and killed. Hashim belonged to Cornwall, and the body was taken to this station, where it was turned over to his friends by the coroner.

Train Kills a Teacher.

Chatham, Jan. 12.—While walking on the G.T.R. track to the Bloomfield School, situated 2½ miles southwest of the city, of which she was teacher, Miss Christina Bates was struck by a westbound passenger train yesterday morning and instantly killed. Deceased was 26 years of age and the daughter of F. Bates, Park street. No inquest will be held.

Four Men Killed At a Shaft.

Houghton, Mich., Jan. 12.—Four men have been instantly killed and two others injured at a shaft, which is being sunk at Rockland by the Victoria Mining Company for a hydraulic power plant.

Engineer and Fireman Instantly Killed.

Twenty-Two Lives Lost.

Waterford, Ireland, Jan. 12.—The steamer Zeno arrived here yesterday with the captain and twelve men of the American steam dredger Texas, which foundered in a storm off the Hebrides. The crew entered the small boats, but one crew entered the boats, but one containing the chief officer and 21 men sank immediately, and all its occupants were drowned. The survivors drifted for several days before being picked up.

Dominion's New Grain Inspector.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—David Horn, Winnipeg, chief grain inspector of Manitoba, has been appointed chief grain inspector for the Dominion. E. F. Craig, chief grain inspector, eastern division, is not affected in any way, except that Mr. Horn will have supervision over the entire grain inspection of the Dominion. Mr. Horn's appointment is probably contingent upon other grain districts being erected farther west, where there has recently been a demand for various inspections.

Will Be Deported.

Montreal, Jan. 12.—"I can say I did not do it," said Sarah Ann Pearson, after Extradition Commissioner Lafontaine had finished the reading to her of some forty closely written foolscap pages of depositions taken in County Armagh, Ireland, all having bearing on the charge made against her of having poisoned her mother-in-law, Alice Pearson, 74 years of age. The girl will be sent back.

Saves Himself By Deserting Wife.

Galt, Jan. 12.—Chief Gorman discovered the fugitive jail-breakers, Bernard Trevitt and wife, yesterday at a farmhouse, near the village of Freelton. The man got wind of the pursuit, however, and cruelly left his wife in order to save himself from re-arrest. He is still at large, while the luckless woman is in Berlin jail, with the charge of jail-breaking lodged against her.

Sawmill Burned.

Burk's Falls, Jan. 12.—The sawmill owned by C. N. Stacey, about 1½ miles west of this village, was burned to the ground Tuesday night. Loss, probably $1,200; no insurance.

Jealousy Prompts Murders.

Chicago, Jan. 12.—With a pistol and razor John Miller, a cook, killed his wife and two daughters yesterday and shot himself. Jealousy is believed to be the cause.

Miseries of the Red Sea.

In the waters of the Red sea the sensation of the engines on a steamer for an hour means extreme physical suffering for passengers. For a day it would involve absolute torture. The wind which prevails every day is a hot, asphyxiating blast, and its continuous directions are from north and south toward the center. As a result every passing vessel is subjected to two days of almost intolerable heat, followed by two days of comparative comfort, but instances have been known of crowded liners being compelled when traveling with the wind to turn round and steam back for an hour or so in order to give the passengers even a brief respite from the sufferings induced by the dull, dead, unbearable atmosphere.

The story related by Mr. N. Ford, the well known conveyancer of St. Mary's, Ont., is but one of the thousands of tributes that are being paid to Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets. This is what he says: "For three years I have had a pain in my right side and back. I laid it to the liver and kidneys. I tried a good many medicines without relief, but finally got a bottle of Dr. Pitcher's Backache Kidney Tablets, and to my intense gratification they relieved both pains easily and quickly, and there has been no return of the symptoms since using them."

TO CLEAR OFF A CHURCH DEBT

Plan Formulated by Rev. Dr. Torrance to Free the $4,000 Debt on St. Paul's Church and Mission—Will Assess the Members of the Church and Congregation—Board of Managers Have Approved of the Plan and it Will be Put Into Effect Almost Immediately---Will Mean the Raising of $1,300 Each Year for Three Years

A movement has been inaugurated to wipe the debt off the St. Paul's Presbyterian church, and it is probable that in a short time the plan will be submitted to a meeting of the church congregation for approval. On Tuesday night a meeting of the Board of Managers was held and Rev. Dr. Torrance, who, presided, informed them of his plan, which is to assess the different members of the congregation a proportionate amount of the debt and pay the whole indebtedness off in three years.

The total debt now on the church and the mission is in the neighbourhood of $4,000, and this would leave $1,300 to be raised each year. Dr. Torrance has been for some time engaged in the formulation of his plan to relieve the church of the cloud of debt hanging over it, and night, were so favourably impressed with it that they adopted it on the spot, and will proceed to put it into operation as soon as practicable.

It is understood that to show the practical working out of the plan the managers, to whom the announcement was made on Tuesday Dr. Torrance took the members of the Board of Managers and fixed their assessments for the three years their assessments for this three years of the life of the scheme, and the Board of Managers, who evidently possess religion of the practical kind, accepted the assessments to be levied on them, and are entering into the scheme with enthusiasm, though, alone many of them are among the most wealthy members, their portion of the amount will be much larger than that of the ordinary members.

AN INTERESTING PROGRAMME

Will be Given at George Street Young Men's Guild Meeting.

To-night at the George street church, the regular meeting of the Young Men's Guild will be held, and a meeting of more than usual interest is promised. Mr. F. H. Dobbin will give a talk on "How to Talk," which should, and no doubt will, be very interesting. Other attractive features will be added to the programme including musical numbers and refreshments. All young men of the church are invited to be present as probable that future meetings will be discussed, and plans laid upon.

A LITERARY AND DEBATING SOCIETY

Was Formed in Connection With the Y. M. C. A.

Mr. J. H. Burnham Gave Address Which Inspired the Organization.

The Literary and Debating Society of the Y. M. C. A. was organized last night. The special feature of the evening, introductory to the organization itself, was an address given by Mr. J. H. Burnham.

It was thought that if such a man as Mr. Burnham, with his knowledge and experience of debating and public speaking, could give the men a practical talk, it would help them a great deal, first by awakening a desire and creating an appreciation for such work, and secondly, by giving them valuable hints and suggestions, as to how they should conduct themselves, how to think intelligently and clearly when upon their feet, how to arrange their material to the best advantage, and how to detect the weak points of their opponent, and to attack them, besides many valuable ideas.

After Mr. Burnham's address the organization of the society was effected. It is to be called the "Literary and Debating Society of the Y.M.C.A., of Peterborough". Any senior member of the Association will be eligible for membership. A constitution and a set of by-laws were adopted, subject to amendments. Mr. P. K. Holmes was elected as chairman protem and Mr. Maurice Rosenburg, as Secretary pro tem. Several committees were appointed.

Owing to the lateness of the hour, further organization was postponed until next Wednesday evening.

There is nothing more valuable to a man than the ability to stand upon his feet, before an audience and express himself clearly and intelligently, and there is nothing that will give him keener pleasure than when he can do it thus. The Association has long felt the need of such an organization, and it is now endeavouring to give its members the privilege of such. The Society is not for men who are masters of the art of debate, but for those who are entirely new at it, and who have a desire to make themselves proficient. There will be no fees in connection with the Society. Any senior member is heartily invited to enroll. Meetings will be held every other Wednesday evening, or once a fortnight at 8 o'clock.

ENTHUSIASM AT SELWYN

Mr. McWilliams Held Splendid Meeting Last Night.

Notwithstanding the Storm, Electors Turn out and Cheer for the Liberal Candidate.

It was something after the fashion of one who seeks a forlorn hope that the Liberal candidate started last evening for Selwyn where a meeting in his interests had been advertised. The storm was so severe and the roads so heavy that it did not seem likely that even election enthusiasm would bring men out to the meetings. But these expectations were pleasantly disappointed for Mr. McWilliams had as well attended a meeting last night as was held by either party during the Dominion election. The campaign has been conducted throughout in the face of the severest kind of weather, but the meeting last night was the twelfth (one that Mr. McWilliams has held and everyone, but one, has been remarkably well attended. The Liberal candidate is evidently possessed of all the "Grit" that any of his friends could ask.

Mr. Isaac Manning acted as chairman and in an appropriate speech introduced the candidate. Mr. McWilliams spoke about an hour in which he reviewed the various grounds of difference between the parties at this time. He emphasized particularly the importance to every elector of an efficient and economical management of the business of the province, and showed the saving which there had been to the tax payers of the County of Peterborough by reason of the grants that have been made out of the Provincial revenues under Liberal administration. The administrative work of the Government was practically unchallenged by the Opposition and for such work they were entitled to a renewal of the confidence of the people of this Riding and of the whole Province. The Opposition leaders had not only failed in effective criticism of the administration but had also failed to bring before the country any new policy on account of which they could justly ask the people of the Province to change their political allegiance.

Mr. McWilliams showed the utter hypocrisy of the Conservative charges of corruption and the falsity of the charge that political offenders had not been punished by the law officers of the Crown. During the preceding 25 years not a single man named by the judges in election trials had been prosecuted in the criminal courts. During the last five years 53 such parties had been prosecuted and almost all been heavily fined while 25 of them had served terms in jail.

Upon all questions, including that of temperance, the policy of the Government had been that of steady progress and reform leading the way as fast as public opinion would justify. Especially had they shown a spirit of statesmanship in the manner in which they had grappled with the problems of opening up for settlement our great northern territory. The construction of the railway from North Bay through the new country would give the Government for all time control of the railway rates and would enable them to see that the new country was opened up upon condition which would be as favourable to the settlers as it would be possible to have them.

A noticeable feature of the meeting was the attendance of young men voters and the heartiness with which the candidate was received and cheered at the close of his address was a strong indication of the verdict which will be given at Selwyn on January 25th.

RETURNED MISSIONARY AT ST. ANDREW'S

Miss Dr. McKeller, of Central India, Spoke Last Evening.

Miss Dr. Margaret McKeller, who was storm-stayed in town last evening, on her way to Perth, gave a missionary address in St. Andrew's school room at the regular monthly prayer meeting. Miss McKeller has spent the past twelve years as a medical missionary in Meemuah, Central India, in connection with the Presbyterian Missions there. The work has been progressing most favourably and the reports are very encouraging. The speaker told of the nature of her work there, narrating interesting incidents in reference to her experience.

Miss McKeller who is in home on furlough will speak at St. Andrews Church next Sunday night.

ENTERTAINED BY BACHELOR CLUB

Members of C. D. A. and Eko Camp Spend Evening Together.

Many Brilliant After Dinner Speeches—A Delightful Social Function.

An evidence of the good feeling existing between the members of the Eko Camp Club and the C. D. A., the two leading young men's bachelor clubs in town was furnished by the at home given last night to the members of the former club by the latter in Long's palm parlours.

The early part of the evening was spent in playing pedro and during the evening an orchestra rendered several musical selections.

About 10.30 supper was served, the tables being arranged in banquet order, the toastmaster being Mr. James Hamilton, president of the C. D. A. and the vice chairman, Mr. Dickson Davidson, vice president of the same club.

Those present of the different clubs were:— Eko Camp, — Messrs, Manson Comstock, W. R. G. Higgins, Geo. Jackson, W. L. Ramsden, R. M. Glover, W. Comstock, Howard Waram, E. Clarke, J. Comstock, H. Martin, B. Caniff, J. M. Gemmell, C. D. A.—Besides those mentioned above, Messrs. E. S. Clarry, H. Rush, E. R. Jarvis, Oscar Dumble, F. Bradburn, F. Burnham, F. Smallpiece, G. M. HamiRon, L. Hall.

The first toast proposed and honoured was that to The King, which was received in the usual manner.

Mr. E. S. Clarry proposed the health of Eko Camp, and in doing so referred to the good feeling existing between the members of the two clubs, and to the esteem in which the members of the visiting club are held by the entertaining club. He expressed the hope that this good fellowship would continue, as he had no doubt it would.

Mr. Manson Comstock president of the Eko Camp Club responded to the toast in suitable terms, as did also Mr. R. M. Glover, who expressed pleasure at the evidences of friendship existing between the two clubs gathered.

"Our Mercantile Interests" was proposed by Mr. W. Comstock and responded to by Mr. E. Clarke, both of the Eko Camp. Mr. W. R. G. Higgins proposed the next toast, that to "Our Parliamentary Institutions" and Mr. F. Bradburn fittingly responded. "The Ladies" were honoured in a toast proposed as usual by Mr. D. Davidson, and the fair sex were represented ably by Messrs. R. M. Glover, J. Gemmell, W. R. G. Higgins, H. Rush, and L. Hall.

During the evening reference was made to the departure from town of Mr. Geo. Jackson, a member of the Eko Camp. Mr. Jackson made a short speech in which he referred to the very pleasant time he had spent with the young men of Peterborough, the associations of whom he would never with regret.

The gathering dispersed after singing "Auld Lang Syne."

AT HOME WAS MUCH ENJOYED

Karnot Hockey Club's Social Event a Great Success

The at home held in the Labour Hall on Tuesday night, under the auspices of the Karnot hookey club, proved a most decided and gratifying success. There were about 40 couple present, all of whom enjoyed themselves thoroughly. The hall was tastefully decorated with flags and bunting, and that the work of the committee was appreciated, was shown by the crowning success of the assembly and the enjoyable evening spent by all who attended. The music, which was supplied by Misses McCabe and Quinn was pronounced by all first class, and each and every one one of the twenty numbers on the programme was encored. The dancing commenced at about 9.30, and wound up at midnight with the Karnot two step. It is proposed to hold another at home in the near future.

NEW STOCK BROKING FIRM

N. B. Darrell Opens Office with Mr. B. Boomer as Manager

Mr. B. Boomer has returned to town and will have the local management of the stock broking firm of N. B. Darrell, of Toronto. The local office, which is in that vacated by Mr. Nelson, opened for business yesterday morning with good prospects for a successful business. The wires used are those of O'Dell & Company, of Cincinnatti, Ohio, through which firm the buying is done. The office has been nicely fitted up, and under Mr. Boomer's popular management no doubt a good business will be done.

REFUSED TO ACCEPT SCHEME

A Persuasive Letter Which Met With No Response.

A Prominent Local Business man who Refused to Bite at a Wildcat Scheme.

A scheme to defraud at least one prominent Peterborough gentleman, has been discovered, and the prospects are that others have been included in the scheme inaugurated by a letter from a Spanish gentleman (?) in Madrid.

The gentleman in town who received the letter fortunately was wise enough not to be taken in by the wily Spaniard, and instead of answering it, as was requested, he placed the letter in the possession of the Examiner in order that it might be published as a warning to others who might have received one, and in whom the instinct of charity might be stronger than their better judgment, and who might otherwise be inclined to fall into the trap laid for them.

The letter received by the above gentleman, and which explained itself, is as follows:

"My dear Sir, — Prisoner in this city for bankruptcy I address to you this letter, asking if you would help me to save a sum of 190,000 dollars, which I have deposited in a bank of New York, having in my power documents for this amount payable at sight and to the bearer of the same, but for obtaining this documents it is necessary to get out my seized equipage.

"For a reward you shall have the third part of the before mentioned amount.

"As I don't know if you are in the same address as before, and fearing that this letter may not reach your hands I shall expect your answer in order to confide to you my whole secret.

"It is impossible for me either to receive your answer in the gaol, or by post, and as the justice has granted me a term forthwhich draw my valises, and because of the distance which separated us you must answer by cablegrama on receiving which I shall write you again confiding to you my secret in all its particulars.

"You must address your cablegrama to the name and address of an old manservant of mine who enjoys my whole confidence and who will hand it to me with all security.

"I ought to advice you that on this matter you will not have to spend nothing untill you have very clear proves of the matter.

"It will be useless to answer by post.

"Expecting your cablegrama I have the honour to be,

"Your humble servant,
"Manuel Hernander.

"Prison, Madrid, 27-12-1904."

The cablegram which the writer of the letter asks the recipient to send, is as follows:

"Antonio Palme,
"Santa Engracia 68,
"Madrid,
"Accepted.
"————."

The gentleman who received the letter saw through the scheme at once and refused to fall into the plot so cleverly set for him, and gave it to the Examiner, in order that any others who might receive letters might be on their guard, and not be induced by promises of large returns, to send away money.

BUILDING UP ONTARIO

Large Influx of Settlers—Advance Party of Germans.

It is evident from the correspondence received by Mr. Thomas Southworth, Director of Colonization, that there will be a considerable influx of settlers into New Ontario this year. An advance party of six Germans, who have gone into the Wabigoon District, to make preparations, for twenty-four of their fellow countrymen from the United States and Germany, who want to take up land in the spring. Numerous applications from people now settled in Temiskaming for railway certificates for their friends, who intend coming out from England in the spring, indicate that there will be an important movement from the old land towards the rich clay belt of New Ontario in the spring.

TO-MORROW NIGHT'S GREAT HOCKEY GAME

It Will be a Battle Royal Between Lindsay and Peterborough.

There should be doings to-morrow night at the Brock street rink when the return game between Peterborough and Lindsay will be played. Last night in Port Perry that team defeated Lindsay by 4—2. So that in the three games already played in this district the local team has made decidely the best showing. Lindsay supporters, however, are confident of a victory to-morrow night, and on the strength of this will bring a special train and a big crowd of rooters to help their team along.

The locals have had some good practices since Monday's game and will be in good condition to-morrow night. Graham will be in the game again and no doubt one of the fastest games ever seen here will be that of to-morrow night.

CANADA CATTLE EMBARGO.

Irish Leaders See Danger to Cattle Trade of Ireland.

London, Jan. 11.—(C. A. P.)—The proposed admission of Canadian store cattle into Great Britain is still the foremost topic for Irish cattle associations and societies. At a committee meeting of the South of Ireland Irish Cattle Trade Association, letters from J. E. Redmond and William O'Brien were read. Redmond said the Irish party was quite active to the importance of the affair and would watch any attempt to introduce Canadian store cattle. O'Brien said he fully recognized the ruinous consequences for Ireland in the rumored removal of the restrictions on Canadian cattle. It would be corrupt to bribe Canada to enter into Chamberlain's schemes.

An Easy Way to Cure Splitting Headaches.

If headache sufferers would do a little hard thinking, they would surely learn that headaches of all kinds are simply results—warning signals—of far more serious trouble. Usually headache means that the blood and nerves are poisoned by an inactive and sluggish liver. Don't become one of the habitual headache sufferers, who explain their condition by saying, "Oh, I am subject to headaches. I always get headache if I get excited, or it is too noisy." There is no need of it, either. Stop taking headache powders and powerful drugs that may relieve, but leave you in worse condition in the end. Put your liver in good shape, so that it will carry off foul secretions and remove properly the bile elements from the blood. Use Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills and you won't have headache. Why? Just because these little pills are Nature's true laxative, and a positive cure for a torpid liver. They assist digestion, unload the bile ducts and cure headache by first removing the cause. Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills cure headache, constipation and biliousness in one night. Price 25 cents at dealers.

JOINT HIGH COMMISSION.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier's Reply Decisive to Senator Fairbanks.

New York, Jan. 11.—The New York Times' Washington correspondent says: "Earnest efforts of Senator Fairbanks, chairman of the American representation on the Joint High Commission, to secure a re-assembling of that Commission to discuss Canadian reciprocity and other subjects, have met with signal failure, Sir Wilfrid Laurier having finally advised the Vice-President-elect that it would be impossible for the Commission to recouvene.

"The Canadian Government rejects every overture looking to a re-establishment of reciprocity in trade relations. The official announcement of the effort and its failure will be made public from the White House at an early date, together with the correspondence which has passed between Mr. Fairbanks and Sir Wilfrid Laurier."

Scheme Is Not Abandoned.

It is admitted that no meeting of the British American Joint High Commission will be held before March 4. It is explicitly denied by prominent officials that the proposed arrangement of reciprocal trade relations between the United States and Canada through the Joint High Commission has been abandoned. It has only been postponed.

PECURIAR LICENSE CASE.

James Haverson Invites Prosecution of a Galt Hotelman.

Galt, Jan. 11.—That it is not an offence under the License Act of Ontario to keep open bar for the sale of non-intoxicants on the polling day of any municipal or Parliamentary election was affirmed yesterday by Lawyer James Haverson, legal adviser of the licensed victuallers of Ontario, in connection with the case of a Galt hotel-keeper who opened his bar and sold "soft stuff" on the occasion of the late municipal polling day.

Mr. Haverson points out that the act only prohibits the sale of liquor on such days, not the keeping open of the licensed premises. He says he dares License Inspector Knowles of this riding to prosecute the hotel-keeper in question. The fact that the inspector has not gone on with the case indicates that he is duly impressed with the point raised.

Mr. Knowles yesterday said that he had submitted the matter to his superiors, adding that, if the open bar be allowed, then good-by to "the peace and order of the provincial polling day.

TO HEAR MR. BORDEN

Conservative Leader's Resignation Was Not Accepted.

WANT PERSONAL INTERVIEW

Will Tell Him the Reasons Why His Resignation Was Not Accepted At An Adjourned Caucus to Be Held At the Earliest Possible Moment—Message Delivered, But No Reply Yet.

Ottawa, Jan. 11.—The resignation from the Conservative leadership of Mr. R. L. Borden was read at a caucus of Conservative members of Parliament and Senators last night. The caucus decided not to accept the resignation, but to ask Mr. Borden to meet his followers at an adjourned caucus to be held at the earliest possible moment. Last night's meeting took place in the old Railway Committee room and lasted nearly two hours. There were a few absentees, including Mr. E. B. Osler, who is in England.

Senator de Boucherville, one of the most venerable members of the party, occupied the chair. Letters of regret were read from various absentees, all of whom expressed very strongly their desire that Mr. Borden should retain the leadership. Mr. George Taylor read Mr. Borden's letter of resignation as follows:

Mr. Borden's Letter.

To the Conservative Members of the Senate and the House of Commons:

Assembled in caucus four years ago, you bestowed upon me the highest mark of your confidence, when you required me to undertake the arduous duty and grave responsibility of leading the party in the House of Commons. To the best of my ability I have endeavored ever since to justify that confidence and gratefully acknowledge how much you have done to strengthen my hands; and I am deeply sensible that without your loyal and generous aid freely accorded on all occasions, my task would have been infinitely more onerous.

We still firmly believe that the policy which we advocated and the principles which we upheld in the recent contest were truly in the best interests of Canada, and although we may regret temporary defeat, yet we do not for one moment regret the stand which we took upon the great questions of the day. Under the conditions which have ensued, it is necessary that you shall choose another leader.

My resignation has already been given informally. I now place it unreservedly in your hands with every assurance of my hearty co-operation in the ranks of the party. Let me add that the happy remembrance of your loyal support and comradeship will always abide with me.

Faithfully yours,
(Signed) R. L. Borden.
Halifax, Jan. 7, 1905.

Declined to Accept Resignation.

It was at once moved by Hon. John Haggart and seconded by Dr. Roche that caucus decline to accept the resignation and that Mr. Borden be requested to attend an adjourned meeting of caucus to hear his supporters' reasons for desiring to retain his services. Both the mover and the seconder referred in eulogistic terms to Mr. Borden. Speeches along the same line were made by Col. Sam Hughes, McCarthy of Calgary, Cockshutt of Brantford, Dr. Chisholm of East Huron, Dr. Sproule, Mr. Ames of Montreal, Claude Macdonnell of Toronto, Sir Mackenzie Bowell and Dr. Stockton of St. John. The resolution was unanimously carried.

Hon. George E. Foster then moved that Senator Deboucherville, Mr. Foster, Dr. Roche, Senator Perley, Mr. Wilmott (Queen's, Sunbury), Mr. Monk, Mr. McCarthy, Mr. Lefurgey and Mr. Taylor be appointed a committee to send a telegraphic message to R. L. Borden, conveying to him the decision of caucus, and requesting him to meet the adjourned meeting at the earliest possible moment. This resolution was also carried unanimously.

Mr. Foster Temporary Leader.

It was moved by Horace Bergeron and seconded by Dr. Sproule that pending the return of the leader to the House of Commons the senior Privy Councillor in the party should lead the Opposition. As Mr. Foster is senior Privy Councillor, the duties of temporary leader will fall on him. John Haggart is some three months the junior of Mr. Foster as Privy Councillor.

Caucus adjourned to be called at the will of the chairman.

The following is the telegraphic message which was despatched to Mr. Borden last night:

"Caucus of Conservative Senators and members unanimously decline to accept your resignation of leadership, and in the name of the party in the Senate, the House of Commons and the party throughout the Dominion respectfully request you to retain it. We desire you to attend an adjourned meeting of caucus at Ottawa at the earliest possible moment."

This telegram was signed by all the members of the committee.

Delivered, But No Reply.

Halifax, Jan. 11.—The telegram from the Ottawa caucus offering the leadership to Mr. R. L. Borden was delivered to him at his residence after midnight. He did not send a reply, but will undoubtedly accept today, and announce that he will take up his residence in Ottawa. It is understood that he has already made preparations to remove from Halifax in anticipation of resuming the leadership.

11 PERISHED, 7 SAVED

Norwegian Ship Marpesia Blown Into the Air.

HAD A CARGO OF NAPHTHA

Leaked and Gas Exploded in the Hold, and Wrapped Ship in Flames—The Seven Ultimately Saved Threw Themselves Over the Side of the Flaming Ship Into the Sea.

New York, Jan. 11.—Seven survivors of the ill-fated Norwegian ship Marpesia, which was wrecked at sea on Christmas Day arrived here yesterday on the steamer Trinidad. They had been rescued by the Danish steamer Gallia, which was at hand when the Marpesia was blown into a shapeless mass and the seven men who survived the shock were taken from the sea. They were landed at Bermuda by the Gallia, which was bound from Hamburg for Savannah. The Marpesia sailed from New York for Cette, France, on Dec. 9, with a cargo of naphtha and had been out only a day or two when her troubles began. One gale succeeded another, but all were weathered until Dec. 17, when the ship was battered and knocked about, her ventilators carried away at the decks, her hold began to fill and soon the cases of naphtha began to give way under the strain, and in a little while the freed naphtha was floating around on top of the water in the hold. Gas from the fluid accumulated steadily and by Christmas Day the Marpesia was a loaded bomb, needing only the slightest spark to blow the whole structure to atoms. How the spark reached the highly charged hold never will be known, but suddenly there came a terrible report, the forward deck shot up into the air with a crash and a roar and in a moment the entire ship was wrapped in flames. Those of the eighteen men on board who had not been caught in the first burst threw themselves over the side of the flaming ship into the sea. They were only seven. The Gallia came down to their aid.

Crew Barely Escaped.

St. John's, Nfld., Jan. 11.—The American schooner Landseer has been sunk in the Bay of Islands. Her crew barely escaped with their lives. The schooner Robert Mason, coal laden, was sunk at St. Pierre in the same gale. The schooner Albion was driven from her moorings at St. Joseph's and probably will be a total loss. The crews of the last two vessels are safe.

Caught in Main Gears.

East Angus, Que., Jan. 11.—John E. Cameron, mechanical foreman of the mills here, and a highly esteemed resident, was caught in the main gears of the paper mill yesterday afternoon and instantly killed.

Alderman in a Runaway.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 11.—In a runaway on Henry avenue yesterday afternoon Ald. Moses Finkelstein, received a severe shaking up. Each of his sons, Manley and Kenneth, aged 4 and 6, had a leg broken, and Samuel Coppleman of Moosomin received a scalp wound.

Croup Comes Suddenly.

HENCE THE WISDOM OF KEEPING IN THE HOUSE THE MOST EFFECTIVE CURE,

DR. CHASE'S SYRUP of LINSEED AND TURPENTINE

Slight hoarseness in the evening is the only warning of croup.

About midnight the child awakes—coughing—that peculiar metallic cough called croupy, which strikes terror to the mother's heart.

Then begins the struggle for breath, and if relief is to be obtained treatment must be prompt and effective.

Anyone who has tested Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine as a cure for croup will not hesitate to pronounce it an unqualified success.

It is wonderfully prompt in loosening the cough, clearing the air passages of the head, and soothing the excited nerves.

People who realize the suddenness with which croup comes on, and the danger which accompanies it, usually keep some of Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine in the house for use in case of emergency.

For bronchitis, whooping cough, asthma, and every form of throat and bronchial trouble, this great family medicine is a quick and certain cure.

Mrs. E. H. Robinson, Harpersville, Kent Co., Ont., writes:—"My husband and baby had very bad colds and coughs, and seeing Dr. Chase's Linseed and Turpentine advertised I decided to try it. The result was highly satisfactory, as both were promptly cured."

Dr. Chase's Syrup of Linseed and Turpentine, 25 cents a bottle, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Company, Toronto. To protect you against imitations, the portrait and signature of Dr. A. W. Chase, the famous receipt book author, are on every box.

The Substitute

"That's so, George," she shuddered, "but my heart aches for 'im. He wasn't treated right, my boy. It turned out jest like I thought it mought. The doctors up thar said his grim'nal acts all come 'from that old hurt in his head. After his death they made an examination. They found 'at a splinter o' the skull had been workin' into his brain all them years since his fall off'n the wagon. It finally formed a abscess that killed 'im. Oh, the doctors raised a big fuss about it! They told me yore pa had been treated wuss'n a dog. They said what he done in violation o' the law was caused by the hurt in his head an' that he'd never 'a' touched a thing that wasn't his but fer that, an' when I told 'em how honorable all yore pa's folks had always been away back as fur as anybody could trace an' how hard you was strivin' to live the disgrace down they all got together an' writ an' signed a paper—Mr. Hillyer's got it—testifyin' under oath that yore pa wasn't naturally a dishonest man. They say, George—an' Mr. Hillyer says he'll put it through right away—that they are a-goin' to git the legislature to exhonerate yore pa.

"Judge Moore was in the warehouse as I come by, talkin' to Mr. Hillyer, an' he come out an' tuck me by the hand, an' says he, 'Mrs. Buckley, me 'n' them twelve men made a awful mistake. An',' says he, 'ef a case like that had come up in a community whar doctors an' lawyers was up to the latest notch in new discoveries a plea of insanity would 'a' been made an' sustained. But,' says he, 'the twelve jurors will sign a paper with me, an' yore husband's name will be cleared.' Oh, George, it mighty nigh breaks my heart. I 'lowed all them years that yore pa was jest mean an' stubborn an' sech ole fuck in 'im, while the truth was he couldn't help hisse'f. It's goin' to be in all the newspapers tomorrow. Are you glad to hear it, George?"

"More than anything," was the reply in a low, husky tone.

"I hain't through yet," went on the old woman, wiping her eyes. "They all read Mr. Hillyer's letter to me about how you refused the combination to the safe, preferrin' to die ruther than give in, because you wanted to show the world you was honest, an' how you was shot down an' lay hoverin' betwixt this life an' the next, an' I never seed a set o' men more anxious to be kind to a woman in affliction. They got the idea we was needy, an' started in to collect a lot o' money, but I stopped 'em. I told 'em you wouldn't like that."

"No, I wouldn't," said George; "but I am glad they wanted to do it."

"When I got to yore pa he was too fur gone to know me," went on Mrs. Buckley. "I jest wish he had. I was so sorry fer him when I seed how thin an' wasted he was, with the prints on his pore ankles whar"—

She broke down and began to sob.

George Buckley sat up more erectly. "It's the way God, Providence or whatever it is that rules over all has of managing matters," he said, his eyes flashing rebelliously, "and, for my part, I'm tired trying to do right. What's the use? Why should that poor man fall from his wagon while honestly endeavoring to earn a living for his family, and through that accident end his life in a prison? That's his fate, while such men as Telfare"—

"Don't, don't, George!" The old woman dried her eyes. "It may all seem wrong, but it hain't—it hain't! My faith in my heavenly father is brighter 'an it ever was. I don't know exactly what it 'ud be fer, but I feel like drappin' on my knees an' thankin' 'im at this minute. My heart is full o' sadness of a certain sort, but thar's another feelin' that I can't describe. As I was comin' on in the train I got to imaginin' seein' yore pore pa up in heaven, whar I know he is, an' the fancy struck me that our Saviour holt the highest place up thar, beca'se he suffered the most to help others along, an' then the thought come that maybe up thar with the'r keen, spiritual eyes the angels had seed all the good that's growed out o' yore pa's sufferin', an' was givin' 'im credit fer his life down here. Thar's no tellin' what the good may be. Yore pa's trouble is at the bottom of all Mr. Hillyer's done fer you, all the kindness o' them men at the prison an' the sympathy that's floodin' this town right now, beca'se one man was so wrongly judged. Why, George, it may make the courts more careful in the future, it may make doctors study diseases better, an' it will make some folks ashamed fer—fer over sneerin' at the brave son o' such a man. George, thar's one heart in this town that's flowin' over with joy—ef the news has reached her"—

"Do you think so, mother?"

"Oh, I know it, George—I know it! I'd give anything to see her face when it's told to 'er. She's led by them folks o' her'n to some extent, but below all that she's jest a good, strong, sufferin' woman."

George made no answer. They were both silent for several minutes, then Mrs. Buckley rose to leave. "I want to go out home," she said. "It will be sad, too, lookin' round the old place whar he used to be. Now he's gone, I don't seem to remember anything but the good, sweet things he used to do an' say before his affliction. He's buried up thar, George, but after he's vindicated, we'll bring him down here an' put 'im away whar he belongs."

CHAPTER XXXIV.

THE next morning at breakfast, while Hillyer sat sipping his coffee his wife stood near his chair.

"It's time I played my last card," she was saying. "I tell you thar's some mistake. I don't believe Lydia Cranston would let that pore boy lie upstairs an' suffer without one word from her at sech a time—a time when the whole town an' county is a-talkin' about his manliness an' bravery an' the wrong done his daddy. That hain't like a woman one bit. Not one woman in ten thousand would stay quiet at such a time without some strong reason."

"Well, what are you goin' to do about it?" the merchant asked.

"Do? Why, I've got my case all in hand, as Mr. Trabue would 'a' said. The evidence is all in, an' it will have weight when I sum it up. I'm simply a-goin' to them weevil eaten aristocrats an' have it out with 'em, one way or t'other."

"You say you are?"

"Yes, I am. I know human natur', an' I'm not afeard to risk my judgment. I'm a-goin' to take that letter George writ to you the night he was shot—oh, yes, I am; you needn't raise a kick about that. It is admitted as evidence, an' strong evidence at that. Then I'm a-goin' to tell 'em what me 'n' you have agreed on. That is my trump card. It'll knock out anything they hold; now you see ef it don't. I'm goin' to give them a-talkin' to that they won't forget soon, 'an' I'll do it right, too, fer I don't expect to tell anything but the truth. Ef Lydia Cranston has engaged 'erself to that stuck up bump on a rotten log, she'll have the satisfaction o' knowin' that thar's one woman in the land that knows whar she's driv 'er ducks."

Hillyer rose, with a smile. "Well, maybe you kin sorter bring 'em to the'r senses, an' I say go it. I lost control o' myself t'other day an' give the old major a piece o' my mind, an' he mought as well git t'other half from you. I wish you luck. Ef you fail, it will be about the fust time you've missed fire since I've knowed you. I reckon it won't kill 'im. Mrs. Dugan says the New York doctor found 'im as sound as a dollar."

About 10 o'clock Mrs. Hillyer went down to Cranstons'. She was attired in her best black silk gown and flowered bonnet, and she walked with a firm, decided tread. She was invited by the maidservant at the door into the sitting room, where Cranston sat before an open window, looking out into the balmy spring sunshine. His wife was near him, and Lydia had just come in with a glass of claret punch and stood stirring it at his side. They all greeted her pleasantly, and Lydia seemed somewhat surprised at the unexpected visit, for it occurred to her quick powers of observation that, while George Buckley lay ill at the Hillyers' and right upon the news of his father's death and public exoneration, a call from Mrs. Hillyer was, to say the least, extraordinary. So Lydia's face became rigidly expectant as she seated herself and endeavored to participate calmly in the platitudes that her mother, with her usual tact, managed to set going.

"I was powerful glad to hear," said Mrs. Hillyer to the major, "that the New York specialist made a favorable report on yore case."

"Yes; he took quite a load of worry off my mind, thank you, madam." The major always addressed ladies as "madam" whom he did not specially like. It was a way he had of leaving the impression that he might or might not remember their names. In the same way he frequently greeted certain men whom he considered beneath him socially with a vague "How do you do, sir?" However, his formality of speech today had little effect on the visitor. If he had called her by her given name, without a prefix, she would not have spoken what was on her mind any sooner.

"Thar's no use beatin' the devil around a bush, folkses," she began lightly. "I've come here this mornin' to do my duty as I see it, an' I hain't a-goin' to waste time. The good book says do unto others as you'd have them do unto you, an' ef I was actin' as wrong as you uns are I'd want folks to tell me of it. I'd want 'em to telegraph of they couldn't git to me right away."

The Cranstons were all staring fixedly. The warm color was rising in Lydia's face.

"Why, what's wrong, madam?" asked the major in astonishment.

"It's all about yore daughter here an' George Buckley," Mrs. Hillyer blurted out with firmness. "Them two hain't bein' treated right. It may seem like I'm takin' a lots fer granted in includin' her, but she don't look to me like a fool, an' any woman would be a fool to be adored by a man like she is by George Buckley an' not want to treat 'im with common decency."

Lydia started to speak as she drew herself up more erectly, but her father prevented it.

"I trust you will pardon me, madam," he said, "for frankly saying that the subject isn't agreeable to us."

"Oh, yo're excusable," said the caller. "I wouldn't hold that agin you, but it won't hurt you to git down to rock bottom facts. I believe yo're tryin' to keep yore pure hearted daughter from doin' what's right, an' to persuade 'er to do what she'll regret. Thar hain't but one man on the topside o' God's green globe today that she ort to marry, an' that man is George Buckley. An' what have you got agin him now, I'd like to know? After seein' all that pitiful account in the papers of the wrong done his old father, you cayn't shake that in the pore, wounded boy's face. You cayn't say he's a coward, as they say about the lordly governor o' this state. You cayn't say he's a bankrupt an' a spendthrift, like they say about Telfare. Nur you cayn't accuse George Buckley o' resortin' to low political tricks to advance his interests, an' "—

"Madam," the major broke in, raising his thin hand protestingly, "I must beg you"—

"Don't beg me, Major Cranston," bridled on the woman, her eyes flashing, her bosom heaving excitedly, as she leaned forward, her elbows on her knees. "I've come here to talk, an' I will be heard. I want Lydia to hear more than I do you, fer I believe she'll act. She's been blinded, that gal has, or she's a unnatural woman, one of t'other, fer no woman made on the right plan would let things go jest like they are a-goin' an' never chirp a word agin it. Lydia Cranston"—she turned to the staring, wondering girl—"did you hear about a certain letter George Buckley wrote my husband jest before he thought he was goin' to be shot by them robbers?"

"I heard he wrote something, some instructions to Mr. Hillyer," replied the girl in an unsteady voice, "something about what the men had demanded, but that's all father told me. I haven't been out of the house since we got back from Atlanta."

"Well, le' me tell you some'n'," went on Mrs. Hillyer. "Thar hain't a woman today in all America—an' I'm no exception—that knows, actually knows, she's loved enough by a man to be in his last thoughts when he's expectin' every second to meet a horrible death. I've got that letter in my hand. I did intend to read it to you, but I won't, fer it's too sacred. But I'll tell you that the pore boy was bothered by jest one thought in that awful moment, an' that was that the woman he loved an' wanted to care fer was to be left to marry a worthless man. He begged Mr. Hillyer to ax 'er not to do it. Ef George had 'a' died that ud 'a' been his message from the grave. I wonder if"—

Lydia Cranston had risen to her feet and stood bending toward the impassioned speaker, her great, beautiful eyes distended.

"Did—did he write that, Mrs. Hillyer?" she cried. "Oh, did he?"

"Not only that," replied Mrs. Hillyer, "but he has laid thar in my house ever since, pinin' fer a word, a message, a line from the woman he loved, but not a thing come. I got to lookin' fer it, too, fer I 'lowed I'd made no mistake in sizin' the woman up, an' t'other day, when a big bunch o' roses come fer 'im with a pote, I actually run up to his room with 'em, I was so glad. I knowed whar they growed, an', like a fool, I told 'im they was from the right source. His pore, pale face flushed all over. But when he opened the note it was from somebody else. His lip jest sagged down an' jerked as he tol' me I was mistaken in the pusson that had sent them. My Lord! I was hoppin' mad then! Say, what are you uns, anyway, that you kin hold yoreselves aloof from sech a man at sech a time? Even ef you did intend to balk the marriage you could 'a' treated 'im like a human bein', stricken in upholdin' his honor an' protectin' the rights o' other people."

"Mrs. Hillyer"—Lydia drew herself up to her full height, her startled eyes bearing down on the caller—"do you mean to say that George Buckley has not had a letter from me since he was wounded?"

"I certainly do, Miss Lydia."

Then the girl turned to Mrs. Cranston, taking a step toward her in her eagerness. "Mother," she said fiercely, "you took my letters away from Jane. I saw you talking to her."

"Why, daughter, I"—

"Did you do it?" the girl demanded sharply. "Did you?"

Mrs. Cranston hesitated and then said falteringly, her eyes on the carpet: "You were so unduly wrought up and excited by—by the report of the shooting that really I—I"—

"Mother," Lydia interrupted her, "you have gone too far. You had no right under heaven to act as you did. It was a crime, considering his condition and—my feelings. Mrs. Hillyer, is Hortense at home?"

"Yes, she's thar, Miss Lydia."

"Well, I'm going to explain to George, and I'm going now," Lydia said. "He shan't wait one minute longer to know how I feel and how I've felt all along. You have done everything on earth to make me untrue to my better self, mother, and at last resorted to actual dishonesty. I'll never marry the man you want me to—never!" With that the girl turned quickly from the room.

CHAPTER XXXV.

MRS. CRANSTON followed Lydia into the sitting room, where she was putting on her hat before a mirror.

"You will not compromise yourself by going there, dear?" Mrs. Cranston said excitedly.

"You may call it that if you like," retorted the girl, turning as she was thrusting a hatpin into place behind her head. "I am going to explain why he has not heard from me."

"Oh, daughter, don't, don't! Think of your family, of me, of your father."

"I'll think of you when I have more time," replied the girl. "I'm going straight to George Buckley now. Mother, I respect him. I honor him more than any man alive. I—love him. Yes, I love him with all my heart and soul, and I'm simply furious at the way you have treated us."

"You don't mean that you would actually marry him, Lydia Cranston!"

"Well, you just let him give me the chance and see if I won't. I'd rather live on bread and water with him than with the richest man the sun ever shone on. There, are you satisfied? You and father have been treating me like a child, with no regard for my feelings, but now that you have dared to interfere through me with George Buckley's rights as an American citizen, intercepting his letters when he lay at death's door, treating him as if he were a dog—well, you have simply forced me to do my duty."

"Lydia, daughter"— But the girl had turned into the hall and was walking rapidly across the lawn toward the gate.

She went directly to Hillyer's house. Hortense was in the yard gathering flowers and greeted her with a surprised smile as she came toward her across the grass.

GRIN AND BEAR IT.

People with pleasant temperaments are easily imposed upon by men as well as nature. Very frequently we see this genial sort of people tied down with severe attacks of Rheumatism or Neuralgia and they grin and bear it as though they enjoyed their predicament. They are content to let things take their course and do not realise that this disease will undermine their whole system and shorten their lives by many years. Relatives and friends should intercede and insist that these satisfied suicides take immediate treatment with the great

South American Rheumatic Cure

It gives instant relief and we have records of effective cures in two to three days.

Mrs. John Beaumont, Elora, Ont., writes—"For fifteen years I had been troubled with rheumatism. I was discouraged and had given up hope, when I was recommended to try South American Rheumatic Cure. In one week from the time I commenced to use it I was completely cured."

Build up your nervous system, use South American Nervine Tonic. It is the purest remedy for nervous diseases.

Let go or die. That's the alternative of the shipwrecked man with the money bags. A great many people have a like alternative before them. Business men come to a point where the doctor tells them that they must "let go or die." Probably he advised a sea voyage or mountain air. There's an obstinate cough that won't be shaken off. The lungs are weak and perhaps bleeding. There is emaciation and other symptoms of disease, which if unskilfully or improperly treated terminate in consumption.

Thousands of men and women in a like condition have found complete healing by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"It gives me pleasure to send you this testimonial so that some other poor sufferer may be saved, as I was, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Geo. A. Thompson, of Station Ave., Chatham, Ont., Canada. "I had a cough for years, expectorated a great deal, and was slowly failing. Was losing flesh every day. Lost in weight from 160 pounds down to 128. My flesh got soft and I had no strength. Did not see anything to any one but made up my mind that the end was not far off. One day my wife was reading in the 'Common Sense Medical Adviser' about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I said, that sounds more like common sense than anything else that I had heard. So she brought a bottle of your remedy right away and before I had taken half of one bottle I felt better. Took thirteen bottles and it made a new man of me. I gained sixteen pounds and never have had a cough since. I feel splendid and give all the credit to your medicine."

Given away. The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. The book contains 1008 pages, over 700 illustrations and several colored plates. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-bound book, or 31 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure bad breath, sour stomach and constipation and so help to cure nearly every disease of man. They regulate, tone up and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

BLOOD POISON

On account of its terrible effects, blood disease is called the king of all diseases. It may be either hereditary or contracted; so while it may not be a crime to have the disease, it is a crime to permit it to remain in the system. It may manifest itself in the form of Scrofula, Eczema, rheumatic pains, stiff or swollen joints, itchiness of the skin, eruptions or blotches, ulcers in the mouth or on the tongue, sore throat, falling out of hair, disordered stomach, and a general depression of the system. If you have any of these symptoms don't neglect yourself. You have no time to lose. Beware of "old fogy" treatment—beware of mineral poisons—beware of Quacks and Fakirs. OUR NEW METHOD TREATMENT is guaranteed to cure this disease, never to return. Bank Bonds will protect you. Our treatment is not injurious in any way, but reaches the very root of the disease and eliminates all poison from the system. The symptoms of disease gradually disappear. The blood becomes pure and enriched, the whole system is cleansed and purified, and the patient feels prepared anew for the duties and the pleasures of life. SAYS CANADIANS HAVE TO LEARN

Woollen Manufacturers Here, do not Make Best use of Materials.

Their cry for More Protection not one of Merit—Difference in wages met by Present Protection.

(Canadian Associated Cables.)

London, Jan. 10. — The Manchester Guardian, discussing "Woollen manufacturing in Canada," says, "nothing that can be said now is in the least likely to change the obvious intentions of the Canadian woollen manufacturers. Their conclusion is virtually foregone, and we are to anticipate on Prof. Flux's estimates a loss to the market for woollen goods to the annual value of 250,000 to 500,000 pounds." Referring to wages, the Guardian says, "To keep good work people in Ontario it is necessary to pay wages approximating those ruling in the United States. Thus the Canadian manufacturer manufacturer must pay 50 or 60 per cent. more in wages than the Yorkshire manufacturers. Otherwise there is no serious discrepancy between the positions of the two, and the 30 per cent. tax, plus ocean freight and commissions, ought to neutralize the labour handicap of the Canadians. On these terms the Canadian has a fair field in which to show his mettle and the cry for more protection sounds too much like a confession of incompetence, and that is the case. Canadian protection is not technically equal to English; the machines not having been maintained at the English standard of output, nor have the operatives learned to make the best use of woollen manufacturers. In particular, have Canadians failed to make judicial use of wool wastes in yarn spinning; in weaving they have not employed the infinite variety of cloth structures that are employed in Yorkshire; they have something to learn in the niceties of cloth-finishing."

WIDE SCOPE OF Y.M.C.A. WORK

Interesting Resume of the Work and Methods.

An Association With Which Local Persons Were Identified is Described.

To many people not actively engaged in the work, the real nature of the Young Men's Christian Association is little known. To those the following facts, taken from the Sault Ste. Marie News, and referring generally to the work as a whole, and particularly to the work in that town, with which Mr. H. A. Pearson, formerly of Peterborough, was associated as secretary, and Mr. T. H. Hutchinson, the present Boys' Secretary here, was also identified with for some time, will be read with considerable local interest:—

The association has for its object the moral and physical improvement of young men. Young men are largely influenced by their associations and give way to popular attractions. Thus it is that the promoters of the Y.M.C.A. have endeavoured to provide an attraction which will allow of elevating influences which is the main feature of the association.

The association rooms provide a place where young men can go and enjoy themselves without being subjected to influences of a doubtful kind.

The Y.M.C.A. is a world wide institution, as far reaching as the greatest of the secret organizations.

A member who obtains privileges in any branch of the association is allowed the same privileges in any other part of the world, without further charge. It is non-sectarian and open to all who abide by the rules.

The head of Y.M.C.A. work on this continent is the committee at New York. This committee publishes the organ of the association, "Association Men." It controls the paid men, whose duties are to perfect old methods, stimulate new interest and in other ways advance the interests of the cause.

They exercise no direct authority over any individual association, as each local body is independent, but act merely in an advisory capacity. They are maintained by voluntary subscriptions from the associations alone with work in America, but has started missionary work in foreign fields, which is meeting with great success. One of the greatest helps it offers to the work at large is the "watch" it keeps for good men for the work of secretaries, physical directors and other heads of departments.

The provincial committee is one step nearer than the International committee. It has its headquarters in Toronto. Its work is carried on along the same lines as the International Committee, though in a more limited degree. C. M. Copeland is the provincial secretary. He visits the individual associations in Ontario and Quebec and advises the general secretaries in their work, and also gives this assistance to the local boards. He assists in getting the best men possible to take up the work of the association. The provincial committee has organized schools of instruction with summer and winter terms to prepare men for the duties of secretaries and physical directors.

The work of a Y.M.C.A. is under the control and management of a board of directors. In the Soo the directors number fifteen, being representative men from the different denominations. The president and the officers are elected from the fifteen and hold office for one year. The directors have authority to engage the general secretary and they attend to the finances. The funds are raised from the membership fees, which are $5 for full and $2 for limited privileges per annum and voluntary subscriptions. The voluntary subscriptions usually come from those who feel that the work of the association is an indirect help to them such as business firms that employ young men who by becoming members of the association are kept away from influences that degrade and unfit a man for his work. They feel that they owe the association moral and financial support and usually respond most heartily to the calls for help.

The work has been going on in the Soo for about four years and although it has accomplished much in that time great difficulties have been encountered on account of the financial depression that the town suffered from up to a few months ago. Two years ago when matters began to shape themselves nicely in the association and the membership had attained a high mark the works closed and about 100 members left the town which, added to the fact that the remaining members were overburdened with church and other religious duties greatly handicapped the success of the association.

The main departments of the association rooms are the parlour and reading room. The reading room is furnished with the daily papers and magazines and other current literature of the highest class. The equipment of the bath rooms consists of both shower and tub baths.

The gymnasium is equipped with complete athletic apparatus. One of the active members who has had considerable training here and elsewhere has taken charge of the physical work among the men who devote three evenings each week to exercise and instruction. A business men's class is held twice a week, in the afternoons and there are also junior classes in the afternoon. The latter two are under the direction of the general secretary. The physical work is much enjoyed by all who take it and results in great benefit to them.

To encourage the social element among the members a glee club has been organized under the leadership of one of the members of the association who is particularly qualified for such work. It has proved not only enjoyable but profitable. The orchestra has also attained a high standard of efficiency.

The work of the association has not been confined to the members alone. The board of directors decided in the early fall to do something to make the lives of the men in the lumber camps more pleasant and consequently they have adopted the plan of sending out parcels of good reading matter. Already this year nearly 1,200 magazines and periodicals have been distributed to the men in fourteen camps, mostly along the Algoma Central railway. Previous to the close of navigation the Michipicoten mines were on the circulation lists.

The triangle is the emblem of the association and stands for the all round man, a man developed in spirit, mind and body. So far it has shown how the mind and body of the men have been taken care of in the Y.M.C.A., but the spiritual part is not forgotten.

KEENE LOST TO CAMPBELLFORD

Were Defeated at Home Last Night by Score of 8—9

Keene, Jan. 11th.—Keene lost their first game in the Trent Valley League series last night (Tuesday) to Campbellford by a score of 7-4. The game was not particularly fast, neither teams appeared to be in very good condition. The Keene boys played a very poor combination while the Campbellford players, although playing a better combination, were a little slow and were deficient in shooting. A good deal of rough play was indulged in by both teams, especially in the second half. The score at half-time was 5-3 in Keene's favour, but during the second half Keene was only able to find the Campbellford nets once while Campbellford scored four goals.

Michael Purdue	103
Timothy Crough	98
Samuel Killen...	96
Michael O'Connor	93

OPENING GAME IN GUILD HOCKEY LEAGUE

George and Charlotte St. Guilds Played Tie Game Last Night.

The opening game in the Guild Hockey League was played last evening on All Saints rink between George Street and Charlotte Street Guilds and resulted in a tie, each team scoring one goal. The heavy snowfall rendered good stick handling out of the question and the play was not as good as would have been the case had the ice been free from snow. The teams, as the score would indicate, were evenly matched. Both teams have some strong players on their line-up and there should be some fast material developed. The tie will be played off shortly. The teams were:—

Barrie's "Bedellas" won a notable victory last night at the Brock street rink when they defeated Hickey's "Terriers" by a score of 8-4. Reports say that the game was terribly fast and all that sort of thing and no one will doubt this for an instant. It is also whispered that the winners, despite the fact that several of their shining stars were laid aside on beds of sickness, are a great aggregation and had the best of the conflict throughout. At half time, the score board amounted to 4-0 in favour of the Bedellas. The teams lined up something like this:—

HOCKEY.

Lindsay's defeat at Port Perry last night makes things decidedly interesting in this district and goes to show that the defeat of the locals in Georgetown on Monday was hardly merited and the homesters are determined to reverse things here to-morrow night. Lindsay and Peterborough were always old-time rivals and no doubt one of the largest crowds in years will witness to-morrow night's game. The locals will have Graham on the team again and are confident of a victory. It will be a great game and no one should miss it.

The Mill Hockey Team of the Cereal Mill entertained their office team to a banquet at McCallums last evening. The office team recently scored a victory over the mill septette and the latter were repaying the compliment. A most enjoyable evening was spent.

Roy D. Schooley, of Pittsburg, in a special to the Toronto Star says of Jack Winchester:—

"Jack Winchester had stage fright the first night, but on Saturday showed his class, and he became a great favourite with the crowd, notwithstanding the fact that "The Knockers' Club," composed of has-beens, was out in force, and threw it into him on every occasion. Calumet play again on Monday, but more of that anon.

The Young Nationals added another decisive victory to their string on Monday evening, when they played a runaway game with the Rough Riders, at the Brock street rink. RECTOR ENTERTAINS CHOIR MEMBERS

Delightful Evening Enjoyed by Members of All Saints' Choir.

Last night the members of All Saints' choir were entertained at the residence of the rector, Rev. Wm. Major, and a most delightful evening was spent. Several members of the choir sang a number of solos, and duets and quartettes, as well as chorus numbers, were also given during the evening.

About thirty-five were present, and after a delightful hour or two had been spent with games and music refreshments were served, and the gathering dispersed at midnight.

A LOCAL FIRM'S PRETTY CALENDAR

Messrs. The Peter Hamilton Co. Ltd. Surpass Former Efforts

The Peter Hamilton Co., Ltd., is now distributing to any customers of the firm who ask for them, copies of their beautiful calendar for 1905. Past efforts of the firm to secure effective and striking calendars for their many customers have been surpassed by their achievement of this year. They have been designed specially for this firm and, as is natural, the illustration done in natural colours depicts, a farm scene, in which two of the Company's implements are shown. The Calendar is one which will give pleasure to the recipient, and all patrons of the Company are invited to call at the office when in town and procure a copy.

OPENING OF THE NEW PARLIAMENT

First Session of Tenth Parliament Opened by Earl Grey—Speech From the Throne—Measures Forthcoming—Provincial Autonomy for the Northwest Provinces—Canada's Attractions to Immigrants—Progress of Trade and Commerce—Commission on Waterways—Large Surplus

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—The outdoor ceremonies at the opening of the first session of the tenth Parliament yesterday afternoon were robbed of much of their accustomed brilliancy by dull weather. The expiring efforts of a heavy storm were witnessed early in the day. Parliament Hill is deep in snow, and the horses of the Governor's cavalry escort laboriously plowed their way through it to the main entrance of the House of Commons. Drawn up in front of the tower was a guard of honor from the Foot Guards. The band played a few bars of the national anthem as His Excellency, accompanied by Lady Grey and daughters, descended from the sleigh in which they had driven from Rideau Hall.

Guns Boom Royal Salute.

At the same moment guns on Nepean Point began to boom out a royal salute. The Governor-General was attended by Colonel Hanbury-Williams, Secretary, and Lord Bury, Capt. Trotter and Capt. Newton, A. D.C.'s, and received by a military council consisting of General Lake, Cols. Macdonald, Cotton and Vidal, and the Inspector-General, Lord Aylmer, all in scarlet and gold-lace uniforms. A procession was formed, and amid much clanking of swords and spurs, proceeded to the Senate Chamber, where His Excellency seated himself on the Throne, Her Excellency and the Ladies Grey taking seats on the left. The Senate Chamber resembled a huge bed of vari-colored flowers. To the right and left were ladies in full dress, their gowns, representing every imaginable hue. Above in the dress gallery were other ladies in radient costumes. Around the Throne, where the military staff was grouped, scarlet and gold were the predominating colors.

His Excellency's Speech.

The Commoners having been summoned, His Excellency delivered the speech from the Throne, as follows:

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I desire on this occasion to assure you how sensible I am of the great honor conferred on me by the King in appointing me to the distinguished position of Governor-General. My pleasure in being called upon to represent His Majesty in the Dominion has been heightened by the cordial welcome I have received on all sides and from all classes. This favored land, with its vast resources and improving facilities for transportation, is attracting people on an ever ascending scale, not only from the United Kingdom, but also from the United States, and from other countries. As the opportunities for settlement under the advantageous conditions which exist are better known, this Dominion will become the home of an increasing number of happy and contented people, whose character and prosperity will add strength to the great Empire of which you are so important a part.

Trade and Revenue.

It is gratifying to note that the trade of the Dominion, which in recent years has so steadily increased, is not diminishing, the aggregate trade for the last fiscal year being the largest on record. The revenue for the past six months is also greater than for the corresponding period of the preceding year.

International Waterways.

On the invitation of the President of the United States, my Government has joined in the formation of an international commission composed of three representatives from each country to investigate and report upon the conditions and uses of the waters adjacent to the boundary line between the United States and Canada, and to make such recommendations for improvements and regulations as shall best subserve the interest of navigation in said waters.

Territorial Autonomy.

The rapid growth in the population of the Northwest Territories during the past two years justifies the wisdom of conferring on these Territories Provincial autonomy. A bill for that purpose will be submitted for your consideration.

The Transcontinental Surveys.

The surveys necessary for the location of the line of the National Transcontinental Canadian Railway are being vigorously prosecuted, and it is confidently believed that tenders for the construction of several sections may be invited during the coming season.

To Exhibit in Belgium.

The display of Canadian products made last year at the St. Louis Exhibition proved such a marked success in attracting emigrants to the Western Prairies, that it is proposed to accept the invitation of the Government of Belgium to send sample of our products and manufactures to the exhibition to be shortly held at Liege.

A Surplus Once Again.

Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

The accounts of the last year will be laid before you. It will be satisfactory to you to learn that the expenditure has been less than the revenue, leading a surplus over all charges. The estimates for the coming year will be submitted at an early date. They have been prepared with a due regard for economy, consistent with the development of the resources of the Dominion.

Hon. Gentlemen of the Senate, Gentlemen of the House of Commons:

I invite your best attention to the subjects I have mentioned, and invoke the Divine blessing on your deliberations.

Ten minutes sufficed to wind up the day's proceedings in the Commons. Sir Wilfrid Laurier introduced a bill respecting the administration of oaths of office. He moved also that a committee, composed of Messrs. Foster, Mulock, Haggart, Hyman and the Premier should strike the standing committees of the House.

The speech from the Throne will be considered on Monday.

In the meantime members will enjoy a holiday.

TARIFF CHANGES ANNOUNCED.

Made By Order of Governor-in-Council On Jan. 7.

Ottawa, Jan. 13.—(Globe Special.)—A number of tariff changes have been made by Order-in-Council, dated Jan. 7. Carbons over six inches in circumference, when for use as materials in Canadian manufactures, have been transferred to list of goods which may be imported free of duty until otherwise provided. Rates of duty have been reduced on the following articles, when imported for manufacturers of burial caskets or burial robes for use in their own factories: Casket gimps or fringes and embroidered or embossed chiffon, from 35 to 10 per cent.; silk cloth, including satin, from 30 to 10 per cent. These reduction rates are subject to further reduction of one-third under the preferential tariff, or to an addition of a like amount under the surtax, if the importations of goods come under said preferential tariff or surtax.

PAID EXTREME PENALTY.

Sheriff Hayward Acts As Hangman At Execution of Thomas Cammack.

Woodstock, N. B., Jan. 13.—Just as the town clock was striking five yesterday morning, Sheriff Hayward, of Carleton County, sprung the trap which launched Thomas Cammack into eternity for the murder of William Doherty, near Glassville, on July 17.

Only about twenty people witnessed the execution, although there was a big crowd outside the temporary fence that enclosed the scaffold. This fence the curious ones threatened to tear down, and Sheriff Hayward went out with a revolver in his hand and informed the crowd that he would not stand for any nonsense. His officers arrested two of the principal disturbers and after that all was quiet.

The condemned man's prayer for strength that he could die like a man was answered. Sheriff Hayward was as cool as could be. He carefully inspected all the apparatus and paused but a moment after the last words of the Lord's Prayer had been spoken by the priest before he pulled the lever that springs the trap.

Radcliffe was unable to conduct the execution owing to having to be in British Columbia on similar duty, and the sheriff, who is approaching eighty, desired that a substitute executioner be appointed. He, however, did not flinch when the duty fell on him.

Made Lecturer At Yale.

New Haven, Conn., Jan. 13.—Ernest Rutherford, F.R.S., Macdonald professor of physics in McGill University, Montreal, has been appointed Silliman lecturer at Yale for 1905. The lectureship was established by the will of the late Augustus Ely Silliman of Brooklyn, N.Y., who died in 1884.

DEATH OF HON. CHARLES DRURY.

Sheriff of Simcoe and Was Once Ontario Minister of Agriculture.

Barrie, Jan. 13.—Hon. Chas. Drury, sheriff of the County of Simcoe, died here last night at 9.30 after an illness of several months. He, however, attended to his duties as sheriff until about two weeks ago.

Mr. Drury was Minister of Agriculture in Sir Oliver Mowat's Government, representing East Simcoe for three terms. He was appointed returning officer for that constituency in the coming elections, but the duties are being performed by his brother, Thomas Drury.

He took an active work in all philanthropic work and was closely identified with the R. V. Hospital and other similar institutions.

His only son by his first wife, was married at Crown Hill Wednesday to Miss Partridge and immediately after the ceremony drove to his father's bedside, where he and his bride remained until his father's death.

The offices were very keenly contested for last night, the members evidently considering it an honour to be elected to the high positions.

Ten candidates received Oriental light and were taught the sublime lesson of humility, after which a moon feast was partaken of.

During the evening Mr. Geo. Gilbert of Lindsay, for many years a member of Peterborough Lodge, was presented with a beautiful gold Oddfellow ring by Mr. W. Hill, on behalf of the members of Peterborough Lodge. Mr. Gilbert acknowledged the gift in a few suitable words.

CROSSING FATALITY

Two More Added to the Dutton List of Killed.

BOTH WERE M.C.R. EMPLOYES

D. C. McArthur and Archibald Carmichael Hurled a Great Distance and Terribly Mangled By a Michigan Central Train—Horse Was Cut in Two and the Cutter Was Smashed to Matchwood

Dutton, Jan. 13.—A terrible accident occurred here at noon yesterday, by which two men, D. C. McArthur and Arch. Carmichael, were instantly killed. They were driving towards the north, and while crossing the M. C.R., on Main street, were struck by No. 22 westbound express, which was going at a terrible rate. The unfortunate men apparently never saw the approaching train, for although Francis Smith warned them they paid no attention but drove on, and while on the centre of the track were struck.

The men were badly mangled, McArthur being thrown about 100 feet, and Carmichael about 80 feet. The horse was cut in two. The cutter was smashed into matchwood. This makes six killed by the trains at this crossing. The two men were in the employ of the M.C.R., and were about 45 years of age.

OVER A HIGH PRECIPICE.

One Quebec Boy Killed; Two of His Brothers May Die.

Quebec, Jan. 13.—One dead, another dying and the third so badly injured that only superhuman efforts will save his life, the three boys of Mr. Chamberlain, St. Sauveur, were found at the base of one of the cliffs near their father's home yesday afternoon. The children were aged 9, 6 and 4 years respectively and all were unconscious when found.

How long they were in that plight or how they met with the accident cannot as yet be ascertained, but it is surmised that the lads were sliding at the top of the hill, which is in the rear of the St. Foye toll gate, and were carried over the lofty precipice. It is also thought that another lad, who is supposed to have been with them, is buried in the snow drift.

ACCIDENTALLY SHOT.

Young Son of Methodist Missionary Dies in An Instant.

Parry Sound, Jan. 13.—Leslie Black, five years of age, son of Rev. Richard Black, Methodist missionary at Parry Island Indian Reserve, was accidentally shot and killed Wednesday. The boy was at a neighbor's and while in the house with another child played with a loaded gun that had been placed near the door. The gun discharged instantly killing young Leslie.

Drug Clerk Suicides.

Toronto, Jan. 13.—Seemingly in excellent health and free from any worry, Claude Bullis, a young man, employed as clerk at A. E. Walton's drug store, at the corner of Broadview avenue and Queen street, committed suicide early this morning by taking prussic acid. The young man had gone to bed about one o'clock. Bullis was 20 years of age, and came from Irequois, Ont., about six months ago.

If You Don't Buy Here We Both Lose Money

Another year has gone. It's pleasant to tell of sales far beyond all previous years, for they indicate general prosperity as well as the progress of this store. But to you such growth means more still; it tells unmistakably of the increasing attractiveness of our Fur Goods and also the drawing power of our Fur Prices. The bigger the manufacturing business the lower the cost of production, consequently "If you don't buy here we both lose money." Just now we call attention to our extra fine showing of—

Daily Examiner.

FRIDAY, JAN. 13th, 1905.

THE TRUTH OF THE MATTER

Our local contemporary, the Review, insists in not allowing Mr. Whitney to enjoy his Scotch nightcap in quiet. It reprints an article from the Ottawa Citizen, claiming to show that Mr. Whitney in buying and consuming Scotch whisky after legal hours, did not break the law. Mr. Whitney was quite within his rights if he wished to have a cup of coffee, or even something more directly stimulating after a hard night's work. And very little attention would have been paid to the matter, if his action had not been a breach of the license law, and if he, and his friends, had not insisted that he was justified as a guest in obtaining strong drink after eleven o'clock at night. The law expressly states, as the Examiner showed by printing the section yesterday, that no liquor shall be sold in any hotel after eleven o'clock, except for medical purposes, on a requisition signed by a medical practitioner or a Justice of the Peace, and no such liquor shall be consumed on the premises in prohibited hours, except by the hotel keeper, or some member of his family, or a lodger. Now while there is clear evidence that Mr. Whitney procured Scotch whisky after hours, contrary to the law, there is no evidence, nor any attempt to suggest, that he was protected by a medical certificate. This is all there is at issue. This is not a pleasant matter to refer to, but it has to be dealt with so that the truth may be known. So long as Mr. Whitney and his friends justify his action, and claim that he did not break the license law, within half an hour after he had declared in the Napanee opera house that his platform on temperance, was the rigid enforcement of the license law. If Mr. Whitney did not take his Scotch as medicine, he must "take his medicine" in regard to the criticism his action suggests.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

The Toronto Mail piously protests that where the Ontario Liberals once had Blake and Mackenzie, Mowat and Fraser, they now have Ross and Graham and Mackay. It seems to us, says the Montreal Herald, this last combination ought to satisfy even Mr. Whitney's taste for Scotch, if that is the point, and for the rest the Mail is only maligning the Liberal leaders of to-day as it used to malign the Liberal leaders whose careers it now professes to admire.

Even Jupiter sometimes nods. Last autumn the Mail and Empire was adjuring Canadians, till it was red in the face, to "keep both hands on the Union Jack." now the Mail has neglected the spirit of its own advice—and in the recent storm the flag staff from lack of the stay of "both hands" was blown down and lies prostrate. And a flag staff of such memories too! It was under the flag proudly floating from this staff that the Conservative's plot to buy up the Liberal members of the local Legislature and to put the Conservatives in power, was hatched by the "brawling brood of bribers." The flag-staff at that time showed marvellous self-control that it did not snap off short under the storm of the foulest act of political corruption and wholesale depravity, ever recorded in the annals of representative institutions.

STRIKING FINANCIAL FACTS

Regarding the Wise Administration of the Ross Government.

The Mail said, in 1900: "The Ontario Government's management of the finances has been thrifty, judicious and clean."

The Montreal Witness: "Ontario's splendid financial position has been preserved by careful, business-like, honest administration since Confederation."

The Toronto Telegram: "The financial and administrative record of the Liberal party is, on the whole, creditable. The resources of the province have been wisely handled."

In proof of the above testimonies it may be said: Ontario's annual receipts in interest would retire its total liabilities twice over.

The interest paid annually on the provincial trust funds (valued at $6,-818,788) amounts to more than sufficient to meet the entire annual payments of the province for its liabilities for railway certificates and annuities.

Out of a total appropriation of seventy millions in twenty years, the Opposition has objected to less than one cent on the dollar.

Ontario is without a dollar of debt presently payable.

Ontario had $2,789,200 in the banks on December 12, 1904.

Ontario, ever since 1872, has shown a surplus of assets after deducting liabilities presently payable.

Ontario's surplus of assets after deducting liabilities, Dec. 31, 1903, was $3,549,164.

Ontario's position is an enviable one: Its affairs have been so managed as not only to create no debt but to leave a surplus of interest-bearing assets that yield an annual income that could be capitalized at nine millions.

HELPING FARMERS TO HELP THEMSELVES

Systematic Education Under Hon. John Dryden —Tremendous Growth of Stock-Raising and Dairying---Steady Prosperity Under Scientific Methods---Work of Winter Fairs, the Farmers' Institutes, the Travelling Dairy and the Re-organization of Fall Fairs.

The trade and navigation returns tell their own story of the result of the extension of agricultural education among the farmers of Ontario. When the American tariff destroyed the barley market, and when "infant industries" took the attention of the Federal Government, to the disadvantage of the other classes, the sympathy of the kind-hearted politician was for "the poor farmer." It was deserved. His farm was mortgaged, his sons were flocking to the professions or to the United States, and his land was losing its fertility and its value. It was about this time that Hon. John Dryden became Minister of Agriculture for Ontario. It may be said with all moderation that to him more than to any other single human agency is due the happy reversal of circumstances in which the farmers of this Province find themselves to-day, says The Globe. With the United States market closed to our barley, and with the fertility of the soil warring through uninterrupted grain cultivation, the one door open was to promote mixed farming and stock-raising, with the British market as the objective.

A Revolution in Agriculture.

Mr. Dryden set to work, and later he was assisted by the co-operation of the Liberal Government at Ottawa, to make the change, and how successful his efforts were everybody knows. In short, the whole character of the Ontario hog was changed and the quality of Canadian cheese and butter raised to a commanding position. Looking back at the letters quoted in the reports of the Bureau of Industries, reports of, say, fifteen years ago, we find such well-known pork-packers as the Fearmans of Hamilton, saying, "We do not ship any to the British market," and adding that they could not compete with the western hogs. Similarly, the report summarizes the opinion of the farmers themselves in 1889, that "the Ontario hog-raiser can never compete on equal terms against the cheap pig feed of the western States." About this time barley took a big drop, from 65 cents a bushel in 1882 to 44 in 1889. At the same time the old idea of a short, fat hog was firmly seated, and it was no wonder the capture of the English bacon trade was looked upon as almost impossible.

"Dryden's Circus."

During the early and middle nineties Mr. Dryden took personally in hand a campaign for improving the quality of the dairy and hog products of the Province. From 1891 to 1898 the "traveling dairy" made annual tours. Of course, it was met with ridicule by the Opposition press, who called it "Dryden's circus." Uninjured by the jeers, Prof. Dean went his way, and thousands of farmers and their wives received inspiration for scientific dairying, which has since been made so profitable. Meantime the Dairymen's Associations grew to be powerful agencies for the promotion of the new methods, and the interest the department took in them, with grants of $4,000 each, the securing of good speakers, and the distribution of reports of the meetings to 30,000 farmers, widened the constituency of enlightenment. Two new dairy schools were also opened at Guelph and Strathroy, and that at Kingston taken over, and since 1893 about $90,000 had been spent in the education of over 2,200 dairy experts. Under these encouraging conditions the amount of cheese produced in Ontario grew from $7,-189,957 in 1890 to $17,203,283 in 1903, and of creamery butter from $269,154 to $2,096,593, and the number of cheese factory patrons grew from 48,000 to 60,000. During the past year the work has been extended to include a more minute inspection of factories and farm dairy premises in a way which insures the highest cleanliness and best quality of cheese and butter.

Evolution of the Hog.

While this was proceeding, no less portentous was the revolution in the hog industry. There was only one way to accomplish this, and that was by persistent agitation and education. The Provincial Winter Fair, the Farmers' Institutes and the distribution of reports and bulletins were chosen mediums. The Winter Fair was made a fixture at Guelph, permanent buildings were erected, and prizes offered which would tempt the best breeders in the country. This attracted the farmers to the number of 15,000 or 20,000 per year. The pork-packers were invited to attend and by demonstration to tell the crowded audience of the lecture room just the kind of hogs they wanted. They eagerly accepted. The Farmers' Institute delegates attended and seized the "points" of a good bacon hog, and how it could be produced by breeding and feeding, and they carried the message to the Garcias to the number of 125,000 or more, who attended the district meetings last year. The result was seen in a few years in the supplanting of the short, fat hog by the long, lean ones, just the kind that makes the streaked, juicy bacon, and the red, sweet hams for John Bull's dining-room. The phenomenal success of this work is shown by the increase in the value of the hogs sold by Ontario farmers from $8,775,852 in 1892 to $22,552,892 in 1903. So popular had the Winter Fair become that a year or two ago it became necessary to establish one in eastern Ontario, and the new building which will be occupied at Ottawa this year, is the culmination of courageous private and public effort.

Doing a work by themselves and yet fitting into the whole general scheme, the Farmers' and Women's Institutes have accomplished much in the uplifting of agriculture. From a record of twelve meetings in 1885 the Farmers' Institutes have grown to 887 meetings last year, with an attendance of 126,352, while the Women's Institutes, established only three or four years ago, had last year 960 meetings and an attendance of 44,698. Skilled agriculturists, breeders and home-makers give the lectures at these meetings Their addresses are the statements of men and women who have derived their knowledge from experience, and in imparting it they give the impression that what they have done others can do.

The success of the Ontario live stock competing at the Pan-American Exposition at Buffalo in 1901 was the best tribute that could be paid to the quality of stock raised and kept in this Province. On that occasion the proportion of prizes won by live stock was as follows: Ontario, $5,979; all Canada, $7674; United States, $7,956. The triumphs at St. Louis during the present year are still fresh in the public mind. In the improvement of Ontario live stock Mr. Dryden, himself a practical breeder and noted stock-raiser, has taken a keen interest, and the grants to the various breeders' associations and the securing of low freight rates to the west for male stock are samples of practical steps along this line.

Helping the Fruit Farmer.

The reorganization of the Ontario Fruit Growers' Association two years ago, and placing of the executive work in connection therewith more directly under the care of the department, was a step which has resulted in many valuable extensions of the work begun by Mr. G. C. Creelman, and continued by Mr. P. B. Hodgetts, the present energetic secretary. In addition to the papers read at the annual meeting, and subsequently printed and distributed, there are now fruit institutes and orchard demonstrations during the summer, and this autumn there was begun the fruit, flower and honey show, the success of which has demanded that it be made permanent. The fruit experiment stations, numbering fourteen, in different districts of the Province, are doing an excellent work in determining the varieties of fruit best suited to each grade of soil, altitude and climate. There has also been considerable development in co-operative work in fruit, in grading, packing and shipping. Further plans are under consideration for the enlargement of this valuable field of usefulness.

Education Vs. Amusement.

An energetic interest has been taken in the improvement of fall fairs, and a special officer known as the Superintendent of Fall Fairs appointed. Mr. G. C. Creelman performed this work prior to his acceptance of the Presidency of the Agricultural College, and it is now in charge of Mr. H. B. Cowan. The aim has been to substitute education for foolish amusement features. The success of the Winter Fair on the former plan justified its extension to fairs generally. Model plots of ground are sown and competitions held, the expert judges of live stock, such as are trained yearly in the short courses at Guelph, are furnished, and they are required to give reasons for their decisions. It is also intended to reduce the number of fairs and to improve the quality of each. Scores of fall exhibitions have profited by the new program, and there is a pronounced movement in favor of a general adoption of the new policy.

The grants of the Government toward the advancement of agriculture amount this year to $445,506. They are so generous and so well placed by Mr. Dryden and his picked staff of experts that they go far to keep the Government in its deservedly high place for an administrative record, which is never challenged by its opponents, and which will stand comparison with that of any State or Province on the continent.

Ontario's Pulpwood Industry.

The Ontario Tory party, under the Whitney leadership, has viciously attacked every pulpwood agreement entered into by the Liberal Administration, thus proving themselves obstructionists and reactionaries.

It is in spite of this opposition therefore that the following tangible results are shown in proof of the wisdom of the Liberal policy in this matter:

Sault Ste. Marie Pulp and Paper Mills.

Output per day	tons 100
No. of men employed	130
Monthly wages paid	$6,500
Amount invested in Pulp Works	$1,022,544

Sturgeon Falls Pulp and Paper Mills.

Output of paper per day	tons 40
No. of men employed, including men in the woods	500
Monthly wages paid	$23,500
Amount invested in Pulp Works	$1,600,000

Spanish River Pulp and Paper Mills.

Amount invested	$700,000

The Works at Spanish River have a capacity of 110 tons per day, and it is expected will be running early next season. The mill will probably employ 350 men, including those at work in the woods, and will consume 80,000 cords of pulpwood per year.

TESTS BY TORTURE.

The World Is Not Yet Free From This Barbaric Practice.

England, as all the world knows, was the last of civilized countries to abolish the test by torture as a regular legal institution. A historian who has made a special investigation of modern methods of torture has discovered that the barbaric practice is still common in many out of the way corners of the globe. The early English system, too, has been widely imitated. Even in the time of Henry III. the torture trial was in vogue. First came three days of preparation by fasting and prayer. On the solemn day a caldron was made to boil in church, and a stone was placed apparently in the boiling water. Two juries of twelve men apiece were present in the interest of accuser and accused. Both sides tested the water, and if they agreed that it was boiling the accused thrust in his bare arm and took out the stone. His arm was then wrapped in cloth and sealed. On the third day the priest inspected the arm, and if it was perfectly healed the accused got off. It seems as if the testing representatives may have been tampered with or the examining priest may have been corrupted.

The same preparation was carried out when the other method was tried, which was the carrying of a redhot bar of iron for three steps. The hand was then sealed and examined as before. It has been suggested, as many people escaped scatheless, that the priests had a secret cure for burns or for preventing burns. But such a secret must have been known to the chemists, and the chemists of to-day are ignorant of any such remedy. As late as 1174 a man was condemned to the boiling water. In all cases the accused had been declared guilty by a jury, and even if he succeeded in the ordeal he was often banished.

In southern India there is a curious case of domestic ordeal. The natives would plunge the arm in boiling oil and come out scatheless. It is well known that the hand, protected by its natural moisture, can be placed in molten metal and not be burned. A missionary tells of a native who was very jealous of his wife. At last the poor woman, wearied by his reproaches, offered to undergo the ordeal.

The husband boiled the oil himself, that there might be no error, and bade her insert her hand, keeping it there till he gave her the word to extract it. He let her hand remain in the oil for some time, and when she took it out there was no sign of burning. Knowing the furious jealousy of the man, the missionary had no doubt as to the temperature of the oil. In Arabia there is a more stringent though less dangerous test. A woman carried hot embers in her veil for twenty yards. If her veil did not burn, her innocence was established.

It is well in considering these things to remember that the "fire tests" were the great conjurers' tricks from the time of the Greeks to that of the red Indians. In the rituals of all old religions treading on hot coals, embers, burning stones, etc., was a common rite. It exists in Bulgaria to-day. In Borneo a Chinese meat firm intended to establish a business not long ago. The European inhabitants of the place were astonished to see the street covered for some distance with redhot embers and a respectable Chinese merchant walking thereon with naked feet. His object was to ascertain by this means whether or not this would be a favorable place to establish his business. A traveler in Fiji recently photographed natives walking barefooted over redhot stones. The bands of dry ferns about their ankles were not scorched.

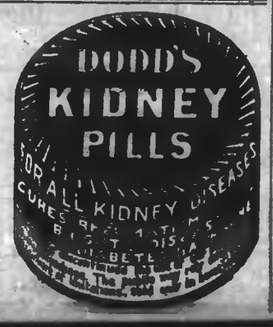
Caught in His Own Trap.

They were strolling up the avenue looking as happy as true lovers really can look. It was Saturday night, and Rudolf had his weekly stipend in his inside pocket. It was while passing a darkened grocery that his good nature asserted itself in the following manner:

"Dearest, if yonder grocery was only open I would willingly purchase some mixed nuts, and we could sit by your fireside tomorrow and crack them."

"Don't let that worry you, Rudolf," she replied. "There's a candy store across the street. You can buy me some caramels, and you won't have to crack them."

And Roody had to make good.



TO CUT THE RAILWAY.

Russians Use Cavalry For First Time Along Line of Communications But Japs Drive Them Back.

Gen. Oku's Headquarters in the Field, Jan. 13.—A small party of Russian cavalry near Haicheng, attempted to cut the railway yesterday, but were driven back by the Japanese guards. No details have yet been received. It is the first time that the Russians have attempted to use cavalry along the line of communications.

Russians Expect An Attack.

London, Jan. 13.—According to The Daily Mail's Port Louis correspondent Rear-Admiral Voelkersam, commanding the second division of the Russian Pacific Squadron, has stated that he expected to be attacked by the Japanese in the Indian Ocean. He thought that the second Pacific squadron would call at Maho, in the Seychelles group.

The Russian tugboat Russ, according to the same correspondent, on Jan. 4, made enormous purchases of provisions at Tamatave. It is reported that the Russ has a double crew of Russians and Germans. According to necessity, the vessel is sometimes Russian and sometimes German, and the sailors in turn become crew or passengers.

Prisoners of Japan.

Nagaski, Japan, Jan. 13.—The steamers Kaga and Sunuki have arrived here with 1,600 Russian prisoners of war and fifty officers. All the prisoners have been quartered at Inasa, a village nearby, where has also been prepared a lodge for Gen. Stoessel, who will arrive next Saturday.

The Russian officers are allowed much liberty within the bounds of the town, but they are under police escort.

Gen. Stoessel and staff will sail from here for Europe on a French mail steamer Jan. 16. These Russian prisoners are unfeignedly pleased at the end of the hardships of the siege and the considerate treatment of their victors.

Chinese Neutrality.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 13.—The Russian Government has issued a circular to the powers calling their attention to the alleged violation of the Chinese neutrality and citing numerous instances during the war in the Far East tending to prove that China is unable to fulfil her obligations. This state of affairs, the circular says, is calculated to bring the country into perilous paths and it concludes by saying that Russia claims the right to act in her own interest.

Much Ammunition Captured.

Tokio, Jan. 13.—Gen. Nogi reports that the Japanese captured at Port Arthur 546 guns, 32,670 shells, 30,000 kilos of powder, and 2,266,800 rounds of rifle ammunition.

Stoessel Goes to Report.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 13.—The War Office explains that the reason for Lieut.-Gen. Stoessel giving his parole is that it is incumbent upon him to bring a detailed report of the defence of the fortress to the Emperor.

PEACE WITH DIGNITY.

Russia's Irrevocable Decision: But Beyond This Point Confusion Exists.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 13.—The Government seemingly is about to make the irrevocable decision that prestige abroad and the situation at home necessitate, the continuation of the war till peace with dignity is possible. Beyond this point, however, confusion exists.

Emperor Nicholas is still apparently vacillating as to whether he shall allow M. Witte full sway, in the meantime declining to permit Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky to retire, although the latter persists in the view that the confidence of the people in the manner in which the reform manifesto is to be worked out is vital, and that this is impossible if the work is to be left completely in the hands of the Bureaucrats. Direct consultation with the representative classes interested he considers essential.

Socialists, revolutionists and extreme elements, as well as the subject races on the borders of Russia, all have different objectives, with which the conservative Liberals, whom the Government really hopes to appease, have little in common, and above all Russia's unnumbered millions of peasants have given almost no sign of being stirred by the prevailing political agitation. Demonstrations, and even disorders on a large scale, in the centres of population are regarded by the authorities as possible, accompanied by a recurrence of terrorism by those who believe the bomb is the only thing with which they can fight absolutism.

This last is really considered the likeliest and most deplorable possibility in the near future. For the moment, however, all is quiet.

Where Russians Are.

Suez, Egypt, Jan. 13.—The division of the Russian second Pacific squadron, commanded by Rear-Admiral Botrovsky, arrived here yesterday from Port Said.

Priest Leads Russian People.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 13.—The grievances of the St. Petersburg workmen have not yet been settled. It develops that a priest named Agathon is really at the head of the movement.

To Unify the Press Laws.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 13.—The committee of Ministers resumed their consideration of the press laws yesterday. One of the things already decided is the unification of the laws in order to make them applicable alike to provincial and metropolitan papers.

Opera House Burned.

Winnipeg, Man., Jan. 13.—Neepawa Opera House was destroyed by fire yesterday morning. The loss on the building is $12,000. The fire originated in a defective furnace.

Nervous, Sick Headache.

Mr. O. Barber, Simcoe, Ont., writes; "I was troubled for a long time with headaches, which would come on about once a week with such violence that I could not eat or do my work. I tried headache powders and quiet cures, which did no good. About eight months ago I took six boxes of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and I have not been troubled with headache since."

YOUTH.

She had the fluttering eyelids
Like petals of a rose;
I had the wisdom never learned
From any musty prose.

She had the melting ardor
That hesitates, yet dares;
And I had youthful valor's look,
That is so like despair's.

She had the tender bearing
Of daffodils in spring;
And I had sense enough to know
Love is a fleeting thing.

She had the heart of tinder;
I had the lips of flame;
And neither of us ever heard
Procrastination's name.

She had the soft demeanor,
Discreet as any nun's;
And each of us had all the joy
God gives His foolish ones.

AUSTRALIA'S ONLY BATTLEFIELD.

Its Fiftieth Anniversary Occurred On December 3, 1904.

There has been only one appeal to arms in Australia, and its fiftieth anniversary occurred on Dec. 3. The cable told us of the elaborate preparations which were made for the celebration of the jubilee at Ballarat, the scene of the fatal conflict between the insurgent diggers and the Imperial troops. A long agitation for Parliamentary representation and the abolition of the obnoxious license fee, a monthly tax levied on all gold-diggers alike, whether successful or the reverse, and collected in brutal style by mounted troopers, not a few of whom were ex-convicts, culminated in a mass meeting of the diggers on Nov. 29, 1854. At this meeting, amid a scene of great enthusiasm, the diggers made a huge bonfire of their licenses, and thus bade open defiance to the authorities. A rude fort, called the Eureka stockade, was rapidly erected. The 12th and 40th Regiments, then quartered in Melbourne, under the command of Major-General Sir Robert Nickle, K.C.B., one of Wellington's officers in the Peninsular War, were rushed up to Ballarat, where they were received with shots and showers of stones. At daybreak on Dec. 3 they attacked the Eureka stockade and carried it by storm. There was lamentable loss of life on both sides.

The rebel diggers had chosen as their commander-in-chief a handsome, stalwart young Irishman, named Peter Lalor, a sort of one of Daniel O'Connell's colleagues in the House of Commons. Lalor fought bravely in defence of the stockade until stricken down by a bullet in the left shoulder. Some of his men concealed him under slabs of timber until nightfall, when he was removed to the house of a Roman Catholic priest, where the wounded arm was amputated. For five weeks he was an outlaw with a heavy price on his head, dead or alive. Then, a royal commission having reported strongly in favor of the removal of the diggers' grievances, Lalor emerged from his hiding place and was returned by acclamation as the first member for Ballarat in the Parliament of Victoria. For the rest of his life, thirty-five years, he was a prominent public man as M.P., postmaster-general, minister of trade and customs, chairman of committees and Speaker. He twice declined knighthood. A fine statue of Lalor, by Nelson Maclean, a London sculptor, stands in the main thoroughfare of Ballarat.

Naturally, very few of those who took part in the fight at the Eureka stockade now survive. One of them is Captain John Lynch, the father of the "Colonel" Lynch who became a Boer officer during the South African war, who was elected for Galway, and was released from captivity a few months ago. For some years after the fight there were annual pilgrimages on Dec. 3 on the site of the Eureka stockade, and on these occasions Captain Lynch was the orator-in-chief. The site of the stockade is now a public reserve, and is the great show spot of Ballarat. A thousand cadets were reviewed there by the late General Sir Hector Macdonald. The "Southern Cross," the rebel diggers' standard, is preserved in the Melbourne Museum. Lieut. Ross, a Canadian, who hoisted it over the stockade was killed in the fight.

GREAT LIBERAL MASS MEETING

Will be Held in the Opera House To-night.

Prominent Speakers who will Address the Meeting—To-morrow Night's Weekly Meeting.

To-night business at the Liberal Committee rooms will be suspended for the evening, and all will attend the big meeting in the Opera House at which the speakers will be the Provincial Secretary, Hon. Geo. P. Graham, Hon. J. R. Stratton and the candidate.

Mr. Graham is one of the best public speakers in the province and it will be an excellent opportunity of hearing the affairs of the province ably discussed by the late provincial Secretary and his successor, both well informed public men.

Mr. D. O'Connell will act as chairman of to-night's meeting.

The gallery has been reserved for ladies and their escorts, of whom it is expected there will be a large number.

To-morrow night the usual Saturday night rally will be held in the Committee Rooms, when there will be a number of addresses by local speakers. With less than two weeks to the election, the enthusiasm is becoming increased and the weekly rallies are more and more largely attended.

Let there be a good turn out to-morrow night.

A CHILDREN'S AID LITTLE ROMANCE

Infantile Advance From Destitution to Affluence.

The rescue of little children from the enviornments of neglect, vice and destitution as represented by the work of the Children's Aid Society is generally prosaic enough, but it sometimes has its little romances.

The other day a fifteen months' old baby came under the care of the Society, being rescued from destitution and suffering. The officers of the Society in their investigation discovered that the baby had a grand-mother who is wealthy. The necessary steps were taken and now the little waif is enjoying the comforts of a comfortable home with all the material benefits and moral influences that a wealthy and virtuous home can provide.

LAW ASSOCIATION ELECTED OFFICERS

Annual Meeting was Held—The Report of the Inspector.

The annual meeting of the Peterborough Law Association was held on Monday last, when the officers were elected for the association for the year.

The election resulted as follows:

President—Geo. Hatton.
Vice-President—E. A. Peck.
Secretary—J. W. Bennett.
Treasurer—F.D. Kerr.
Executive—E. B. Edwards, L. M. Hayes.

A report from the inspector of the Law Library was read. The inspector's report commented favourably upon the condition in which he found the books, but he expressed the wish that some improvement be made to add to the comfort of the room.

ANOTHER VERSION OF CHURCH DEBT EXTINCTION

Secretary of St. Paul's Board of Managers Sets Forth the Facts.

The Examiner has received the following letter regarding an article dealing with an alleged project to extinguish St. Paul's church debt:

To the Edtior of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—The information in your issue of last evening regarding St. Paul's church was to say the least, misleading, and your informant, whoever he was had no official authority for giving same.

H. S. MACDONALD,
Secretary of the Board of Managers.

In conversation with Mr. Macdonald, the Secretary of the Board, the Examiner learned the following further facts in connection with the matter referred to above:

The office-bearers of the church have, for some time been thinking of the advisability of wiping out the debt on the church, and Dr. Torrance at a meeting of the office-bearers on Tuesday, stated that a few of the prominent members of the congregation had agreed to give a certain amount provided the office-bearers went heartily into the project of having the whole debt wiped off, which they enthusiastically agreed to do.

The whole idea was one of a free-will offering.

The Examiner regrets that the information is not quite in line with the facts as stated above. It was thought to be reliable as it came from an official of the church.

INDEPENDENT FORESTERS

Joint Installation of Officers Held Last Night

Interesting Address by Mr. G.N. Brown D.H.C.R.—Musical Programme.

An interesting gathering of Courts Queen No. 678 and Chemong 538 I. O. F. was held in the Simcoe street hall last night. Bro. G. N. Brown, D. H. C. R, the popular I. O. F. organizer occupied the chair and installed the officers in the various chairs. There was a large number of members and their friends present including also ladies of the Companion Court and their friends

Bro. G. N. Brown, in giving the opening address promised to be brief. Most of his hearers were Foresters, he said, or friends of those in the order. The Society is one of the fraternal insurance organizations. It extended from Canada through the United States, across to Great Britain and France, Norway, Sweden, South Africa and Australia, so that wherever you go you will find a brother and a friend. The Order is strong numerically and financially. It is licensed by the Dominion Government and audited by the Dominion Government and is well worthy of the confidence imposed in it.

The musical programme was then proceeded with when the following responded:—Miss Rickey sang in fine voice, accompanied by Miss May Bullen. Miss Rickey again sang by special request the song entitled "Sing Me to Sleep". Master McNeiley gave a recitation in fine style. The Messrs. Coleman gave several comic songs which were heartily encored. Mr. Williams gave a song in good voice which undoubtedly indicates a bright future in the musical world. Miss May Bullen acted as accompanists for the various singers.

Good but brief addresses were given by the newly installed officers and the programme was brought to a close by the singing of God Save the King.

The ladies of Companoin Court Queen had kindly provided refreshments for all assembled and are to be congratulated upon the arrangements made. The gathering dispersed at rather a late hour after spending a very enjoyable night which is hoped will soon again be repeated.

The officers of Court Chemong who were installed last night were:—

P. C. R.—A. Allison.
C. R.—D. Wallace.
V. C. R.—Wm. Miles.
Rec. Sec.—J. W. Buyers.
Fin. Sec.—G. W. Powell.
Treas.—Wm. Madill.

THE STREET CAR STRUCK HIM

Driver for R. Hicks & Co. Had A Narrow Escape

Load of Coal Upset in Front of Rapidly Moving Street Car.

A very narrow escape from a serious accident occurred this morning, on George street, just above London street. A young man named Geary, a driver for R. Hicks, with a coal sleigh, was going up George street, with a load of coal in sacks. Behind him was a street car also travelling north, and to allow the latter to pass the driver crossed the tracks, but the roadway was so narrow between the banks that his sleigh had to go up on one of the latter, and in doing so the load upset, throwing Geary off the sleigh in front of the rapidly moving car. The latter was so close to the sleigh that it was impossible for the motorman to stop before Geary could get out of the way. The step of the car struck him in the back, and only for the fact that the speed had been slackened considerably, it is probable that very serious injuries would have been inflicted.

The injured man was able to load his sleigh again and proceed on his way, however.

MAGISTRATE LENIENT IN STEALING CASE

Y. M. C. A. Case Settled by Defendant Paying Costs.

At the Police Court this morning Jas. McGee was sent to jail for one month.

A young man was charged with having stolen a pair of hockey boots and skates from the Y.M.C.A. building in December. It seems that the skates had been left in the care of the Assistant Secretary, Mr. Hutchinson, who was to sell them for the owner, if possible. In a few days the skates were missing and last Tuesday Mr. Hutchinson recognized the skates on a boy at the Brock street rink. The boy acknowledged having taken the skates. The Secretary, Mr. Williamson, called a meeting of the Board of Directors, who strongly urged that a prosecution be made as there had been frequent petty thefts about the building of late and it had been decided to make an example of the first one who was caught.

The defendant this morning pleaded not guilty, but his own evidence, as well as that of the two witnesses to whom he acknowledged having taken the skates was such as to prove his guilt, though he claimed that he had intended paying the owner.

The Magistrate spoke very strongly of the conduct of the defendant in the case and found him guilty of the charge, but as it was his first offence, and as he did not wish to register a conviction against him, he allowed him to go upon paying the costs, which amounted to $3.10.

It is to be hoped that this will be the last case of its nature in connection with the Y. M. C. A. for the association will deal with all cases in a severe manner.

A Talented Glee Club

W. J. McNally, organist and choirmaster of Central Methodist Church, Toronto, says of the Victoria College Glee Club:—"While their singing is always artistic and marked by careful shading, the rollicking, jolly spirit is by no means lacking and their programmes are delightfully entertaining." Hear the Glee and Mandolin Clubs in Opera House Next Thursday. Tickets 50c. and 35c.

MR. ANDERSON AT HALLS GLEN

A Good Meeting in Spite of Bad Roads

Addresses by the Candidate Mr. Anderson and Others.

Notwithstanding the wretched state of the roads, there was a good attendance at Mr. Anderson's meeting at Hall's Glen last night. The chair was occupied by Mr. Jacob White.

Mr. Anderson, the Liberal candidate, spoke in general terms of the splendid administration given by the Ross Government, and showed how a continued application of the policy of progress meant the building up and progress of the province.

Mr. S. Payne made a brief address, dealing with the position of the respective parties in regard to temperance.

Mr. F. D. Kerr, barrister, Lown, in a speech of some length, gave an exhaustive review of the record of the Government, especially dealing with its policy in regard to agricultural education, and the success of the Government's work in these branches, and also in the carrying out of their splendid and aggressive development policy.

Mr. G. K. Martin spoke briefly, dealing mainly with the temperance issues of the campaign.

Mr. White, chairman, concluded the meeting by a short but very effective address.

The meeting was a very successful one and furnished another evidence of Mr. Anderson's certainty of success on Jan. 25th.

SOME ADVICE TO THE YOUNG MEN.

Interesting Talk on the Subject "How to Talk"

Meeting of Young Men's Guild of the George Street Church.

Last night the meeting of the George street Young Men's Guild was held, and it was the most successful meeting that has been held for some time. Not only was there a large attendance, but the interest manifested was more intense, and is general among the members.

Mr. Garnet Galley presided at the meeting for the first time since his election to office, and gives promise of making an efficient executive officer.

The different committees were organised for the year, and the chairmen are as follows: Lookout, G. Galley; Programme, J. W. Wood; Social, P. Hetherington; Sport, G. Robertson.

After the business of the meeting the Guild listened to a talk from Mr. F. H. Dobbin, on "How to Talk," which was thoroughly enjoyed. Mr. Dobbin gave some splendid advice to the young men upon being able to talk well in public, and doubtless his words will have the effect of stimulating those who heard him to exert greater efforts to acquire a degree of proficiency in the art.

Mr. D. W. Dumble, who was present as a visitor, followed with a hort talk along the same lines as that of Mr. Dobbin's address. He emphasized the importance of reading good literature, and also cautioned his hearers against the use of slang, which, he said, was too common among the young people of today, and is used largely as a result of the influence of the Americans, whose use of slang was proverbial. Mr. Dumble's words were much appreciated by the young men.

At the close refreshments were served.

LINDSAY BRANCH WAS TIED UP

Only Railway Line in Province to be Blocked.

The Lindsay branch of the C.P.R. from Burketon to Bobcaygeon enjoys the somewhat doubtful distinction of being the first piece of railway in Ontario to become blockaded this winter. Trains were not running on this branch yesterday as the result of last night's snowstorm, which was particularly heavy in the eastern part of the Province again, falling to an average depth of six inches. A snow plough was working all day clearing out the drifts from the Lindsay branch, and this line is expected to be open to-day.

INVESTIGATION IS NOW GOING ON

Wiarton Beet Sugar Company Affairs in Court.

Town of Wiarton in for $50,000—The Position of the Farmers.

The affairs of the Wiraton Beet Sugar Company were undergoing investigation yesterday by Mr. J. A. McAndrew, Official Referee, to whom the winding up of this insolvent company has been intrusted by the court.

At present Mr. McAndrew is taking evidence to determine which of the shareholders are liable to contribute to the assets of the company in respect of any unpaid balance due on their stock. The chief contributory is the town of Wiarton, with $50,000 unpaid. Alex. McNeil, ex-M.P. is on the list for $5,000; C. M. Bowman, M. P. P., $3,000; J. P. McConnell, $5,000; Charles Reckin, $4,000; W. H. B. Spotton, of Wiarton, $2,000, and William Carruthers for $2,000. There are also four hundred farmers involved, who hold one share apiece. The shares have a face value of $25, and in very few instances have the farmers paid more than from $5 to $10, leaving an average of about $20 due on each of these four hundred shares.

One test case was tried yesterday which will settle practically all the farmers' cases. The other and larger shareholders will each get a separate hearing.

WHAT HAPPENED THE SNOW PLOUGH?

Complaint From a Resident of the Fifth Ward.

To the Editor of the Examiner:

Dear Sir,—Permit me, through the medium of your paper, to call the attention of the authorities to the careless way the snow-plowing is done in the north part of the fifth ward. Myself, with many other girls, having to make our own track at nearly eight o'clock in the morning.

Other years the snow-plough passed this part of the town before daylight.

Respectfully yours,
A. SUFFERER.

LIVELY RUNAWAY THIS AFTERNOON

Driver Thrown From the Sleigh but was Uninjured.

The peace of George stree was disturbed this afternoon by a lively runaway. A frightened horse owned by a farmer took fright on Hunter street near the post office and proceeded westward at a lively rate. The animal turned north on George street and upset the sleigh to which it was attached, throwing the driver into the snow. The driver was dragged several feet, but was not injured. As the horse was turning the corner at George street, a young man, Mr. A. Little made a brave, but unsuccessful attempt to stop the animal's mad career. The horse proceeded up George street several blocks before being brought to a standstill.

BOTH SIDES REPRESENTED

A Joint Political Meeting Held at Lakefield.

Mr. McWilliams and Mr. J.H.Burnham Address the Electors—A Liberal Triumph.

If the laughter, cheers and applause of the audience were any criterion, then R. F. McWilliams, the Liberal candidate did not come out second best in his encounter with Mr. J. H. Burnham at the joint meeting held by the Liberal and Conservative candates in the Town Hall at Lakefield last evening. It was a keenly interested, and apparently a representative audience that gathered for the event and it was not at all slow in expressing its opinion on the speakers and the speeches. It filled the Town Hall to the door and was most attentive from the moment the chairman, Reeve Tanner, opened the meeting till it closed with the singing of the National Anthem two hours and a half later.

A feature of the meeting was the courtesy and kindly feeling which was apparent between the candidates. Each bestowed compliments upon the other and congratulated himself on having an opponent who would leave unpleasant personalities out of the campaign. It had been arranged beforehand that each speaker should be upheld by the presence on the platform of ten of his party's stalwarts. The Liberals were on hand, but the chairman announced, while inviting them to take the platform, that only one party had prepared its list. In view of which the Liberal stalwarts remained in the audience. This forbearing to take the least advantage one of the other was also a noticeable feature of the evening.

Mr. Bradburn was the first speaker called upon. He spoke briefly merely remarking that he had brought an orator along to speak for him in the person of Mr. Burnham and that therefore he would not take up their time.

MR. BURNHAM'S ADDRESS.

Mr. Burnham then addressed the meeting. His speech was a long detailed account of election scandals and trials. He began with generalities declaring that the Liberal party had a machine while the Conservative party had none. He then wandered to the Soo, from the Soo to West Elgin, from West Elgin to North York, thence to North Waterloo, thence to North Gray and at the expiry of his time an hour later he was in South Ontario. His recital was dramatic but full of openings for retaliation of which Mr. McWilliams was, later, not slow to take advantage, much to the discomfiture of Mr. Burnham. Beyond a most vague and general admission in the beginning Mr. Burnham made no reference whatever to corruption in the Conservative party. Nor though he spoke a full hour did he even attemp to discuss any of the policy of his leader or the party, nor to show in any way their claims for the votes of the people of Ontario. Except to make the statement at the beginning that Mr. Whitney could not be judged by Dr. Beattie Nesbitt, and a brief defence towards the close of the Napanee incident, Mr. Burnham did not even mention Mr. Whitney's name. From beginning to end, his speech was, like most of the speeches of his leader, one of abuse of the Ross Government. He touched slightly on temperance and vaguely hinted that there might be something wrong in the administration of the Crown Lands Department under Hon. E. J. Davis, but practically all his time was devoted to election matters.

THE LIBERAL CANDIDATE.

Mr. McWilliams opened his address with some personal references. He asked with more confidence for their votes here than he could do in any other riding since both Liberals and Conservatives must agree that the riding had made no mistake eighteen years ago when it sent a representative to the Legislature even younger than himself, in the person of Mr. J. R. Stratton. Most of them present knew him, especially the young men who he saw before him in great numbers. He was quite content to leave himself in their hands.

Mr. McWilliams then detailed the splendid financial position which the province had attained under the Liberal administration. He showed how though Quebec and Ontario started even at Confederation, the former province was now paying a million and a half dollars of interest every year whereas Ontario not only had no debt but last year drew over a quarter of a million interest on investments. Mr. McWilliams continued.—

"Now, I have a great deal more to tell you about the splendid record of the Government, but first I want to talk about something else. I don't know whether it is because I am Irish or not but I like a fight and I like also to meet my enemy on his own ground. So since the Opposition has chosen to discuss only one of the several issues in this campaign, I will deal with that too. It won't take very long. I mean, of course, corruption.

"Most of you know that the great trouble with a witness is to get him to tell the whole truth. It is just the same way with the Conservatives in this campaign. If you can only get the whole truth from them I haven't and the Ross Government hasn't the least fear of your verdict. You heard a great deal about the Soo and the Minnie M. Did you hear anything about the cause of that bye-election? That election was held because the Conservative elected in the general election was unseated for the grossest bribery and corruption—so gross indeed, that the judges took into their serious consideration whether they should not disqualify Mr. Miscampbell who benefitted by it."

Mr. Burnham, interrupting — "Did they do it?"

"Oh, no; they decided to give him the benefit of the doubt." (Laughter.)

"But did Mr. Burnham tell you anything of that? Did he tell you anything of the large slice of money —$3000—Mr. Miscampbell swore he got from the 'purity fund.' This purity fund, you know, was gotten up by the Conservatives. Ordinary people call it a campaign fund. But Mr. Whitney, who knew all about it, said it was to fight corruption with. Is there any man in this hall easy enough to believe that?

"I don't defend political corruption at all, no matter by whom it is done. I have no defence for the Minnie M. and not a bit more for the Booth. It is true there were five Liberals unseated during the past two years. But it is also true, and this you heard nothing at all about, that there is corruption on the Conservative side, and that five Conservatives also have been unseated. Mr. Burnham says there is no machine on the Conservative side. But what of Robert Birmingham and Wright, and Mr. Leavitt, men all or one of whom turned up in every election trial against a Conservative? What of Birmingham's school for ballot switching? Mr. Burnham speaks of Nelson and Malloy coming from Buffalo to do dirty work for the Liberals. I will tell you what these men came for. They came because they were brought to come and give perjured evidence—evidence that was proved in the courts to be perjured."

PUNISHMENT OF GUILTY PERSONS.

Mr. McWilliams also dealt with the South Ontario matter again, urging his hearers to get the whole truth. He then passed to deal with the charge that Mr. Whitney, and Mr. Burnham following, made, that none of those reported in election trials had been punished.

"I hold in my hand a list," he said, "of men who have been fined, and paid their fines, for such offences, and I want you to mark this that though we have had our system of election trials for 25 years, the Ross Government is the only government in the Dominion to bring those named by the judges to trial. Now, there are on the list—I'll read them if you want me to—the names of 53 men who have been fined from $200 to $800."

Mr. Burnham, interrupting—"Who paid the fines."

"They did."

"Yes, if you are easy enough to believe it."

"Well, 28 of them served their jail term because they couldn't pay." (Laughter and applause.)

Mr. McWilliams thought he had given them enough to show that when they got the whole truth about the things Mr. Burnham had been talking about, they would not think the Conservatives the lily-white politicians they might have imagined them had they heard only Mr. Burnham's story. Mr. Burnham passed to the Government's administrative record. He pointed out that Mr. Burnham had not challenged that. He also pointed out that supposing the Conservatives were met upon their own ground, the sum total of the amounts they had questioned in the Public Accounts Committee, which included 25 Conservatives chosen by their own party, amounted to less than one day's expenditure out of the year. He thought that any man who left his affairs in charge of an agent with the same result, would do his best to retain that agent in his employ.

A CAREFUL GOVERNMENT.

Mr. McWilliams then devoted the balance of his time to an explanation of the manner in which the Government by careful management of the natural resources, such as timber and by the imposition of special taxes upon the wealthy corporations, had been able to give large grants for education, agriculture, and many other purposes to the municipalities, and this had meant a most substantial saving upon the taxes of the people.

Upon all questions the Government came before them with a record of progressive, efficient administration, and their policy for the future gave every assurance that that record would be more than maintained.

Near the close of Mr. McWilliams' speech, some one in the audience called out "Napanee."

"Oh, yes," replied Mr. McWilliams, "and that brings me to temperance, which you have not heard discussed to-night, though Mr. Burnham skirted around the question. But, first, with reference to Napanee, it is not that I am objecting to Mr. Whitney taking a glass of whisky; that is for Mr. Whitney to do as he thinks best. But I do most emphatically object to a man who induces a hotel keeper to break the law half an hour after he had been making a great splurge about how he would enforce that law if only he were in power. The Opposition come before you without any policy except that of strict enforcement, belied by their own actions. The Government comes before you with a record of improvements in the law, that have been of immense benefit to the country, and with a policy of continued reform that will wipe out evils of drunkenness, a policy which appeals alike to the better class of hotel keepers and the temperance people.

Mr. McWilliams in closing, asked again for the votes and the hearty support of his hearers, remarking that if Lakefield did as well for him as other parts of the riding, he had no fears of the result.

Mr Burnham, in a five minutes' reply, contended that he had proved there was a Liberal machine, and that Mr. McWilliams had not showed there was a Conservative machine. He also censured the Government's action in taking a part of the license fees, stating that the people were left to bear the stigma of having hotels in their midst, while they did not get the financial benefit.

Mr McWilliams, who was allowed ten minutes, thought it was not necessary to say anything more as he had already covered the points mentioned. They could believe there was no machine on the Conservative side, if they liked, but he did not think the people of Lakefield were so simple. The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem. Mr. Burnham called for three cheers for Whitney and Bradburn, which were given. Then the audience replied by demanding three cheers for McWilliams and Ross, which were most heartily given, and capped with a rousing tiger.

A SPEAKER ELECTED

Mr. R. F. Sutherland of North Essex Chosen by the Commons.

REPLIES IN TWO LANGUAGES

Enters Upon the Duties of the Office With a Full Desire to Be As Impartial As a Man Could Well Be—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. George E. Foster Also Speak of His Duties.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—The Senate met at 2.30 yesterday, when Sir Richard Cartwright and Messrs. Choquette, T. O. Davis and J. H. Ross were introduced. At 3 o'clock Sir Henri Taschereau arrived, and the Commoners were sent for. Upon arrival they were directed to return and elect a Speaker, a duty which was very promptly performed. Sir Wilfrid Laurier, on making his appearance, was received with ringing cheers. He moved the election of Mr. Robert Franklin Sutherland, member for North Essex, to be Speaker, seconded by Sir William Mulock.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier.

The Premier said: Dr. Flint, the first duty which devolves upon this House at the opening of Parliament is to proceed at once with the election of a Speaker. I need hardly remark that the position of Speaker of this House under our Parliamentary system of Government is second to none, and indeed is equal to the highest either in the gift of the Crown or of the people. In the first place, the Speaker of the House of Commons is the channel of communication between the House and the Crown; he is the mouthpiece of this assembly on all the pronouncements which it chooses to make. In the olden time, in the earlier history of the motherland, when the relations of the Crown and Parliament were not as clear and well-defined as they are at present, this part of the duties of Speaker were of paramount importance. But we live in calmer and happier days. The duties which the Speaker now has to perform are of great importance, and require special qualifications which it is not always easy to find combined in the same person. In the first place it is expected of him who fills this chair that he should be of a mind at once judicial and fair. Both sides of the House and all parties expect at his hands uniformly fair treatment. It is expected of him also that he should be well versed in Parliamentary law. I have to submit to the House that in our judgment, and I believe in the judgment of all, Mr. Robert Franklin Sutherland, member for the electoral division of North Essex, is well qualified in all of these respects. (Loud applause.) The members of the House who were his colleagues in the last Parliament will concur with me in the belief that in his hands the good traditions of the House of Commons, such as those which have come to us from the motherland, such as we have endeavored to observe in this country, will be well preserved; therefore I beg to move, seconded by Sir Wm. Mulock, that Robert Franklin Sutherland, member for the electoral district of North Essex, do take the chair of this House as Speaker. (Loud applause.) The motion was put and carried before the acting leader of the Opposition could make any comment.

Hon. Geo. E. Foster.

A friendly nod from Sir Wilfrid Laurier, however, brought Mr. Foster to his feet. He said: No one can find fault with the definition of the duties of Speaker as laid down by my Right Hon. friend, and I have no doubt that he has exercised his best judgment in selecting a gentleman for the position that satisfies his high definitions and ideals of this most important office. So far as I am personally concerned I have not had the pleasure of an acquaintance with the hon. gentleman who has been proposed, but I have been told by my colleagues on this side of the House that they consider him, from their knowledge of him and his antecedents, one who will carry on the high traditions which have obtained so long and which, we trust, will forever obtain in this Chamber. I can only say this: we on this side of the House will give every support, every reasonable support, to the Speaker who has been selected, and hold his hands up in every way, so long as he carries out the high duties of that office, as I have no doubt he will. The discipline and dignity of this Chamber is in the hands of his Majesty's loyal Opposition in part with gentlemen upon the other side of the House, and we are as anxious to have this maintained as they. (Hear, hear, and applause.)

Mr. Speaker's Reply.

The newly-elected Speaker was then escorted by Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Sir Wm. Mulock to the chair, when he delivered the following address:

Gentlemen of the House of Commons: I desire to express to you my sincere thanks for the honor of selecting me for the high position of Speaker. No one can appreciate more highly than do I the honor of this selection; no one can be more diffident than myself as to my capacity to discharge the duties of the office. At the outset I am very inexperienced, as you are aware, but I trust that the inexperience will be met by your cordial feeling towards me, and that for a time at least I shall be permitted to occupy this position with kindness from both sides of the House, as I feel sure I will be. With your aid I feel well assured that we will be able to vindicate our rights and privileges according to our established rules and usages, preserve that freedom of speech which is at the foundation of liberty, and at the same time maintain the dignity and decorum consistent with such an assembly. I need hardly say that I enter upon the duties of the office with a full desire to be as impartial as a man could well be, as between the two sides of the House, in the discharge of my duties. May I be permitted, without at all suggesting to the House that my knowledge of the language enables me to make a speech, to attempt to say a few words in French? (Loud applause.)

Mr. Sutherland then spoke briefly in good French, expressing his appreciation of the honor which had been conferred upon him. In a moment of absentmindedness he then left the chair to return to his seat among the rest of the members, but was recalled by a motion from the Prime Minister. A good-humored laugh greeted the incident.

The House adjourned until 3 o'clock to-day, when the opening ceremony takes place.

The Speakers of both Houses held receptions after the proceedings in the two Houses had concluded, when their Honors were heartily congratulated.

The Swearing-In.

The swearing-in of members commenced at noon yesterday. The customary roll of past years which the members signed has been discarded and a bound volume has been substituted. This is following the British practice. There was a large attendance of members.

PREMIER ROSS AT BELLEVILLE.

He Once More Sustains His Reputation As a "Bonnie Fighter."

Belleville, Jan. 12.—The visit of Hon. Geo. W. Ross to this city yesterday was the occasion of a flattering demonstration to the veteran leader. Upon his arrival at the station he was met by a large delegation of enthusiastic Liberals.

After greetings had been exchanged a procession was formed, and the party were driven in sleighs to the Quinte Hotel, where, with the exception of a brief period during which the Premier rested, he held an informal reception. A large number of Liberals from the city and surrounding counties called upon him, and not a few Conservatives took advantage of the opportunity to pay their respects personally, and many also attended the public meeting in the interest of Mr. Pringle, the Liberal candidate, in the opening. The Premier in his address again sustained his reputation as a "bonnie fighter," and vigorously attacked the record of the Opposition with regard to political corruption. He took credit for the splendid record of constructive and progressive administration which his Government inscribed, and again hurled at his opponent the defiant challenge to show a single instance where Liberals had tampered with or switched or spoiled ballots or burned ballot boxes. The Opera House was crowded to the doors long before the hour set for the meeting, and many were unable to obtain admission.

Mr. Rumball the Choice.

London, Jan. 12.—The Liberals in this city in convention last night nominated ex-Mayor Fred G. Rumball for the Provincial House. The convention was held in the Auditorium and was well attended. No other name was proposed.

Ottawa's Dates.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Premier Ross speak in the Russell Theatre on Friday, Jan. 20, and Mr. Whitney Saturday, Jan. 21.

TWO POINTS OF VIEW.

Messrs. Bernier and Mills of the Railway Commission Differ.

Ottawa, Jan. 12.—Yesterday afternoon the Railway Commission gave judgment in the Toronto Esplanade matter. There were two judgments. Mr. Bernier takes one view, and Mr. Mills another. The judgment of Mr. Bernier is that the question of compensation should be left to the arbitrators, who are appointed in cases of expropriation. In his opinion the Railway Board cannot decide the question of compensation, because the Commissioners have not the evidence before them. It is the Board that authorizes the expropriation of lands. The whole point turns upon the interpretation of section 139 of the Railway Act. This section provides that "the Board may in its discretion and upon such terms and conditions as the Board deems expedient, authorize in writing the expropriation of the whole or any portion of the lands applied for."

The point lies in "the terms and conditions," in the opinion of Mr. Mills, who holds that the Commissioners can give compensation if they so desire. Mr. Bernier's idea is that the words "terms and conditions" are put in with the object to protect the property which remains unexpropriated. On the other hand, Mr. Mills holds that the Commissioners have special power under the act, which entitles them to instruct the arbitrators to give compensation to the aggrieved parties from the date at which the application was made for the land, some eight months ago.

It has decided to grant the application for the expropriation of the Williams property, and has fixed upon the 10th of February as the date at which the applicant company must accept or reject the order.

"AN OLD DROMEDARY."

Sir Henry Hawkins Tells of a Clever Defendant's Trick.

Among Judge Hawkins' reminiscences is the following story: It was when he was articled to an attorney and was attending a petty sessions court. The chairman was a pompous clergyman, but devoted to his duties. An impudent vagabond was brought up before this clergyman charged with a violent and unprovoked assault upon a man in a public house. He was said to have gone into a room where the prosecutor was and to have taken up a jug of ale and appropriated it to his own use without the owner's consent. The prosecutor, annoyed by the outrage, arose and was immediately knocked down by the interloper, and in falling cut his head. The prisoner knew the magistrate well and his especial weakness, which was vanity. By this knowledge the man completely outwitted his adversary and shifted the charge from his own to the prosecutor's shoulders. The curious thing was he cross-examined the reverend chairman instead of the witness, which seemed to young Hawkins a masterpiece of policy if not advocacy. The prisoner was summoned before "his worship, Mr. Knox," and this was part of his argument on the stand:

"Afore his worship, Mr. Knox?" says I. "And why not afore his worship, the Rev. Mr. Hull? He's the gentleman for my money—a real gentleman as'll hear reason, and do justice atween man and man. 'What!' says Jack with an oath, 'I ain't going to repent afore a clergyman—what!' he says, 'a d——d old dromedary like that!' Dromedary, sir, meaning your worship! Did anybody ever hear such vile words against a clergyman, let alone a magistrate, sir? And he then has the cheek to come here and ask you to believe him. 'Old dromedary,' says he, 'a d——d old dromedary.'"

The prisoner made his point and was dismissed. The prosecutor, the one who had called the reverend chairman an "old dromedary," was obliged to pay the costs. This scene decided young Hawkins to go to the bar

Earl Grey's Successor.

The Duke of Northumberland, who becomes Lord-Lieutenant of his county in succession to Earl Grey, now transferred to a larger sphere of action, is the fifth of the seven Smithsonian Dukes to hold that appointment. The exceptions were: The sailor fourth Duke, who found more congenial occupation as First Lord of the Admiralty; and his cousin, the fifth Duke, who was content to captain the Yeomen of the Guard. The earlier Smithsonians were not only Lords-Lieutenant, but vice-admirals, of Northumberland. The second of these held both these offices, and was, besides, a general in the army, F.R.S., F.S.A., and, as was his father, K.G. The third Duke had a wider experience of office. He was not only Lord-Lieutenant and Vice-Admiral of the northern shire, but Lord-Lieutenant of Ireland and Ambassador to Charles X. His widow held a memorable office also. She was governess to the future Queen Victoria. Northumberland seems to have been deprived of its vice-admiral in 1877. The sixth Duke, vice-president of the Board of Trade, D.C.L. and LL.D., figures as Lord-Lieutenant simply. The present Duke is the first of them to wear the V.D. as well as the Garter that was given to him in the year of his accession to the title. He is alderman and chairman of the County Council, president of the Royal Institution, trustee of the British Museum. He was, as Earl Percy, for seventeen years in the House of Commons. In 1887, the Lords found they could not do without him, and called him up, accordingly, in his father's barony of Loraine. You would not call him a Duke of the Meredithian type—"an austere and solitary man;" but he is, like his predecessor, the second Duke, a man of serious and classical views; the giver of many hostages to fortune; and the sort of father to appreciate Lord Warkworth's first in mods., and English prize verse, quite as much as Earl Percy's more solid successors in his official career.

Arranged Alphabetically.

A well-known authority on circus matters vouches for the truthfulness of the following story: Business had been very bad with an English provincial circus, and finally the performers, with a tumbler named Zeno at their head, went to the management and insisted on receiving their back pay. They were put off repeatedly. A definite date was at last promised. But the time arrived and still there was no money. Zeno expostulated. Whereupon the management explained that it had commenced to pay salaries, commencing with the names beginning with A, and so on, but that the money had run out somewhat in the S's. The company walked home.

A year later Zeno appeared at the offices of the circus and asked for an engagement.

"Certainly," said the manager. "We will take you on at an increased salary. Now let me enter your name. Mr. Zeno, is it not?"

"One moment," said the performer. "This year my name is Ajax."

The King's Lost Claim.

Had he but preserved the life of a mining claim that was deeded to him about two years ago, His Majesty King Edward VII. would now be on a fair road to increase his private fortune by the addition of a considerable quantity of virgin gold taken fresh from the auriferous gravels of the Yukon, says The Yukon World.

It was on February 10, 1903, that Mr. Sparling, in a spirit of generosity and loyalty to his King, determined to deed to His Majesty the Eureka Creek claim, upon which the depth, breadth, extent and richness of the pay streak was yet to be ascertained. So a quit claim deed was made out wherein J. K. Sparling was nominated as the party of the first part and His Majesty King Edward VII. as the party of the second part. It was duly signed, sealed and acknowledged; $2 was paid for the recording of the same, though the regulations were violated in not demanding the date and number of His Majesty's license, and to-day the book of records for Eureka Creek shows the transaction to have been made in due form and in perfectly proper manner.

That is the last entry in the book. The work required by the regulations has not been performed, and the claim is open to relocation. In other words, any old sort of a man may jump His Majesty's ground, and he will have no more redress than the commonest, most itinerant of his subjects, and posterity might have forgotten the fact that their sovereign was at one time their neighbor had it not been for the persistent prospecting of those who own the adjoining land, which is very valuable.

The Crows Won't Go.

The crow won't go. The obios bird still wings its flight to and from its home in the old piney woods night and morning, just as if it was the balmy spring time, instead of the threshold of a long, hard winter. It is a curious fact that the migratory instincts of the crow are sometimes either wholly suppressed or else sadly at fault in calculation and manifestation. When winter is slow in setting in—when the fall shows summer weather, as it has this year—the crow appears to think the cold season has switched off for once, and proceeds to forget meandering to a warmer clime. A Galt citizen recalls how, one winter, while a resident in Chatham, the crows left it too late to fly south, were overtaken and driven back by a snowstorm, and finally had to winter in their summer haunts, where, hungry and benumbed, they died in thousands. You could go into the cedar swamp at that time and lift a starving, dejected crow off a branch within reach of your hand. Something like this is going to happen to the crows in this neighborhood that foolishly have stood on the order of their going.

Defiance.

A little boy in Deering, Me., was brought before his father recently and accused of killing a chicken. "Who told you about it?" asked the boy. "The hen did," said the father. Nothing more was said that day, but the next morning the hen was found dead, and the boy, being accused of killing it, admitted it, saying in defense, "Yes, I did kill the hen, and I'll kill every hen that tells on me."

Justified.

City Editor—Why do you say he ran into the police station "puffing and blowing?" "Puffing" and "blowing" are synonymous. Reporter—Not at all. There's a vast difference—for instance, between puffing a man up and blowing him up.

Why Needed in Every Home

TO OVERCOME THE MOST COMMON AND ANNOYING OF HUMAN ILLS.

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS.

Indigestion, constipation and torpid action of the liver and kidneys are known in every home.

Both on account of the distress and discomfort which accompanies them and as a cause of other ills of a more painful and deadly nature, these derangements require prompt attention.

In every home there is needed more or less frequently a treatment which can be depended on to regulating and invigorating of these organs.

The result is good digestion and assimilation and the prompt removal of the poisonous waste matter from the body.

One pill a dose at bedtime two or three times a week soon cleanses the system and removes the cause of pain and ill health.

Mr. R. Carr, Point Alexander, Renfrew Co., Ont., writes, "Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have done me wonderful good. Being troubled with kidney disease and heart affection, I tried them with excellent results, and would not think of being without them in the house."

"Hortense," said Lydia tensely, "I want to see George. May I?"

"Why, yes, of course," said Hortense. "I have just left him. I came after these flowers for his room. Go right up; it's the first door on the left at the head of the stairs. Oh, Lydia, I'm so glad you came; it is very good of you; it will make him so happy. Ever since he was hurt he has"—

"Oh, I know, but it wasn't my fault; that's what I want to explain."

The door of George's room was open. His face was turned from Lydia as she entered the room and he did not look toward her, thinking it was Hortense returning with the flowers. It was not till she stood over him, her burning glance of sympathy on him, that he looked up; then he flushed and started to sit erect.

"Don't, don't, George!" she cried, and she laid her hand softly on his brow and gently pushed him back on his pillow.

"It's kind of you to come," he said. "I really was not—not expecting—that is"—

"No; I know you were not looking for me, George, and I wonder what you have thought of me. I've come to explain and beg you to forgive me. I am not quite as bad as I seem. George, I did not know of the shooting till we returned from Atlanta. I heard the danger was over, but I at once wrote you a letter. I have just discovered that mother intercepted it. Not hearing from you, I wrote another. It also was intercepted, but, not knowing that, I took your silence to mean that you wished all to be over between us."

Buckley was staring at her fixedly.

"What did you write?" he asked.

She was silent; the warm color was mounting into her fine face; her eyes were downcast.

"Don't you want me to know now what the letters contained?" he questioned gently.

"I—I don't see how I can tell you, George, unless"— She paused.

"Unless," he prompted, the fire of hope almost aflame in his eyes—"unless?"

"You see," she said, "I don't know how you feel about me right now, and when I wrote it was under the—memory of what you said that night in Atlanta."

"I could never change, Lydia. I love you with all my life and soul. I am famishing for one little word of hope from you. Did your letters"—

"I told you frankly in the first one, George, that I loved you, that I was tired of the way I was being treated at home and that if you wanted me I'd come to you in spite of all the world and consider myself the luckiest woman alive to be your wife, but when you did not answer I hoped there was some mistake, so I wrote another note telling you I had received no reply and that if I did not get one I'd take it that you wished everything over between us. Oh, George, I have been very unhappy! I never realized how much I loved you till I knew you were lying here wounded, and I"— She covered her face with her hands and began to sob softly. He reached out and drew her hands down and held them, while he feasted his eyes on hers.

"God bless you, little woman!" he said. "It seems like a dream. I can't realise that you are here telling me you—you really care for me and are willing to be my wife. Oh, darling, I'm afraid I'll awake. It can't—can't be true!"

"I've loved you for a long time," she said gently, returning the pressure of his hands, "but I did not realize it till that night in the summer house, when I overheard Governor Telfare insult you as he did. You seemed a king among men when you spoke to him as you did, and what you said about your respect for me and the sacrifices you'd make rather than help link his life to mine—oh, George, then I saw the difference between you and him; he seemed a dwarf in soul and body contrasted to you. Afterward, in the parlor, I tried to show you how I felt, but you misunderstood. I did not blame you. I could not have expected you to act otherwise after his disgraceful conduct. I threw that in his teeth, too, the other night in Atlanta. I shall always be glad I did it. It was little, but it was all I could do for you."

"You told him you overheard it?" said George.

"Yes; it was this way: He was begging and imploring me to give him a final answer. I had not openly refused him. I was afraid he would write to father and that father might be affected by it, to his injury. But the morning we left Atlanta Governor Telfare came to see me and began again to urge me to marry him. I flatly refused. He then dared to speak disrespectfully of you, and I told him just what a coward he was and how I knew it. I told him also that I knew about Mr. Truitt's pulling his ears. I told him everything I could think of and sent him away with a flush of shame on his face. It may not have been exactly ladylike, but I lost control of myself. I couldn't bear to hear him speaking lightly of you."

"God bless you, dear!" George said, and he drew her head down and kissed her on the lips. "God bless you!"

* * * * * * *

When Mrs. Hillyer returned home she found them together. Lydia sat on the edge of the bed holding his hand. On their faces lay expressions that recalled the brightest period of the older woman's youth.

"I see you didn't waste time," she said gently as she kissed Lydia on the brow.

"No; we understand each other now, Mrs. Hillyer," replied the girl. "They will never give their consent, but I'm going to stick to George anyway."

"Consent?" laughed Mrs. Hillyer. "Why, bless yore sole, child, yore folks will receive George Buckley with open arms. After you left I exploded a reg'lar boomerang in the'r midst. What you reckon I told 'em? I told 'em that me an' Mr. Hillyer had willed all we got on earth to George Buckley an' that he'd be about the well offest young man in north Georgia at our deaths, an' yore father"—

"What are you talking about?" George exclaimed, in astonishment.

"Talkin' about the legal documents me 'n' my old man signed yesterday," responded Mrs. Hillyer, with a chuckle. "We hain't got no children of our own, an' why shouldn't we want to know what's to become of our effects after we are gone? We both love you like a son, an' we are a-goin' now to take Mrs. Lydia Buckley into our hearts, too, thank the Lord!"

"Well, that's news to me," George said. "And I don't feel worthy of it, either."

"Worthy or not, that's not fer you to judge," said Mrs. Hillyer; "but it certainly has made the road smooth fer you with the Cranstons. Why, I never seed the like. The old major sprung up when I told 'im about the will an' stood quiverin' from head to foot.

"'Why, Mrs. Hillyer'—he quit sayin' madam—'why, I never knowed the young man had any expectations at all. I 'lowed he was jest, you know, a sort o' bookkeeper with a small intrust in the business. Ef I'd 'a' knowed he was a man o' means I never would 'a' raised so much fuss over it.' Well, to make a long story short, he give in as graceful as a'body could wish—blamed of the old feller didn't actually chuckle when I sorter skimmed over some o' Mr. Hillyer's investments in railroad stock an' the like. The world's the same all over. Most aristocrats believe in aristocracy only when it's got a cash basis. Lydia, yore pa actually feels relieved. He's had a big job, weak as he is, tryin' to marry you to a wind bag, an' now that yo'ry goin' to do a right better of yore own accord he's powerful well satisfied. Most folks come around to what they have to meet, an' when they are made to come around to what they really want they do it with a whis an' a slide. So, young man, you've won yore fight, an' you deserve to be congratulated."

"Well, I can't take credit for it," George laughed. "It seems to me that the whole town and half the county have been helping me out."

Leaving the lovers together, Mrs. Hillyer went downstairs.

"I thought at fust," she mused, "that I'd not let Mrs. Dugan in on this, but I

He reached out and drew her hands down.

mought as well. That's about all the pleasure the lone woman gits out o' life, an' she's entitled to this morsel. Yes, I'll run over an' tell 'er. The truth is, I'm dyin' to tell somebody, an' it ud be a relief to see 'er roll 'er eyes an' gasp. Thar she is now, makin' a break fer the fence. She seed me with my silk on an' knows some'n's in the wind. Hold on, Mrs. Dugan," raising her voice, "don't break yore neck—I'm a-comin'—I'm a-comin', as fast as I kin!"

THE END.

LAND OF THE COUNTERPANE.

When I was sick and lay a-bed
I had two pillows at my head,
And all my toys beside me lay
To keep me happy all the day.

And sometimes for an hour or so
I watched my leaden soldiers go,
With different uniforms and drills,
Among the bedclothes through the hills;

And sometimes sent my ships and fleets
All up and down among the sheets;
Or brought my trees and houses out,
And planted cities all about.

I was the giant great and still
That sits upon the pillow-hill
And sees before him, dale and plain,
The pleasant land of counterpane.

—Robert Louis Stevenson.

"DOWNFALL OF ENGLAND."

Austrian Lays Albion in the Dust in His Own Way.

The collapse of the British Empire is an ever popular theme with a certain class of continental novelists, writes The London Express Vienna correspondent. Every few months a book is issued—usually in Germany—which deals in some form with the invasion of England and the humiliation of her people.

The latest Anglophobe novelist is Lieut. von Mushzynski, an Austrian army officer, whose visions of British ruin fill a volume of some 200 pages.

The book, which is entitled "England's Downfall; or, The Anglo-Franco-Russian War of the Future," opens with the conventional raid of Afghan bands, instigated by England. This overture to a European war is played on "July 19, 19—."

After the Transcaspian Railway station has been destroyed by the Afghans, internal troubles occur in Russia, India and Europe (?) Russia seizes this opportunity to "declare war against Great Britain, with the approval of France.

Herat is taken. The Russians are led to victory by Gen. Skobeloff, newly resurrected for the occasion.

France lends a hand. Lord Cromer is assassinated at Cairo, and the Khedive, as well as the Sultan, joins forces against England.

The allied Franco-Russian fleet promptly takes Malta, and Admiral Fournier inflicts a crushing defeat on Admiral Sir John Fisher.

Meantime, the Russians are merrily marching in India. Lord Roberts is sent to Kandahar, and arrives in time to be killed by the victorious Russians, who, at the same time, smash the British forces.

Naturally the vivisection of the British Empire is mere child's play after these events. The crushing blow is dealt after the battle of Brighton, where the British army is decimated, and the victorious French enter London under Marshal Jamont. By a "remarkable play of destiny" the first Frenchman to set foot on English soil is Colonel Marchand.

"The fleet of England is no more," continues this Austrain prophet. "Defeated and crushed, proud Albion lies at the feet of her conquerors, who in the treaty of London dictate their terms of peace."

The Latest Swindle.

The latest swindle takes the form of a lost diamond ring. Asked about his experience, a victim said the other day to a representative of T. A. T.:

"Looking out of the window one evening I was surprised to see a stranger on my lawn hunting closely in the grass and under the shrubbery for something he had apparently lost. He looked like a man in ill-health, was well dressed, and apologized for intruding as soon as I went out. He said that while taking his morning walk he had noticed a ball outside the gate, concluded that it belonged to some boy about the place and threw it on the lawn. In doing so he had thrown a diamond ring from his finger, which had been emaciated by his recent illness.

"The ring had associations, he explained, that made it very dear to him. After a further search he gave it up, but before leaving assured me he would gladly pay £20 to any one leaving the ring at his address.

"While I was down on all fours inspecting every inch of ground, a man dressed like a laborer looked at me awhile, and then joined in the search. He soon had the ring. On learning that it was not mine, he refused to give it up. He would advertise it and get a reward. After much arguing he turned it over to me for £2. Of course, it was a false stone, and they were confederates, for I never found hide or hair of the invalid."

Cannibalism at Sea.

Recent legal history includes the trial of a British crew upon a charge of killing and eating one of their own number. The United States has a similar case upon its records. The brigantine Peggy, dismantled by storm, was tossing a helpless hulk for three months with a starving crew on board. They drank freely of the cargo of wines which they carried, and perhaps it was the frenzied condition of the men which caused their desertion by a ship which approached and promised, but failed to afford help. In the end they killed and ate a negro, and lived for sixteen days upon his flesh. A second victim had been marked for sacrifice, and the fires lighted for his roasting, when a ship, bringing succor, hove in sight

In Doubt.

This is from Sir Archibald Geikie's reminiscences: A country doctor who was attending a laird had instructed the butler of the house in the art of taking and recording his master's temperature with a thermometer. On repairing to the house one morning he was met by the butler, to whom he said, "Well, John, I hope the laird's temperature is not any higher to-day." The man looked puzzled for a moment and then replied:

"Well, I was just wonderin' that mysel'. Ye see, he died at twal' o'clock."

Colds

How often you hear it remarked "It's only a cold," and a few days later learn that the man is on his back with pneumonia. This is of such common occurrence that a cold, however slight, should not be disregarded.

Chamberlain's Cough Remedy

has gained its great popularity and extensive sale by its prompt cures of this most common ailment. It always cures and is pleasant to take. It counteracts any tendency of a cold to result in pneumonia.

Let go or die. That's the alternative of the shipwrecked man with the money bags. A great many people have a like alternative before them. Business men come to a point where the doctor tells them that they must "let go or die." Probably he advised a sea voyage or mountain air. There's an obstinate cough that won't be shaken off. The lungs are weak and perhaps bleeding. There is emaciation and other symptoms of disease, which if unskilfully or improperly treated terminate in consumption.

Thousands of men and women in a like condition have found complete healing by the use of Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery.

"It gives me pleasure to send you this testimonial so that some other poor sufferer may be saved, as I was, by Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery," writes Geo. A. Mackenzie, of Hoskin Ave., Chatham, Ont., Canada. "I had a cough for years, expectorated a great deal, and was slowly failing. Was losing flesh every day. Lost in weight from 185 pounds down to 138. My flesh got dry and I had nervousness. Did not say anything to any one but made up my mind that the end was not far off. One day my wife was reading in the 'Common Sense Medical Adviser' about Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery, and I said that sounds more like common sense than anything else that I had heard. So she came home a bottle of your famous remedy and before I had taken half of one bottle I felt better. Took thirteen bottles and it made a new man of me. I gained fifteen pounds and never have had a cough since. I feel splendid and give all the credit to your medicine."

Given away. The People's Common Sense Medical Adviser is sent free on receipt of stamps to pay expense of mailing only. The book contains 968 pages, over 80 illustrations and several colored plates. Send 21 one-cent stamps for the paper-bound book, or 31 stamps for the cloth bound. Address Dr. R. V. Pierce, Buffalo, N. Y.

Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets cure bad, foul stomach and constipation and so help to cure nearly every disease of the blood. They regulate, tone up and invigorate Stomach, Liver and Bowels.

TRUTH.

When first I trod in wistful gropings lonely,
And felt for God, in crude impassioned youth;
I longed to know Thee and Thy spirit only,
Thou great, clear-orbed Truth!

For Thee alone I sought mid earth's confusions,
By Thee, and Thee alone, I measured life,
Mighty or petty; drew its deep conclusions,
Plumbed its abysses, felt its ebb or strife.

I sorrow o'er myself for I have wronged
The greatness that He made me, and have turned Aside in dreams, where lighter fancies longed,
Or deeper channels where earth's passions burned.

But Thou, still onward is Thy fixed unturning,
Betwixt the olden ill and bitter moan,
Dost tread the true old way, Thy lamp still burning,
Led by Thy light alone.

And round and round in Thy great orbit flaming,
Like the fixed planets, Thou dost circle still,
'Mid new confusions, olden loves defaming,
And murky mists of those who work Thee ill.

MORLEY IN THE UNITED STATES.

How Great Free Trader Came Finally to Joke About It.

Business men in England listen reverently to the theories of John Morley and accept his utterances as the oracles of eternal truth.

Business men in the United States look upon Mr. Morley as something in the nature of an entertainment. They banquet him and enjoy his quips and jests and think that his glorification of free trade is funnier than all his other jokes put together.

At Mr. Morley's earlier appearances in New York he seriously attacked protection and was politely laughed at, but at the farewell banquet last Saturday night the guest of honor joked on the sacred subject as follows:

"I am not going to say a word about free trade to-night, not a word.

"We remember the time of the delicate adjustment in the principality of Neufchatel of the controversy regarding eternal damnation. In the course of the differences over the matter, an appeal was made to the Emperor, who thus pronounced judgment:

"'In Neufchatel, those who do not wish to believe in eternal damnation, so be it. Those who wish to be eternally damned, let them eternally be damned.'" (Laughter.)

A spirit in which the United States captains of commerce and industry receive the amateur opinions of Mr. Morley was illustrated by Senator Depew when he said:

"If Mr. Morley is right and protection is the policy of eternal hell—then hell has been misrepresented—it is undoubtedly a prosperous and progressive sort of a place." (Applause and laughter.)

FARRIERS AND KARNOTS WON

Two Interesting Games in City League Last Eve.

Farriers 5 Earl Greys 0, and Karnots 10 Verniers 2.

Two City League games were played last evening and in both cases the expected happened, the Karnots and Farriers winning from the Verniers and Earl Greys. The latter two teams are now practically out of the running and it looks as though the fight in the finals will be between the two first-mentioned clubs neither of which has lost a game but no one can tell what may happen before the season is over. The style of hockey was only fair last evening and not up to the standard of the previous week.

KARNOTS 10—VERNIERS 2.

The Karnots made a runaway race of their game with the Verniers in the first half, piling up eight goals while their opponents failed to score. The pace was fairly fast and the winners had things in their own hands most of the time, though the Vernier forwards needed watching. The play was more even and somewhat rougher in the second period, both teams scoring two goals, though the Karnots had the better of the play.

The Verniers were much stronger and heavier than in their first game, but were unfortunate in their shooting. Miller at centre made many pretty runs and scored both goals. Fred McGrath played a fast game at right wing while the rest of the septette worked hard.

Kingscote's good work in the nets had much to do with the Verniers' small score; he made a number of clever stops and relieved well. Dormer played a splendid game at point, while Quinn was quite effective at cover. The forwards all did well, possessing good speed and playing well together.

The line-up was:—

Verniers.		Karnots.
	Goal.
N. Miller		Kingscote
	Point.
Anyiseyc		Dormer
	Cover Point.
Ellis		Quinn
	Rover.
Miller		Mulhern
	Centre.
Morris		Campbell
	Right Wing.
McGrath		Grose
	Left Wing.
McDonald		Gilman

Harry Morgan referreed.

Dormer, Miller, Campbell (2) and Gilman decorated the boards.

SUMMARY.

First half.—Karnots—Gilman, Campbell, Grose, Mulhern, Mulhern, Gilman, Grose, Mulhern.

Second part.—Karnots — Campbell, Campbell, Verniers—Miller, Miller.

The second game resulted in a decisive victory for the Farriers over the Earl Greys by 5-0. The latter team was somewhat stronger than in previous contests but could not score on the strong defence of the winners. There were no startling features in connection with the game which was only a fair exhibition. At half time the score was 3-0.

The Farriers played good fast hockey and were dangerous at all times. The defence was impregnable and it was very seldom that Thornton was called upon to stop any shots, so fine was the work of Simpson and Squires. The forward line worked well together and shot well.

The Earl Greys were strengthened by the presence of Cameron on the forward line—he played a splendid game throughout. The other forwards played hard and made several good rushes, especially in the second half. The defence checked hard and made the winners work for every goal.

The teams were:—

Farriers.		Earl Greys.
	Goal.
Thornton		Laing
	Point.
Simpson		Seward
	Cover Point.
Squires		Brand
	Rover.
H. Long		Latimer
	Centre.
A. Long		Cameron
	Right Wing.
Smith		Doughty
	Left Wing.
Nicholls		McKee

Referee—E. Wasson.

SUMMARY.

First half.—Farriers—A. Long, H. Long, H. Long.

Second half.—Farriers — H. Long, Nicholls.

Those ruled off were:— Latimer, Squires, Brand, (?), Nicholls, Cameron.

The standing of the teams is now:—

	Won.	Lost.	Play.
Karnots	2	0	2
Farriers	2	0	2
Colonials	1	1	2
T. A. S.	1	1	2
Verniers	0	2	2
Earl Greys	0	2	2

TO-NIGHT'S GAME WILL BE FAST

Lindsay Team Will Come Reinforced With Trainload of Supporters.

To-night the Brock street rink will resemble the days of last season when the Picton and Belleville games were played. The enthusiasm among the supporters of the team which in the early part of the season was mild, has increased, and the present prospects are that the crowd to-night will be equal to those of last season, when the excitement and enthusiasm were at fever heat. Lindsayites are satisfied that their team will come out of the fight victorious and are bringing down a special train-load of rooters to help them along to victory. It is now up to the local supporters to turn out and give our own boys a lift, which their presence will do.

The team to-night will be a strong one, and it is bound to be a fast and exciting game. The puck will be faced at 8.30.

The line-up for to-night's game will be:—

Goal—Wasson.
Point—Glover.
Cover point—Crowley.
Rover—Cavanagh.
Centre—Morgan.
Right wing—Parnell.
Left wing—Graham.

"Chaucer" Elliott, of Kirkston, will referee to-night's game.

T.A.S. LOST FIRST GAME IN CAMPBELLFORD

Total Abstainers put up a Splendid Argument—Sore was 4—3.

The T.A.S. hockey team played their first game in the Trent Valley League yesterday afternoon when they lost at Campbellford by the close score of 4—3. The showing of the Total Abstainers was a most satisfactory one in every way and though the boys did not win they played splendid hockey and had all the best of the play in the second half. The small open air rink handicapped the visitors materially and it was some time before they got accustomed to the surroundings. Campbellford started in at a fast clip and had scored three goals before the T.A.S. were fully aware of what was doing. They soon settled down, however, and began to force the play. The score was 3—0 at half time. The T.A.S. played splendidly in the second half and tied the score just as the bell rang for full time but the goal was not allowed.

The checking was hard and close throughout.

Kelly scored the first goal for the T.A.S. and DeForge notched the other two. All the team showed up well and will be strong factors in the league again this year.

Meagher was the only one of the two-years champion team who played yesterday, but the new material showed up in fine form.

The teams:

T.A.S.—Goal, Clancy; point, Meagher; cover-point, Kelly; rover, DeForge; centre, McGrath; right wing, Rose; left wing, Quigley.

Referee—J. McIntyre of Keene.

HOCKEY.

All Saints' defeated St. John's in a fast and clean game of hockey at All Saints' rink last evening in the Guild League. The score was 5-1 and 3-0 at half time. Both teams showed good form, Mr. N. McWilliams referred in a most satisfactory manner. The teams were:—

St. John's.		All Saints'.
	Goal.
E. Fitzpatrick		H. McCabe
	Point.
J. Comstock		B. Rickey
	Cover Point.
H. Staunton		A. Hopkins
	Forwards.
V. Morphet		O. Dusty
G. Lech		S. Rush
J. Seymour		L. Campbell
H. Ray		B. Dusty

SOCIETY'S FUNDS IN GOOD SHAPE

Otonabee Agriculture Society Held Annual Meeting

A Rapidly Growing Fair and its Successful Management.

From Our Own Correspondent.

Keene, Jan. 12th. — The annual meeting of the Otonabee Agricultural Society, took place in the council chamber, town hall, Keene, on Wednesday, Jan. 11th. There was a large number of the Otonabee farmers present to discuss the affairs of the society, and appoint the officers for the ensuing year. Great enthusiasm was manifested by all present, and it certainly augured well for the future success of the society and its annual exhibition, which has always been one of the best in the county.

After the minutes of the previous meeting had been read and adopted, and the auditors report disposed of, the following officers were elected for 1905:—

President—Robert A. Nelson.

Vice-President—Alex. Stewart.

Auditors—Jas. McNeil and Robt. English.

Secretary-Treasurer — Mr. A. Shearer.

Directors — Messrs. J. J. Moore, John M. Shaw, M.D., W. J. Miller, R. Humphries, Ed. Foley, P. Drummond, Gilbert Howson, W. Renwick, Alex. Stewart.

Dr. Shaw and the secretary-treasurer, Mr. A. Shearer, were appointed delegates to attend the Provincial Association of Fairs to be held in Toronto in February. Some changes were also made in the prize list.

The prospects for next year's Fair are very bright, and every effort will be put forth by the officers of the society to make it second to none. A large measure of the success of the annual exhibition for some year's past is due to the untiring work of the society's secretary-treasurer. Since he was appointed to the position eleven years ago, the annual fair has been gaining in popularity and usefulness, and there is no doubt that under his efficient management of the finances, the fair will attain to greater proportions.

The society now owns the grounds which it has occupied for some years past, having bought eight acres from Mr. Henry Burnham at a cost of $1200. During the past year, almost entirely by voluntary labour, the grounds have been cleared of stones and stumps. It was ploughed several times and then seeded down in the fall. MAY VISIT CANADA.

Rumor That King Edward and Queen Alexandra Are Coming.

Montreal, Que., Jan. 13.—There was a rumor on the street yesterday that the mayor had been notified semi-officially that there was a prospect of the King and Queen coming to Canada next summer. A representative of the press called upon his worship and inquired whether he had heard anything of the matter.

"I had intended to remain silent on the matter," said Mr. Laporte, "but I do not hesitate to state since you have asked me, that recently I have received letters from prominent men in England, in which it was intimated that there was every probability of King Edward and Queen Alexandra coming to Canada some time this year."

"Then, Mr. Mayor, you really believe that Their Majesties may come to Canada?"

"That I cannot say, but from what I know indications point in that direction."

Only a Moral Victory.

London, Jan. 13.—Hon. H. Lawson, Conservative, defeated B. S. Straus, Liberal, by 78 votes in the Mile End bye-election. In 1900 the Conservative majority was 1,160. Mile End is one of the constituencies of London. Hon. Mr. Lawson is one of the proprietors of The Daily Telegraph.

ALD. BEGLEY WAS WATCHED

Presented by Members of the Staff with a Time-piece

After Seventeen Years' Service on the Examiner—An Expression of Good Will.

Last night Mr. T. J. Begley, acting foreman of the news room of the Examiner severed his connection with the paper after seventeen years service, and the members of the staff to express their regret at his departure and to show the esteem in which he is held by them presented him with a handsome gold watch. Just at six o'clock all the members of the staff gathered in the news room, and on behalf of the latter the city editor read the following address and Mr. Geo. Paxman presented Mr. Begley with the watch:—

Ald. T. J. Begley,
News Foreman,
Peterborough Examiner.

Dear Sir, — Your associates on the staff of the several departments of the Peterborough Examiner, learn with regret of your intention to cut the cables that have moored you to that craft for seventeen years.

You came to us as a lad; you leave us as a man, not only possessing the high respect and esteem of many of those who have been associated with you during this period of transformation, but also of the great mass of the citizens of the town, who have so recently given evidence of this confidence by investing you with the responsible position of one of the rulers of the destiny of the town, upon which evidence of confidence we take this first formal opportunity of congratulating you.

It gives us great pleasure to bear testimony to the conscientious fidelity with which you have met the responsibilities of your position, and to the pleasant companionship which daily association with you has given. Your example as a man has always had a high moral quality, and your readiness to oblige has always been a marked feature of your conduct. We refrain from saying further in the way of eulogy of your good qualities; the pressure upon the column of our knowledge of those qualities would not admit of a full expression.

We have always watched your career with interest, and that we may have an opportunity in the future to continue to watch your progress in life, we ask your acceptance of this gold watch, the material as well as the reliability being an index of the qualities of your character, coupled with the hope that it will mark for you only happy hours.

Signed on behalf of the staff,
Peterborough, Jan. 13th, 1905.

Mr. Begley, who was taken completely by surprise made a fitting reply acknowledging the gift and expressing his good wishes toward the members of the staff and the management.

SUNDAY SCHOOL'S ANNUAL MEETING

St. Paul's School is in Prosperous State—Officers Elected.

The annual meeting of St. Paul's Sunday School was held last Thursday evening with a large turnout of the officers and teachers. The election of officers for the ensuing year resulted as follows:—

Superintendent—Wm. Madill.
Assistant Superintendent — W. J. Stacey.
Corresponding Secretary-Treasurer — Wm. Pringle.
Recording Secretary— Miss Drummond.
Pianist— Miss A. Rorer.
Leaders of song — Mr. R. Mein and Mr. Gillespie.
Superintendent Primary Department — Miss A. Cannan.
Superintendent Kindergarten Department— Miss Williamson.
Librarian— J. H. Connell.
Superintendent Home Department — Mrs. W. J. Stacey.

During the year the sum of $350.00 was raised for Missions.

Mr. Wm. Madill presented his annual report of the work done during the past year. Satisfactory progress had been made along every department and the affairs of the school were generally prosperous. During the year twenty of the older scholars had joined the church. Five of the school had attended every Sunday, viz., Clara Dodds, Madeline Bartle, William White, Savigny Laing and Maxwell Smith. The average attendance during the year was 235, which was larger than during the previous year. A new department, that of the Kindergarten had been started during the year and has been successfully conducted by Miss A. Williamson. The teaching staff had suffered the loss of several teachers during the year, Misses A. J. and G. Denison and Mrs. A. J. Johnson having retired, while Rev. J. A. Wilson's department was greatly regretted as he had been a most faithful Sunday School worker. The home department had at the present time a membership of 100; the report suggested that the parents of the scholars should take a greater interest in the home department.

EXCELLENT PAPER ON JULIUS CAESAR

First Meeting in the New Year of the T. A. S. Ladies' Literary Association.

Miss Coleman Gave the Paper of the Evening—Splendid Musical Programme.

The Ladies' Literary Association of St. Peter's T.A.S., held its first meeting of the New Year last evening, and, as in the past, the meeting was in every way a successful one. An excellent essay on "Julius Caesar" was read by Miss Coleman. Miss Coleman's choice of subject involved the knowledge of a considerable amount of ancient history, and on this point she proved herself thoroughly well versed. In clear and beautiful language she portrayed the life of "Julius Caesar" in all its phases and conditions, showing him to be the greatest among men of antiquity. The story of his banishment from Rome, his subsequent return, involving all the glory and splendour of the returning hero, was also particularly interesting. The writer also made special mention of many other notable characteristics and qualifications of Caesar, dwelt at some length on his ability as an orator, statesman, ruler, general, and in fine gave a most interesting history of one of the greatest men of ancient times.

The essay of the evening was an excellent opening of the new season, and was thoroughly appreciated by the audience.

A new feature, and one of much interest has been added to these literary evenings. Answers to questions deposited in the question box in the Library are given by Rev. Dr. O'Brien, and aside from the interest in the different topics, a great amount of useful information is imparted. The meeting was presided over last evening by Miss Deanzard, and the musical portion of the programme, ably contributed to by Miss S. Kelly and Miss E. Taylor.

The next literary meeting will be be held on Friday, Jan. 27th, when an essay on the subject, "Books as Friends," will be read by Miss E. M. Powers.

At a committee meeting held last evening Miss O'Connell was elected President of the Association for the balance of the year.

Anniversary Services.

Anniversary services will be held in the Springville Presbyterian church, to-morrow and Monday, the 15th and 16th. Rev. Wm. Beatty, B.A., of Cobourg, will preach at 10.30 a.m., and 7.30 p.m. High tea will be served on Monday, the 16th, from 4.30 to 7.30. A choice programme commences at 8 o'clock. Revs. W. Beatty, J. G. Potter and W. Robeon, will deliver short addresses. St. Andrew's choir, of Peterborough, will deliver several selections. Solo numbers will be given by Miss Florence Miller, Peterborough, and Miss McCutcheon, of Toronto, Mr. Gilbert Scott, and Mr. Mark Wilson, Peterborough. Miss Elizabeth McDonald, a talented elocutionist of Toronto, will also appear. Do not miss the treat of the season. Admission, 25 22cents. 1d

EARLY RESIDENT PASSES AWAY

Late Mrs. John W. Tate was One of the First Residents of Peterborough.

The announcement in to-day's issue of the demise of Eliza Webster, widow of Col. John W. Tate, C.E., chronicles the passing away of one of the early residents of Peterborough. The deceased was a daughter of James Hall, of Washington, Georgia, U.S.A., a brother of the late John Hall, who died at Buckhorn in the 80's. In 1847 Eliza Webster Hendricks Hall came to Peterborough to reside with the latter who then lived in the homestead situated in the block north of Murray street, between Water and Dickson streets, overlooking Hall's dam, mills, etc., afterwards known as Dickson's.

In 1852 Miss Hall married Col. Tate and leaves a family of five children, Robert Frederick, of Toronto; Thos. Barker, Bertram Mitford and Lucas Elizabeth, of Buffalo, and Alfred Orde, of New York.

Her remains were brought to Peterborough accompanied by her four sons and placed in the receiving vaul tat the Little Lake Cemetery, the funeral taking place from the G.T.R. station to-day at noon, and will be interred beside her husband in the spring.

Passepartout Binding.

The long winter evenings offer splendid opportunities for using passepartout binding. The Peterborough Bookshop has a well assorted stock of all the different shades—white, black, red, grey, green gold. Also mounting board in all the popular shades — gray, green, brown, red and blue. Pebbled white bristol board, plain and figured patent hangers, tube paste and glue, for passepartouting. A. H. Stratton & Co.

The work of installing the underground cables of the Canadian Machine Telephone Co., began this morning under the supervision of Mr. P. The workmen are to-day engaged in wiring and rodding the ducts, preparatory to pulling through the cables. It is expected that the cables will be placed within a fortnight. In the meantime the linemen will be engaged in completing the aerial work.

—The members of the Town Council will will worship in St. Paul's church to-morrow evening, and Rev. Dr. Crothers of the George street

INSTINCT.

Instinct counts for much!

Unless a man has the tailoring instinct he can't tailor clothes.

His judgment will be inaccurate — his estimates out—his proportions and balances wrong.

He can't tell what type physique a man belongs to, although the custom tailors recognize only two — regulars and stout. Doesn't understand the little shades of differences between certain physiques of the same type—he invariably guesses, and guesses wrongly, consequently his clothes lack fit — balance — style snap, and do not become the personality.

Each Semi-ready tailor is one instinctively.

His artistic knowledge of proportions — his intuitive and unerring judgment of physique enable him to tailor clothes that fit, balance properly, look well and permanently retain these features.

Semi-ready tailoring is thoroughly individual and distinctive throughout.

SABBATH SCHOOL TEACHERS' MEETING

First Meeting of the Year of the Primary and Junior Sabbath School Teachers' Union.

The Primary and Junior Sunday School Teachers' Union held its first session for 1905 last night in the Y.M.C.A. Mrs. E. D. Lewis, taught the primary lesson. Her black board work was unique, simplifying the sublime truths of John I, to the smallest child's capacity.

Rev. A. H. Brace gave the lesson for the intermediate classes.

Teachers of all classes from the Bible class to the primary got valuable information for the lesson of the following Sunday, equal to several evenings alone spent in research and study.

Miss Williamson the President, is an expert in her department. She has charge each Friday of the "Child Study," outlined by Professor Murray.

A brilliant programme is prepared for the next three months and a successful term is looked for.—Com.

TRENT VALLEY LEAGUE OPENING

Keene and T. A. S. Will Meet on Monday Night Here.

The Trent Valley League season will open in Peterborough on Monday night with a game between Keene and the T. A. S. Both teams will be considerably changed from the line-up last season and have some pretty fast players signed for this year.

Last year Keene and the T. A. S. were the two teams which fought it out to the last and the same rivalry will no doubt exist this year between them. The T. A. S. have some pretty speedy men on their team this year and will give a good account of themselves before the season is over. They intend to start out the season at home with a win if possible.

—The aldermen will be preached to in St. Paul's church Sunday evening. They would naturally prefer to have a

LAST NIGHT'S MEETING

Those who attended the Liberal meeting in the Opera House last evening heard a most comprehensive and masterly analysis of the issues in the campaign now on. Hon. G. P. Graham, the Provincial Secretary, Hon. J. R. Stratton, his predecessor in the office, and R. F. McWilliams each in his individual way, but always with a frank honesty that carried conviction, presented the record of the Government; contrasted it with that of the Opposition; refuted the charges made by that Opposition showing the hypocrisy and, in some cases plainly, wilful falsehood; and, finally, depicted the great future of this already great province under the comprehensive policy as laid down in the Liberal platform.

The past record of the Government whether led by Mr. Ross or his predecessors was shown to be the best possible security for the fulfilment of the promises made for the future if not, indeed, for the bettering of those promises. There can be no reason for any rational Liberal changing his allegiance and there are many why Conservatives, who are not party men first and Ontario men afterwards, might very consistently support the present administration.

But no matter how strong a Government may be the personality of the candidate is a vital factor in the campaign in any particular riding. It is claimed with considerable force that the Liberals of West Peterborough have in Mr. McWilliams a candidate with many excellent qualifications commending him to their support. He is young, energetic, of proven ability in his profession, of political training, of successful experience in municipal affairs, and—what is essential in any candidate—popular with all classes of the community.

Mr. McWilliams has taken part in many different things in town. He has been actively associated with athletic sports, he is an officer in the regiment; he was a leading member of the Council and a possible candidate for the Mayor's seat. In everything he has entered he has displayed such persistent energy combined with ability, as to furnish promise of excellent services as a representative.

In default of anything better to urge against him, his opponents say he is young. The charge is admitted. Mr. McWilliams is undoubtedly a young man, having just passed his thirtieth birthday. But youth is not always a matter of years. Experience counts for something. It is to be noted that it is now more than ten years since Mr. McWilliams made his first political speech. Ever since that time, he has been doing yeoman's service in both Dominion and Provincial election contests in the way of stumping the East Riding, and Liberals who have been elected there have frequently acknowledged their indebtedness for the work he has done.

But this is not all the experience Mr. McWilliams has had. He had been home from college only a little over three years when he first ran for the Town Council. Though younger than he now is, he was elected at the head of the poll. After he had served in the Council a year he was again elected at the head of the poll—by the largest vote ever recorded in a Peterborough aldermanic contest. In both years he was chairman of the Legal Committee, which deals with some of the council's most important business. Some indication of how Mr. McWilliams fulfilled his duties as alderman is evidenced by the fact that his name was freely mentioned for the Mayoralty at the recent election.

So that when the whole truth is known, Mr. McWilliams' youth is seen to belong to the credit side of the account, rather than otherwise. His youth gives him the best years of his life to devote to the service of the community. To realize his ambitions he must make himself a representative whom the riding will appreciate. Thus their interests are identical. Coupled with his youth Mr. McWilliams has an experience that many an older possible candidate lacks. Youth and experience make an ideal but rare combination. Whether the Government or the candidate be considered, the electors of West Peterborough will best serve their own interests by voting for Mr. McWilliams.

MR. BORDEN LEADER.

The Conservative Opposition in the House of Commons have a leader at last. Mr. Borden has again consented to lead the forlorn hope attack upon the Treasury Benches. The chief significance of Mr. Borden's reinstalment in the leadership, is not that Mr. Borden has developed any particular brilliancy or success as a leader, but it emphasizes the fact that he represents the best end of a bad bargain—that he is the only one on whom the various factions into which the party is divided, could unite. If any other of the putative aspirants had been selected, the disappointed might have been at each other's throats, but Mr. Borden is so mildly amiable, so inertly innocuous, that the factions have been able to agree upon him. Mr. Foster who was a runner-up for the leadership on a former occasion is in that position as a permanency, and has been placated by the honour of "holding Mr. Borden's job" till the latter can get a seat in the House, involving the routine of the resignatio sent by some Conservative of his seat—probably Mr. Kidd of Carleton—and the necessary time to issue writs and hold an election. Mr. Borden has shown some spirit and good sense in attaching conditions to his acceptance of the leadership. He stipulated for a free hand, a thorough organization of the party and favours holding a Dominion Conservative Convention, to show the party really where they are at.

LIBERAL PLATFORM SUMMARIZED.

The Planks on Which the Ross Government Appeals to the Electors.

First—Education.

That the school system of the Province in all its departments should have in view those practical courses of study which specially fit the youth of Ontario for agricultural and industrial pursuits, and that the Provincial University should receive the general support of the Legislature.

That the Agricultural Department should continue the educational work of the Agricultural College, Farmers' Institutes, dairy schools, good roads associations and other similar associations with undiminished zeal and efficiency

Second—Purity of Elections.

That every form of bribery and all fraudulent schemes to defeat the honest purpose of the electorate are contrary to the spirit and traditions of the Liberal party.

That the sanctity of the ballot box should be protected and all offences against the Election Act punished.

That every riding should conduct its organization without outside interference or assistance.

Third—Railway Assessment and Taxation.

That railway corporations should contribute to municipal taxation in the same proportion as other private property

Fourth—Extension of Government Railway.

That the Government Railway from North Bay should be extended to the Grand Trunk Pacific, and, if practicable, to James' Bay, and that town sites on the Government Railway and Grand Trunk Pacific should be surveyed and sold for the benefit of the Province.

Fifth—Timber and Minerals for the Settlers.

That all settlers on agricultural lands in the unorganized districts be allowed the use of every description of timber on such lands, pine alone excepted.

That minerals on such lands should not be reserved, but should be the property of the patentee, and that prospectors should be dealt with liberally.

Sixth—Provincial Charters.

That companies of a local or Provincial character should not be removed from Provincial control on the declaration that they are for "the general advantage of Canada."

Seventh—Pine and Pulp Wood Lands.

That only the matured timber on pine lands should hereafter be sold, with a view to the preservation of the forests as a source of revenue for all time to come, and that pulp concessions and water powers north of the height of land should be sold at public auction.

Eighth—Provincial Commission for Protection to Municipalities.

That a Commission, having authority to deal with the bonding powers of companies concerned in the operation of public utilities and the application of municipalities in consolidating debenture debts and other matters of a similar character, would be a source of great protection to the public.

Ninth—The Labor Question.

That the various branches of the public service affecting public labor, such as the Bureau of Labor and factory inspection, should be consolidated, and legislation, if possible, be obtained to avoid strikes and to prevent unskilled alien and prison labor from interfering with the opportunities of the working classes.

Tenth—Minister of Colonization and Labor.

That a Minister of Colonization and Labor be appointed for the settlement of New Ontario and for promoting immigration of a suitable character into the older parts of the Province.

Eleventh—Temperance Reform.

That steps should be taken to reduce the consumption of intoxicating liquors, to prevent the sale of liquors on Sundays and during prohibited hours, and to secure the most vigorous enforcement of the license laws, to encourage and make effective the adoption of the local option provisions of the License Act, and such other changes as are more fully set forth in the finding of the Convention.

Twelfth—Public Utilities.

That the greatest facilities should be afforded municipalities to obtain the ownership of all franchises of a public character affecting the use of water, light or transportation within the municipality.

PREMIER BALFOUR'S SPEECH

Two Great Problems With Which the Government Had to Deal—He Rather Avoided the Fiscal Question—Closer Union With the Colonies—Britain Leading For the World's Peace.

London, Jan. 13.—Premier Balfour, speaking at a banquet given in his honor at Glasgow last night, avoided the fiscal question, except to say that he had nothing to add to or retract from his Edinburgh speech. He hoped conferences with the colonies soon would be quite as essentially a working part of the Empire as the House of Commons.

The two great problems with which the Government had to deal, Mr. Balfour said, were the defence of Afghanistan, and the re-armament of the army which involved a cost as much as any continental nation was able to bear. When this was completed the British army would be in advance of that of any other nation.

Continuing, Mr. Balfour said the fault with the Empire was not that it was too small, but that it was too great and powerful, and at the same time under-developed. One of the greatest problems before the country was that of development, and the country was only just beginning to realize the importance of further development of all countries under the British flag.

Mr. Balfour briefly alluded to the "Dogger Bank affair." He said Great Britain was leading in the movement looking to the world's peace. In the case of the Dogger Bank incident Britain had skirted the precipice of war when a small want of tact would have been a discredit to civilization.

In conclusion, Mr. Balfour urged that it was the duty of all Britons to build up the machinery by which a closer union with the colonies could be produced.

PART OF WORKING MACHINERY.

Premier Balfour's Ideal Concerning the Conferences of Colonies.

London, Jan. 13.—(C.A.P.)—Premier Balfour entertained at dinner at Glasgow devoted much of his speech to recent army and navy reform, but he made no mention of the abolition of the dockyards. Referring to the subject of colonial conferences he said they were at first sporadic, but he hoped were soon to be systematic and as much a part of the ordinary working machinery of the Empire as the House of Commons itself. He would be ashamed to give his audience the impression that all difficulties had been surmounted, and had no wish to under-value the task the country has to perform. He dared not prophesy with too much confidence whether it would be successful, but he had no doubt of the energy in the forward movement. For his own part he would rather fail with those who held the great ideal which he saw before him than succeed with purblind and unimaginative persons whose views never got beyond their own parish and who were incapable of picturing what our great colonies were to become or framing in their own minds an idea of what the British Empire might be and what it might do for the cause of peace, freedom and civilization. Concluding Mr. Balfour said that if those great and growing communities, when they reach the full plentitude of their strength, should find themselves not loosely connected with the Mother Country, but bound by organic ties, no stress of war or difficulty, no danger from within or threats from without could either shake or, for an instant, imperil us.

The Morning Post expresses surprise that Mr. Balfour passed over the fiscal question so lightly and at the vagueness of his reference about the conference. Any alteration in the methods of managing the Empire needs the fullest consideration.

Commenting on Balfour's reticence on the fiscal question, The Times says he probably judged that Chamberlain was doing all necessary in that direction.

REASON No 5

WHY YOU SHOULD USE

Red Rose Tea

Because it is perfectly clean.

Wouldn't you like to know that the tea you drink has not been touched by human hand since it was plucked on the plantation?

This is what you get in Red Rose Tea. The old method of rolling and packing tea by hand has been entirely done away with on the tea estates where Red Rose Tea is produced. There, as well as in the blending and packing rooms, machinery — scrupulously clean machinery—is used exclusively.

Red Rose Tea is never touched by hand after being plucked.

This fact alone will help you enjoy drinking it.

The Blue Label is recommended.

WIVES ARE SI...

American Women Boils Over About the Marital Conditions in the Old Land —How the Thing Is Done.

To an American woman living in England, there is no natural phenomenon that strikes such awe and amazement to her soul as John Bull exercising his full marital authority.

She experiences some vivid emotions, watching him as a sort of large and masterful fate, controlling the destinies of his household to doctrine of free will is a dead letter.

It is possible that the memory of her own over-indulgent father is still fresh in Miss America's mind. Then there are her sisters, wedded to men who, if the truth were told, are often despoiled and tyrannized over by their wives.

All her life she has seen womenfolk keep a strong upper hand in relations matrimonial, and the shock of contrasting a petticoat governed United States with the supreme man power of Britain rather takes her breath away.

I clearly recall—it was during my first tour in Europe—that I received a somewhat startling impression of masculine superiority as exemplified in the British Isles. We were traveling down to Dover by the Continental Express, and among my companions was a stalwart individual, tall, spare and looking, as so many upper class Englishmen do, like an ancient Roman in modern clothes.

He was accompanied by a shy, plainly dressed little wife and a man friend. I gathered from their conversation that the Romanesque personage was a member of Parliament and one of some consideration.

Entering the carriage he unhesitatingly occupied the one vacant corner seat, and after casually tossing a magazine to the drab colored lady opposite, gave himself up to his papers and talk about sessions, divisions and committee meetings in the House.

Between studying dreary fizzle-headed fashion plates and listening respectfully to the men's observations, poor Madame had a dull time of it until we neared Dover. At this point her interest seemed to revive, for she opened a small handbag and, extracting a clothes brush and chamois cloth, set to work.

And at what, do you suppose?

She carefully wiped free of dust first one of her husband's boots, polished them until the dimmed leather shone immaculate; then, turning down the hems of his trousers, she whisked them neatly from below the knee.

Leaning back at this juncture to study the effect of her labors, she spied a thread, pounced upon it, patted and smoothed the elderly legs until satisfied with their appearance, and finally with a pleased air sat contemplating her mate.

Now, all this time H.R.H. the M. P., never so much as stirred an eyelash. Buried in the columns of a Times leader, he was simply oblivious of the whole sartorial transaction.

Had she not served him in just such humble fashion for thirty years? And to him there was nothing new in this performance that left me wide eyed and agape with sheer wonder.

When we pulled into the station the high-nosed old legislator gathered up his papers, and, still talking to his man friend, stalked out of the carriage without so much as a glance at his wife. She it was who gave directions to the porters, and the last I saw of them madame was trotting dutifully in the rear, and over her arm was his Lordship's top coat borne as reverently as though it were the orifiamme, or sacred relic, from Treves.

Col. Younghusband in London.

Colonel Frank Younghusband, C.I.E., the hero of the political mission and military expedition to Lhassa, has, says the London correspondent of The Scotsman, arrived in London. He has well deserved a long holiday, but that the Royal Geographical and other learned societies and circles are not likely to respect. Already a gold medalist of the Royal Geographical Society, since his wonderful exploration of Manchuria and his travels from Pekin to India by Chinese Turkestan in 1886-7, and on the Pamirs, Hunza and Chitral thereafter, it is difficult to see how his unique exploit in opening up Thibet at last can receive further recognition save from the King a month hence. I understand that the still youthful officer and traveler need not be expected to display any trophies or even curiosities from the centre of Lamaism. His strict prohibition of looting was carefully respected even by the poorest camp follower. No doubt his officers paid large prices for the quaint and monstrous curios which the Lamas pressed on their attention. Their leader's solitary possession is two pieces of brocade which, as reported at the time, he was compelled to accept as a parting remembrance. It is enough that he has brought home the treaty, duly signed at Lhassa, but yet to be ratified at Pekin. His one curiosity is the table and the Union Jack on which the treaty was locally signed, and that will doubtless be reserved for the King himself. His arrival is contemporaneous with the news that the Dalai Lama has been interned by the Chinese Emperor in Urga, where

He was advised to try Bu-Ju, the Kidney Pill, and was very soon able to leave the hospital, and is now at work again. SUNLIGHT SOAP

With ordinary soap a woman has to work so hard and so long on wash day she has no time for preparing any of the family meals. Wash day is a trial, and the good wife faces each with a sigh of despair.

Sunlight Soap makes all the difference in the world. No toiling—no rubbing—no boiling—less than half the labor with much better results. Most women are all through their wash by twelve o'clock when they wash with Sunlight Soap the Sunlight way. It makes child's play of work.

PRIMROSE APHORISMS.

Lord Rosebery on the Best Books to Read and Buy.

The Earl of Rosebery, in opening the new Carnegie free library at West Calder, Midlothian, recently, discoursed on books worth reading, and complained that many of the best of them had fallen into neglect.

That knowledge is power, said Lord Rosebery, is a great truth, but it is not the whole truth.

Knowledge is power, but that does not necessarily mean book knowledge; book knowledge is only a part of the knowledge that constitutes power.

The man of vigorous life among men will beat the man of books always and at everything in this world.

Reading is only a partial aid to that knowledge of life which makes the perfection of mankind. You should have your hours of study, but should not, for your hours of study, neglect your hours of action.

The great difficulty that lies before every man of energy in this world is to adjust the balance between his life of study and his life of action.

When the object is to refresh and to exalt, to lose the cares of this world in the world of imagination, then the book is more than a means. It is an end in itself. It refreshes, exalts and inspires the man.

And the best of that refreshment is that it does not require the assistance of whiskey or any other stimulant. Alcohol is incompatible with this refreshment. A quiet pipe is a different thing. It may aid not immaterially in the process to which I wish to lead you.

But there should be an index, free from all private influence of authors and publishers, to tell what are the books you ought to read and the books you ought to buy, which are not by any means the same thing.

There are two further classes of books—the books you borrow and return, and the books you borrow and do not return.

The non-return of books has ended more friendships and terminated more affections than any other cause of which I am cognizant.

The man who borrows one volume of a set of volumes and never returns it is a man who should be treated like vermin—trapped or shot on sight.

My ideal index is that which tells the best book to read on any subject, but my fear is that you will get nobody to frame such an index, because his life would not be safe.

In literature we need one who will act the part of the muezzin on the tower of the mosque, summoning faithful Mahometans to prayer—one who will raise his voice and recall the names of good books and good authors which stand in danger of being forgotten, such as Sydney Smith.

Exploring Unknown Canada.

Word has been received by the headquarters of the Northwest Mounted Police that a patrol has left Dawson with the object of making its way across the unknown region, three or four hundred miles in width, between Dawson and Fort MacPherson and Herschel Island, at or near the mouth of the Mackenzie River. At present the only communication with these posts is in summer from Edmonton by river. If the exploration succeeds a much shorter route will be available. The region to be attempted is entirely unknown, except for reports from Indians. The party consists of a non-com. and three or four constables, with several Indians.

Fatal Applause.

An English lady snake charmer named Leyton was performing at a village called Vaelhinger, in Rhenish Prussia, in a menagerie with a boa constrictor. This she permitted to coil round her neck and breast. Her courage met with thunders of applause from the spectators, who little dreamed that by their signs of approval they had sealed the poor charmer's death warrant. Such, however, proved to be the case, for, apparently infuriated at their demonstrations, the reptile tightened its coils and amid the shrieks of the public strangled the lady on the platform before anything could be done to assist her. The snake was immediately killed.

Cautious.

"Leonidas!" exclaimed Mr. Meekton's wife on his return from a journey. "I am at a loss to understand your conduct when we parted. I said goodby to you."

"Yes, Henrietta."

"Why didn't you say goodby in response?"

"I was just about to do so, Henrietta, but I checked myself. I was afraid you would accuse me of trying to have the last word again."

THE HEAVIEST MAIL.

Plum Puddings From England Received at Toronto Post-office.

The biggest Christmas mail in Toronto's history has been passing through the General Postoffice in the last few days, says The Toronto Telegram of the 28th Dec. The excess is measured in tons. Fifty extra clerks have been helping the 320 regular employes of the postoffice and on Monday fifty wagons went out loaded with letters and parcels for the city delivery. Tuesday morning there were still great quantities of mail matter in the Adelaide street building waiting for distribution, but to-day the floors will be cleared. The postoffice Christmas will be over.

The letter carriers, who did the big work of Monday, began very early in the morning. Some of them worked on the afternoon and evening of Sunday, though it is the practice to minimize the Sunday work. The extra work and teaming is paid for by the Postoffice Department.

The parcel mail from England this Christmas was exceptionally heavy. The last lot of 2,584 parcels was going through the postoffice yesterday, occasioning the activity of a customs officer and a small army of clerks. These parcels come over in a specially constructed wicker hamper, the output of an institution for the blind in England. Each parcel has on it a description of the contents, and these descriptions make an interesting study. They are a revelation of what the majority of people in the old land do not know about the resources of Canada, and the comforts of "colonial" life. For instance, the postoffice contained any number of plum puddings, specimens for Christmas dinners. Confectionery, dolls, toys and clothing come in these parcels. One bundle picked out by Superintendent Ross from a pile was billed as containing "plum pudding and socks." There was also a small hamper containing mince pies.

The enormous Christmas mail has been handled without the least congestion at the postoffice, and things will be back to-morrow in the old groove. In addition to the holiday mail to be disposed of there are two truck loads of circulars—60,000 of them—sent out by a local municipal candidate.

THE WONDERS OF ELECTRICITY

Now Used for Purifying Flour

The New Process Makes Bread and Pastry Lighter, Sweeter, Whiter and More Wholesome—Women of Canada Delighted.

What is Electricity?
nobody knows, not even Edison.
What does it do?
everybody knows.
It runs street cars—telephones—automobiles,
furnishes light—heat—power
—detects and defeats disease
—enables the doctors to see clear through a man.
Performs all sorts of wonders
—not least of which is acting as

Nature's Great Purifier

because when the world's dust, dirt and disease germs have been taken up by the air, and hang over the earth in clouds—electricity shoots lightning through the clouds

—down comes the rain, the atmosphere is purified and we exclaim

Electricity in the Flour Mill.

Something like that but minus the thunder and lightning,
—silently—swiftly—surely electricity performs its miracle in the "Royal Household" mill—the only mill in the Dominion of Canada where electricity is used for purifying purposes.

When the grinders — separators — sifters—air-filters, have ground and reground — purified and repurified the flour again and again, all down through the seven floors of the big "Royal Household" mill until it is nearer perfection than flour ever was before—electricity says—

"POLICYLESS POLICY" OF THE ONTARIO CONSERVATIVES

Splendid Rally in the Liberal Interests Last Night in the Opera House ---Hon. G. P. Graham, Provincial Secretary, Makes a Political Address in Which he Exposes the Tactics of the Conservatives---A Policy of Slander of our Public Men---A Government That Does Things---The Liberal Policy one of Progressive Reform----The aid to the Soo Industries Justified by the Results—The Corruption Cry Effectively Dealt With---Excellent Financial Standing of Ontario.

Enthusiastic Reception and Thoughtful and Able Speech of Mr. McWilliams, the Liberal Candidate—Hon. J. R. Stratton, Former Representative Deals Broadly with the Government's Record and Policy---Shows Great Advantages Arising From Business Foresight and Management of the Liberal Government in the Affairs of Ontario—Excellent Prospects for a Liberal Success in West Peterborough---Enthusiastic Meeting of Local Liberals.

The first public mass meeting held in the town during this campaign in the interests of Mr. McWilliams, was held in the Opera House, and in spite of the powerful counter attraction, was attended by a large and very appreciative and enthusiastic audience, which comprised many ladies who with their escorts, occupied and filled the gallery. The hall was very tastefully decorated with flags and bunting, and the following mottos adorned the walls and at the same time struck the key note of the Liberal position:—"God Save the King," "Our Motto, Progressive Reform," "McWilliams for Peterborough," "Ross and New Ontario."

Upon the platform there were seated the candidate, Hon. G. P. Graham, Provincial Secretary, Hon. J. R. Stratton and Mr. D. O'Connell, who was chairman, and Mr. McWilliams the Liberal candidate.

Mr. McWilliams the first speaker, made an excellent impression as the result of an excellent speech, not long, but thoughtful and modest in his presentation of his claims to electoral support, and strong and hopeful in his presentation of the claims of the Liberal Government to support on its record and policy. Hon. G. P. Graham, made his first appearance on a public platform in Peterborough and was very cordially received and listened to. He dealt with the respective claims of the two parties to the confidence of the electorate and by contrasting the splendid record and policy of the Government with the absence of any claim in the nature of a definite policy on behalf of the Conservative party upon the support of the people, justified his designation of the Conservative attitude in this election as "policyless policy." He dealt in a very effective, and, at times, amusing manner with the hollowness and hypocrisy of the cry from the tainted lips of Conservative politicians of "corruption," as against Liberals with never an admission that the Conservatives had ever been guilty of wrong-doing in the slightest degree. The manner in which Mr. Graham dealt with this branch of his speech, was quite illuminating and will serve to set many persons thinking as to the attitude they should hold towards the corruption cry raised by the Conservatives, the only plea they advance for being placed in office. Hon. Mr. Stratton, whose hearty reception showed that he had lost none of his old time popularity, dealt very effectively with general questions, emphasing particularly the development policy of the Government, and demonstrated what it had accomplished in placing the province in the first rank and how necessary the continuance of such a policy was to the continued progress of the Province of Ontario in all its interests. The meeting as a whole was a very great success, and Mr. McWilliams has very great reason to be pleased with the promise it gives of the success of his candidature which is daily gaining strength as the campaign advances, with every prospect of a triumphant issue on January 25th.

Mr. O'Connell in introducing the speakers, said that for the first time in eighteen years the Liberal party in West Peterborough had a new standard bearer in a Provincial election. Hon. Mr. Stratton had been compelled to retire from public life by the demands of his private business and West Peterborough felt the deepest regret at that retirement. The peculiar needs of West Peterborough had developed in Mr. Stratton a splendid representative service, and he retired from the best administrated department in the Government. (Applause.) Mr. McWilliams was practically of the same age as Mr. Stratton when he entered public life, and had the same ambitions, the same energy, and the same untiring capacity for work, and promise of successful service for this constituency. Mr. McWilliams need make no apology for being a young man. He had his whole future to develop into usefulness, and the West Riding had the career of the young man sent to the Legislature eighteen years ago as a justification for supporting Mr. McWilliams. If it was a question of choice between candidates, the electors would make no mistake in choosing Mr. McWilliams. That was not the whole question. It was to decide what would be the administration of the province, to pass judgment as to the claims of the two parties to the public confidence. The Liberal Government had given a particularly strong and effective administration, so effective and perfect that their opponents had no fault to find with it, and all the latter could do was to raise the cry of corruption against their opponents, instead of showing a capacity for administration and public service. With a few words of graceful reference, the chairman introduced the Liberal candidate.

The Liberal Candidate.

Mr. McWilliams, on coming forward to speak, was received with enthusiastic applause. He spoke as follows:

Mr. Chairman, Ladies and Gentlemen.—I have the honour to come before you this evening as the nominee of the Liberal party for the representative of this Riding in the Legislative Assembly of the Province. Were I speaking in almost any other Riding I would feel that I should begin with an apology for aspiring to such an honour at the age at which I now am, but in this Riding which nearly twenty years ago made an experiment of sending a very young man to Parliament in the person of Mr. Stratton, it is scarcely necessary to make such an apology. It is safe to say that there is no person in this Riding, whatever his politics, who regrets that on that occasion the scoffingly termed "boy" candidate was elected to the Provincial Assembly, for certainly no Riding has ever had a more faithful or efficient representative. (Applause.) For myself I do not need any introduction to you, I was born and brought up amongst you. I have been associated with hundreds in this town in business, in sports and in social life, and I have been one of your representatives in the Municipal Council. You have had ample opportunity to judge of me in public as well as in private affairs, and it is for you now to judge, and not for me to discuss, whether I am a fit man to send as your representative to the Assembly or not, and whether the right material is in me to make it worth your while giving me an early start in public life. Most of all I stand for the verdict of the young men in what is in a peculiarly high degree a young man's town. They know me best, many of them have grown up with me and most of them have been associated with me in some, at least, of the many things in which I have been actively engaged in in this town. I will leave the question of the fitness of the Liberal candidate in this election to their and your good judgment and generosity without further discussing it except to thank you for the cordiality with which I have been received throughout my personal canvass. If you do me the honour to send me as your representative to the Legislature, I shall make it my aim to give you such faithful and active service as will enable me to come before you at the next election without fear or regret.

Good Government Record.

I come before you in this election as a supporter of the present Liberal Administration. I do not profess to believe that everything the Government or the Liberal party has done is right or wise, nor do I pledge myself to support everything the Government may do in the future, nor to oppose everything the Opposition may propose. I have not been brought up to believe that membership in the Liberal party means a slavish support of everything that party may do. The Liberal party is, rather, an association of those who believe that we want a constant policy of reform in our political affairs, who think that we can never reach that stage where we can fold our hands and be satisfied; that not a single year should be allowed to pass that does not place upon our statute books some law to help to make the conditions of living in this country better for the great mass of the people. We want at all times and in all departments of our public life a policy of progressive reform and it is because I believe that the Government under the leadership of Hon. Mr. Ross has followed that policy and has maintained the remarkable record of Sir Oliver Mowat that I am here tonight as a supporter of that Government. Ever since Confederation with but a brief and partial exception the affairs of this Province have been in the charge of a Liberal Cabinet and as the result we stand to-day in a position unrivalled by any other Province in the Dominion, by any State in the American Union, by any country with which we can make a fair comparison. We have an educational system admitted to be the most complete and thorough on this continent; we have provided public institutions for the care of the afflicted which do credit to the generosity and humanity of our people, we can boast a system of technical instruction in agriculture, which is the envy and the model of all our competitors.

Good Financial Standing.

We have spent economically, yet liberally on colonization roads and railways, and with all these expenditures, we stand in a financial position unrivalled by that of any other country in the whole world. The provinces of Ontario and Quebec started out at Confederation with a clean sheet, the new Dominion taking over the whole of the debt. To-day the province of Quebec has a debt of $25,000,000, the province of Ontario not a cent. Last year Quebec had to pay over $1,500,000 to foreign creditors for interest on their public debt, before they could spend one cent on any useful public work. Ontario not only did not pay one cent in interest charges but received from the banks a quarter of a million as interest on its deposits. The Liberal Administration has not only met all the usual charges of provincial government, but has paid to the municipalities in grants to education, to agriculture, to roads, to charities, and in relieving them of the care of the afflicted, over $3,000,0000 a year, every dollar of which means just so much saved on the taxes which you and every other elector pay to the local municipality. In these various ways the County of Peterborough has received a sum, exceeding $900,000, and without these grants the debt of every municipality in the country would be more than double what it is. I say that in the face of such a record, only some large question of public policy, raising new and distinct issues can justify the people of this province, or of this riding, in withdrawing the confidence which they have so long placed in the Reform Government.

A Policyless Opposition.

If that is so, then upon what question do the Opposition appeal to the people which will justify the voters in turning out the Government. I leave it to any man in this hall to name a single item of large public policy brought forward by the Conservatives in this election. Upon what issue are the people asked to change their allegiance? Mr. Whitney has led his party for six years, and to-day it is as weak as it was then in capable leaders, and it is as still without a policy worthy the name. They have spent six years in idle opposition, without having yet constructed a policy larger than departmental details, while their noisy criticism has not left one substantial breach in the administrative record of the Government. In fact that record is almost unchallenged. Suppose we admit that every item in the annual expenditures which has been even questioned by the Opposition as it has run the gauntlet of the Public Accounts Committee, was improper, and what does it amount it? In the whole term of the Ross Government the sum of the items so questioned has not amounted to as much as the expenditures of one day in a year. (Applause.) Is there a man her who, if he went away for a year, and left an agent in charge of his business, and when he came back could find in his crossest mood, only one day's work which he could even question, who would not promptly retain that agent in charge of his affairs? Mr. Whitney comes before you, asking you to place him in the premiership of the first province of the Dominion, and does not offer you one good ground for changing the Board of Directors of the business of the province, either in criticism of the Government's record, or in larger policy of his own. I am content to leave it to the good judgment of the electors of this riding whether there is any good ground for a change, when such is the alternative offered.

But it will be said on the other side that though the administrative record of the Government is almost unassailable, there has been so much corruption shown up in the election courts, that the Government must be utterly rotten and corrupt. Now I need hardly say here where I am so well known, that I do not propose to offer any defence of what has been done upon the Liberal side. I have no sympathy with bribery, nor stuffing of ballot boxes, nor any such practices. I ask for myself just what I want of my opponents, to have a fair field and no favour, and no hitting below the belt. But I do think it is the most arrant hypocrisy on the part of the Opposition to make continually the wildest charges of corruption against the Government, and, at the same time, be utterly silent about the equal, or greater, wrong-doing that has been on their own side. There have been, it is true, five Liberal members unseated in the last two years for corrupt practices, but so have there been five Conservatives unseated. The steamship Minnie M. sailed on a disgraceful errand, but so did the steamship Rooth only, you know, they went to stop the other fellows. There was another bye-election at the Sault, when a Liberal was elected, but that bye-election was made necessary because the Conservative elected in the general elections had been unseated for corrupt practices, as bad as anything in our history. I shall not take up your time going into this matter in detail. There are other speakers to follow who will deal with it much more ably than I could hope to do. It is after all a question of the individual man who are sent to the Legislature from each constituency, and the one thing that each voter can do to stop it, and the one thing he must do, is to see that the man for whom he votes is the kind of a man who will be above such practices. If you think that I am a man who will stoop to win elections by dishonest means, or who will connive at it being done by others, or will defend it in the Legislature, then don't vote for me. If, on the other hand, you judge that I am not of that kind, then the whole cry of corruption is not an issue in this riding at any rate, and I leave you to search from now till election day for any other good reason for turning the Government out, for electing my opponent.

Just one thing I want to mention before I leave that subject. It is said by Mr. Whitney, and echoed by all his satellites, that not one of the men who have been found guilty of corrupt practices, has been prosecuted by the law officers of the Crown, presumably because both culprits and law officials are Liberals. Now, I do not like to say hard things of an older man, but in making, and repeating, that statement, Mr. Whitney was at least, as Alexander Mackenzie used to say, "economical of the truth." The fact is that in the 25 years before Mr. Ross became premier, during which we had the present system of election trials, not a single offender had been punished, or even prosecuted, by either political party. During the last five years, while this "most corrupt, most rotten, this worse than Judas, Government," to quote Mr. Whitney, has been in power, no less than 53 such offenders have been punished by the Liberal law officers, and nearly all of them either fined from $200 to $800, or sent to the common gaol. If anyone would like the details, I have them at hand to read to you. What is more, these men have been prosecuted regardless of whether they were Liberals or Conservatives. Again, I leave it to your judgment to say whether an Opposition which appeals for your support on the strength of such sweeping, baseless charges, has any right to receive votes? (Applause.)

I shall not detain you but a minute or two longer for you have not come here to listen to me, I have spoken of the record of the Government, of the policy, or lack of policy, of the Opposition, and of corruption. I want to speak very briefly of the policy of the Government. As I have said I am a strong supporter of the Liberal Administration because its policy has been one as our motto says, of Progressive Reform. In every Department they have kept up to the needs and demands of this growing time. Our schools are being developed in accordance with the most up-to-date ideas to provide for the teaching of Agriculture and Domestic Science and Manual Training, railways and roads are being pushed into the new country, the conditions of settlement are to be altered to give the pioneer settler the full benefit of his labour, large tracts of rough land are being set aside for the preservation of the forests, our greatest source of wealth. New Ontario has been opened up with an energy and foresight which deserves the heartiest praise, and so on through every department there is the same policy of active progress. (Applause.) Upon the most important question of temperance the record and policy of the Government are exactly the same. It has been a policy of steady improvement in our license laws, and temperance men and the better class of hotelkeepers are agreed that this legislation has been of immense benefit to the country. The declared policy of the Liberal party is that th's progress shall continue and that the real evils of intemperance shall be rooted out in every way that legislation can do it. The policy of the Conservative party on temperance—what is it? The party in convention would not touch the question; the Opposition in the House has nothing to say, and Mr. Whitney's loud talk about strict enforcement of the present laws is simply farcial, when set alongside of his own actions. On one side you have an absolute lack of policy on large questions; on the other side you have a policy that is characterised by statesmanship and foresight in every department.

MR. R. F. McWILLIAMS,
Liberal Candidate in West Peterborough.

The Same Issues.

In conclusion I have just something to say. The issues in this campaign are exactly the same as they were in the campaign of two years ago. There is the same Government, the same record, the same policy, and the same Opposition. The only difference in this riding is in the candidates — that Mr. Stratton is not running and I am in his place. It is not to be expected that any man should receive such a vote as Mr. Stratton, nor would I claim for a moment that I would be as capable a representative as he. But I am starting out as he did, as a young man, with the same ambitions, and same incentives to give service, and I leave it to you to say whether it is wise to repeat the experiment of 1898 and send a young man to Parliament. I have already canvassed a large part of the town, and I have good reason for the confidence that the voters of this town, and, especially, the young men, will give me a support on the 25th of this month that will roll up a big majority in the town as well as in the country. (Loud applause.)

THE PROVINCIAL SECRETARY

The reception which Hon. George P. Graham, was given by the audience, was one which should have been in every way satisfactory and pleasing to him. He was loudly cheered upon rising to speak, and at the conclusion of his address of an hour and a quarter's duration, he was again given a demonstration.

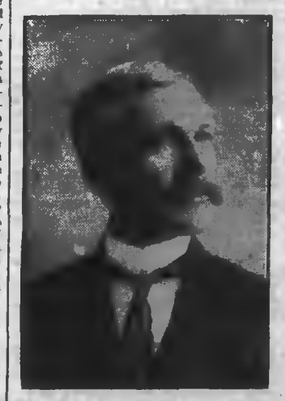
His address was given in a semi-humorous strain, which seemed to please his hearers immensely, and which, too, was most effective. He paid a high tribute to his predecessor in the office of Provincial Secretary, Hon. J. R. Stratton, and his remarks eulogistic of that gentleman were heartily applauded by the large audience. He assured his hearers that they were not as pleased to see him, as he was to be here to spend an evening in Peterborough, in the riding which for a number of years had been represented by Hon. Mr. Stratton, of whom he was the successor. This riding had done a good service for Ontario by sending to the Legislature for quite a number of years, Mr. Stratton, who structive legislation, calculated to benefit not only the constituents here but those of the whole province. Few ridings, he thought, had done as much for the province as West Peterborough had done by electing successively for so many years, his honoured predecessor.

He was glad to have an opportunity of speaking to Mr. Stratton's former constituents; he liked to look at the men who had voted for Mr. Stratton, and he also remarked humorously, that he liked to look at the wives of the men who had voted for Mr. Stratton. He had tried for a few weeks to succeed him in his office, and during that time he had had years of experience. According to the Conservative speakers and the Conservative press, there were no good Liberals, except those in their graves, but he had been in a position, better than any other man, to judge of Hon. Mr. Stratton's work, and he could say that no department in this, or any other, province, had been more ably administered than that of the Ontario Provincial Secretary, under Hon. J. R. Stratton. (Cheers.)

When he had taken charge of the Department he had not found any matters left unfinished, but everything had been left in admirable shape. The best indication of the straightforwardness and integrity, as well as efficiency, of the head of any department, or business, is the fidelity of the employees, and everyone in the Provincial Secretary's Department have only words of praise for Hon. Mr. Stratton.

Success of Young Men.

The fact that a man was young, is one which, in the speaker's opinion, was an argument in his favour. The right time to take a man to train



HON. G. P. GRAHAM,
Provincial Secretary

him for statesmanship was when he was young. He was pleased with Mr. McWilliams' speech. He showed that he possessed the inherent qualities of a successful public man. If he were elected, he would, he felt sure, do credit to the riding he was elected to represent.

The speaker said he disliked discussing the faults of some other people, which were the only apparent policy of the Conservative party, and remarked that if were the faults of the race he would not offer so much objection to it. The Conservatives, he said, were cultivating only half the farm, and were letting the other half go. They were trying to do the under-draining on the Liberals' part, but he thought that if they took a quiet walk over their own land they might find some bog holes as well, which needed draining.

No Great Principles.

If there is one great principle upon which the Conservatives hope to defeat the Liberals, they have been for 32 years looking for it, and they have not found it yet. They have a new cry for each election, and as soon as the election is over they forget all about the platform upon which they appealed to the people, and in the next succeeding contest they have another. They have no living principle upon which they can appeal to the electors.

The Liberal Record.

The Liberal party in Ontario was appealing to the electors for a return to power on the result of an honest and careful administration of the business of the province, and a wise use of the Provincial resources, and it is a significant fact that no fault has been found with the administrative record of the Liberal Government, but they say that the Liberals are not as good as they used to be. In answer to this charge, Mr. Graham said that the Liberal party of to-day stood where the party has stood for fifty years. They stood for the rights of the people, and a continued reform. For this principle the old Liberal leaders had stood, and by none was it more honourably maintained than by the Hon. G. W. Ross. (Cheers.)

The One Conservative Cry.

The only cry the Conservatives had was that of corruption. No person condones these wrong acts and the case of the Minnie M. finds no defenders. It was wrong and the Liberal party condemns it in the strongest terms. But it was a significant fact that the bye-election at which the corruption alleged by the Conservatives to have occurred, was caused by the unseating of the Conservative candidate, for the grossest corruption in which whiskey flowed like water, and the Conservative member elect was unseated and narrowly escaped disqualification.

The fact that during the last four years 47 men have been punished for corrupt practices in elections is sufficient to show that the Government is trying to stop it. In the election of 1902 eight men were reported and of these seven were Conservatives and one Liberal. In the same election there were 12,000 officials and about half a million ballots, and not one official was accused of doing anything wrong, and only four ballots were questioned.

The Conservative Attitude.

At the great Liberal Convention, attended by 5,000 men, the whole question of corruption was discussed, and condemned, and the Liberals placed themselves on record as being opposed to corruption in any particular. In the Conservative "Conference" held the next day, he could not find one word in a speech or resolution which acknowledged that there was such a thing as corruption in the Conservative party, or that since the time of Adam any Conservative had done anything wrong, and if we are to judge by their record we are to believe that they only condemn corruption when found in Liberals.

In South Ontario Mr. Smith had confessed that he had practised corruption for the purpose of defeating Hon. John Dryden, and instead of frowning down upon it Mr. Whitney and the Conservative party banqueted him and made him the Conservative candidate in the Dominion Parliament. Mr. Graham here made a most effective reply to an interrupter who remarked that Smith had confessed, to which Mr. Graham said that if, as his friend remarked, he had confessed, then the Conservatives had banqueted a confessed corruptionist and made him their candidate. (Applause.)

The Soo Case.

The Conservatives liked to talk about the Soo. It might be borne in mind that the conditions in the bye-election there arose out of the fact that at the general election in 1902 a man from another province had been there in the interests of Mr. Miscampbell the Conservative candidate, and had scattered money and (whiskey to voters, to such a degree that the election was characterised as one of the most disgraceful in the history of the province, and in the face of this, Mr. Whitney, to show his desire to put down corruption, made Mr. Miscampbell, the man in whose behalf these acts were committed, the party's organizer.

The Conservative nag could not be registered as a purest either on its performance or its pedigree.

The saints, he thought, were not all on one side neither were the sinners all on the other, as the Conservatives would have the people believe, and the only way to abolish the corrupt practices is for the leaders of both parties to join in a common crusade against it and to determine to stamp it out. Mr. Ross has taken this stand. But until Mr. Whitney is also prepared to take it also the corruption will still exist in the province. The Ross Government should not be held responsible for the wrong-doing of members of the Liberal party no more than the clergymen of a church should be held responsible for the deeds of a member of his church. In short the Conservatives of the province have a policyless policy upon which they are seeking to defeat the Government.

Ontario is being injured in the outside world by the policy of slander of public men indulged in by Mr. Whitney and the young men are being set a bad example by those who who should be their leaders.

Mr. Graham quoted from a speech delivered before the Canadian Club, by Dr. Osler, the most distinguished man in the medical profession that Canada has ever had, in which he strongly deprecated the pernicious and harmful habit of slandering the public men, and said that it was doing the country more harm in the eyes of the world than anything else, and was even a greater crime than drunkenness.

Mr. Whitney, instead of adopting a policy of slandering and back-biting should lay before the people just what he intends to do. If the Agricultural policy of the Ontario Government is a bad one, Mr. Whitney should say what he proposes to give in its place, and the same with the other departments of the Government which he attacks as being bad.

Aid to the Soo.

Mr. Graham dealt with the action of the Ontario Government in aiding the "Soo" industries, which at the time that it was proposed, and since, has been condemned by the Conservatives, Mr. Whitney even going so far as to say that the money might better have been thrown into the lake.

For a number of years back, the Governments at Toronto and Ottawa, have been trying to induce foreign capitalists to invest their money in Canada, to build up our resources and develop the country. The Duke of York, now the Prince of Wales, after his visit to Canada some years ago, said to the British people that they should send their sons to the Colonies, instead of to foreign countries, and they should also invest their money in the British colonies. The Ontario Government had at last induced American capitalists to go to the "Soo" and invest a large sum of money there, and showing their faith in the resources of the province the Government gave certain measures of assistance. There came a time, however, in the history of the Soo industries, when more capital to carry on the work was necessary or else they would have to call a halt. If it had been a private enterprise it would have been a bad policy to establish a precedent by assisting it, but it was not a private, but a great national enterprise, and it would have been a blow from which the province would not have recovered for 50 years had the Government not shown its willingness to assist, and its faith in its own property. (Applause.) In guaranteeing the $2,000,000 loan the Government had been given ample security, and even if it had been necessary to pay the money,

PETERBORO' TURNED TABLES ON LINDSAY

Locals Scored Decisive Victory Over Scugog Team Last Night.

Score was 17-5—Play Fairly Even in First Half, but Homesters Made Runaway Race in the Second.

About 1200 Spectators saw Good Game—Lindsay Quit Before Time was up.

PETERBOROUGH 17—LINDSAY 5.

The Peterboros more than turned the tables on Lindsay at the Brock street rink and wiped out of existence that 8-4 defeat in Lindsay last Monday. There was no uncertainty about the victory either and had Lindsay played out the full time, the score would have resembled that of a cricket match. As it was the locals were piling up the goals almost at will when the Lindsay time-keeper sounded the gong for some reason and started to converse with the referee. Meanwhile the Lindsay team stole quietly into the dressing room and when Referee Elliot informed them that there was still ten minutes to play, they kept on unlacing their boots and gasped "It is enough". So the game concluded just as the locals were beginning to strike a nice gait.

The match was gazed upon by nearly 1,500 people, including about 150 from Lindsay, who came down by way of special train, but who had but few opportunities to give vent to their vocal gymnastics. The match was a long drawn-out one, being full of lengthy delays from various causes. But the crowd was in good humour and did not seem to mind the stops.

As far as the play was concerned, it was fast and the style of hockey fairly good. Both teams worked combination with good effect, but both could improve in shooting. The winners lost many easy chances for scores through wild shooting, especially in the first half. The checking was at all times hard, but strict work on the part of the referee kept the play fairly clean. Any attempt at illegal work was nipped in the bud at the start.

FIRST HALF.

The game started at 8.40 o'clock and the play was of the end-to-end variety. Graham got away for a nice run and shot, but McGrath was in his place. Morgan started a rush but was checked by Taylor who passed to Pringle who scored from a long shot in five minutes. The Lindsay contingent was exuberant in spirit.

Graham broke his skate and went off with Taylor. Lindsay forwards were checking back fast and spoiled many well meant shots of the locals. Lindsay as soon as he was on Morgan got a minutes. Cavanah was ruled off and as soon as he was off Morgan got a minute. Parnell got away for a pretty rush but shot wide. He again secured the puck near centre and passed to Morgan who returned, but McGrath made a fine stop of Parnell's shot. The latter got the rubber behind the goal and passed to Morgan who tied the score in three and a half minutes.

Irving was made a spectator and Morgan broke away at centre and shot after a nice rush. The shot was stopped, but before McGrath could clear Morgan had scored.

Crowley was put off for body-checking Reilly too strenuously and the latter had to retire. Taylor coming on to take his place. In three minutes Morgan passed to Parnell, who dodged Irving and scored, making the score-board 3-1.

Irving was again ruled off. Cavanah started a rush and passed to Morgan whose shot was stopped but Cavanah slammed it through. Score 4-1.

Morgan got the puck at the face-off and Parnell scored after a very neat piece of combination play.

Lindsay had a look in for a minute and Taylor scored in one minute.

Morgan passed at centre to Cavanah who went down the side and scored by a beautiful shot. Half time was called with the score 6-2.

SECOND HALF.

At the outset Taylor took a long shot from centre which Wasson should have stopped. Score 6-3.

Morgan made the score 7-3 a few minutes later. Morgan scored again and though the goal umpire raised his hand, referee Elliot would not allow the score. Duffus was hit on the eye and a delay ensued. Crowley was playing well and broke up many rushes. Morgan passed to Cavanah who made the score 8-3.

Pringle got through the defence and Wasson skated out and checked him, but before he could get into goal again Pringle shot the puck into the nets. Score 9-4.

Taylor made a nice run down the wing and passed to Pringle who scored. Score 9-5.

But here it was that Lindsay faded away and they were never dangerous afterwards. They had shot their bolt while the locals who were in fine fettle were just striking their gait. Glover went up the ice, passed to Crowley, who handed the goods to Morgan and he score was 9-5.

Taylor had to retire and Glover went off, leaving five men a side for the rest of the game.

Parnell scored from Morgan's pass. Parnell got the puck from the face and dodged through the defence for a goal from a great shot. Score 11-5.

Crowley took a hand in the scoring and made the score 12-5 after a nice run down the wing.

Irving started a rush but Crowley checked him and sailed down the clear ice for another score.

The Lindsay defence was easily drawn out. Cavanah went up the side and passed to Morgan. Score 14-5.

Morgan again scored but it was not allowed. In a face-off in front of the goal, however, Morgan batted one through. Score 15-5.

The game was somewhat of a joke at this stage, the locals scoring at will, Morgan, Cavanah and Parnell combined for a rush, the latter scoring.

Morgan took the rubber from centre and passed to Cavanah, who made the score 17-5.

The Lindsay time-keeper concluded that his team had had sufficient and rang the gong with still ten minutes to play. The referee ordered the teams to continue but Lindsay were "all in".

ON THE SIDE.

The locals play two games with Port Perry next week.

The locals were in fine condition. They are great finishers.

The locals had no trouble in drawing out Lindsay's defence in the second half.

Now for the district championship.

It was a rude awakening for Lindsay. The visitors expected to win.

Parnell is playing great hockey these days.

The game was comparatively clean, six men being ruled off for minor offences.

Referee Elliot watched off-sides closely and kept the game clean.

When the local forwards get working together there's sure to be something doing.

It's characteristic of Lindsay to quit before time is up.

What will the Lindsay Post say? They surely can't knock the referee.

Crowley is improving in his stick-handling in every game.

The Lindsay forwards checked back fast and greatly assisted the defence.

The standing of the clubs in the district is now:—

	Won.	Lost.	Play.
Peterborough	3	1	5
Port Perry	4	1	6
Lindsay	1	5	6

The locals all did good work last night and it would be a difficult matter to pick the star. All shone at some time or other and played hockey to win. The combination of the forwards was quite effective but as before stated, the boys were quite wild in their shooting, in the first half especially, but improved as time went on. Wasson showed up in good form in the nets and picked out some warm ones which looked good. He allowed a couple of easy ones to elude him, but more than made up for this by his good work at other times. Glover played a steady and effective game at point, checking accurately and lifting in fine shape. He also worked in several nice dashes up the ice. Crowley especially in the second half played an excellent game, checking hard and making several long runs which frequently culminated in scores. Cavanah at rover had barrels of speed while his dodging-runs and great shooting were strong factors in the large score. Parnell's work was again a feature and he exhibited some beautiful stick-handling. He played a star game throughout, checking back very fast besides being foremost in every rush. He is playing better than ever this year. Morgan was always in his place at centre and fed the wings nicely. He made several long zig-zag runs and shot well. Graham was in the game for only a short time, but did good work while on the ice. He broke his skate and had to retire. On the form displayed last night, the locals should win all the remaining games.

Lindsay has a fast and well-balanced team and play good hockey, but they were up against a hard proposition last night. The forwards line is composed of fast skaters who check back well and all are good stick-handlers. The team did very fair work in the first half, but seemed to get discouraged in the latter period, so much so that they refused to finish the game. McGrath made numerous good stops in goal, while Reilly was effective while he was in the game. Irving at cover-point is a good all-round player and is about the best of the lot. Duffus at rover has speed and handles the puck cleverly while "Goosie" Taylor did effective work at centre. Pringle showed up strongly in the second half. Parkin was in the game for but a short time and had no chance to shine.

The game was full of delays. In the first place Graham had to retire and Taylor went off to even up. Then Rielly was hurt and Taylor took his place. In the second half Taylor had to quit and Glover went off leaving only five men a side for the greater part of the second half.

The locals were scoring almost at will in the second half, scoring nine goals in succession in eleven minutes. The Lindsay defence was easily drawn out while the local defence was like a wall.

The teams lined up like this:—

LINDSAY.
McGrath
Reilly
Irvine
Duffus
Pringle, Taylor, Parkins,
Graham, Morgan, Parnell.
Cavanah
Crowley
Glover
Wasson
PETERBOROUGH.

"Chaucer" Elliot gave good satisfaction as referee.

THE EXAMINING

Of eyes is not a matter of guess work with us, nor is it a case of trying on pairs of ready-made glasses. It is a science governed by principles which none but those who have studied the anatomy of the eye and the use of proper instruments can understand. We have given our best thought and study for years to this work and give you expert advice. We can fit any eye that responds to light.

WESTMINSTER ABBEY

ROMANCE AND SECRET PLACES OF THE CHURCH.

Mystery of the Door With Seven Locks That Blocks the Entrance to the Chamber That Was At One Time the Treasury of England—The Jerusalem Chamber.

To the man who thinks he knows every nook and cranny of Westminster Abbey it will probably be a surprise to learn that there are many of its most ancient and interesting parts of which he has never even caught a glimpse.

For instance, in the eastern cloister is an ancient double door so guarded against unauthorized intrusion that it can only be opened by seven keys, which are in the jealous custody of as many Government officials. Five of the keyholes of this wonderful door, which, by the way, is covered with human skins, are concealed from view by a stout iron bar which traverses it.

This door gives access to a vaulted chamber known as the chapel of the Pyx, the walls of which were standing, as they stand to-day, before ever the Norman conqueror landed on the shore of Sussex. This chamber was once the treasury of England, to which were brought "the most cherished possessions of the state." The regalia of the Scottish kings and of the Holy Cross of Holyrood were deposited here; for many a year it served as a mint for coining silver and gold; it was, centuries ago, the scene of a daring robbery, when treasure valued at £100,000 (equal to two millions of present day English money) was taken from it, and today it contains, in addition to a stone altar, some old chests, one of which is said to have held the jewels of Norman kings.

Not far away is a passage leading to the little cloister, the arched walls of which were built under the eyes of Edward the Confessor nearly eight and a half centuries ago and which has echoed to the footfall of the first William and his mailed attendants. Hidden from view under the pavement are the bases of the original columns of the Abbey, which have also stood since before the conquest, and adjoining the little cloister is a garden, shut off by high walls from the outside world, in which monks meditated and walked and prayed eight centuries ago.

At the southeast corner of the little cloister are the remains of St. Catharine's chapel, which was probably built within living memory of the conquest. The beautiful doorway which once gave access to it now serves as the entrance to one of the official residences, and in its walls are still to be seen traces of the high altar and a fireplace. Not far from this interesting relic of ancient days is a square gray tower which once served the grim purpose of a monastic prison and has also been the repository of the royal jewels (for many years it was known as the "king's jewel house") and acts of Parliament. After all these centuries of existence it still has its uses, for in it are kept the standards of weights and measures.

Few who have explored the Abbey have been privileged to inspect the chapter library, with its treasures of books and manuscripts many centuries old, or perhaps known that under the passage leading to the chapter house lies the dust of the first Abbot of Westminster, who had his day when the confessor was King of England. The chapter house, which is open to the public, has, of course, centuries of interesting memories. It was originally the chamber where the Abbot and monks used to transact their monastic business; for many generations the commons sat and legislated here before moving to the Chapel of St. Stephen in Westminster Palace, and in later years it was used as a storehouse for the public records, including the original Domesday Book. Beneath the chapter house is a crypt, the entrance to which is kept jealously locked and which seems to have served the purpose of a strong room to the Plantagenet kings, and not far from the chapter house is St. Faith's chapel, at one time the vestry of the Abbey and in which the ancient and priceless altar plate of the Abbey is kept.

Of peculiar interest is the Jerusalem chamber, which was built more than 500 years ago and was probably at one time the Abbot's withdrawing room. It was in this chamber that Henry IV. died, in curious fulfillment of a prophecy that he should die in Jerusalem:

It hath been prophesied me many a year
I shall not die but in Jerusalem,
Which vainly I supposed the Holy Land.
But bear me to that chamber; there I'll lie.
In that Jerusalem shall Harry die.

And in the same chamber Addison, Congreve and Prior lay in state before their splendid interment in the Abbey.

"All Equal Here."

It is related of the Duke of Wellington that once, when he remained to take the Sacrament, a very poor old man went up the opposite aisle, and, reaching the Communion table, knelt down close by the side of the Duke. Someone came and touched the poor man on the shoulder, and whispered to him to move farther away, or to rise and wait until the Duke had received the bread and wine. But the eagle eye and the quick ear of the great Commander caught the meaning of that touch and that whisper. He clasped the old man's hand to prevent his rising, and in a reverential undertone said: "Do not move, we are all equal here."—"Sunday Strand."

"SHAKESPEARE'S BIBLE."

Book Was Knocked Down at Auction for the Sum of $365.

There was sold the other day at Messrs. Sotheby's (London) a Bible with regard to which there has been much curiosity. It is a defective copy of the second edition (1613) of the authorised version, wanting some leaves at beginning and end, and in one cover is loose. On the reverse side of the title to the New Testament is the signature, "William Shakespeare, 1614"—two years before his death—and on the end cover, "Willm. Shakespeare off S.O.A. His Bible, 1613." And on the last cover is also written, "John Fox off Warwick was the owner of this Bible. Anno Dom., 1633;" then come the names of "John Bradshaw, 1666," and "Thomas Hall," 1727," and "James Hall, 1743," and others. The Bible was bought in 1850 by Mr. William Sharp, who bequeathed it to his daughter in 1881, and at her death, in 1890, it passed to her son. Its discovery in 1850 aroused much interest, and there was some correspondence about it in Notes and Queries in 1884 or thereabouts. Mr. Sharp gave only a few pounds for it, and he was offered later £1,500.

When it was put up at Sotheby's the auctioneer introduced it as a most interesting volume, but he had to make the first bid himself of 100 guineas. Mr. Pearson then took up the bidding, no one else apparently joining in. At £200 the auctioneer remarked that he should have thought it was worth either fifty times that or nothing. Mr. Pearson thought it was worth another £10, and at £210 the Bible fell to him.

New Bishops.

The King has been pleased to approve the following appointments:

The Right Rev. Charles Gore, D.D., Bishop of Worcester, to be Bishop of the new See of Birmingham.

The Right Rev. Hyshe Yeatman Biggs, D. D., Bishop Suffragan of Southwark, to be Bishop of Worcester.

The Ven. J. W. Diggle, Archdeacon of Birmingham and Rector of St. Martin, Birmingham, to be Bishop of Carlisle, in succession to the late Right Rev. J. W. Bardsley, D.D.

The Venerable John William Diggle, who has been Archdeacon of Birmingham since 1903, was born in 1847. He was ordained in 1871, and was curate of Whalley Range, 1871; All Saints, Liverpool, 1872; St. John's, Walton, 1874; Vicar of Mossley Hill, 1875-1897, Surrogate; Rural Dean of Childwall, 1882; and Hon. Canon of Liverpool, 1887. He was president of the Liverpool Council of Education, 1891; Select Preacher University of Oxford, 1899; Canon of Carlisle and Archdeacon of Westmoreland, 1896-1901, and Examiner Chaplain to the Bishop of Carlisle, 1896-1902.

Right Hon. Sir Edward Fry.

The British legal assessor at the International Commission in Paris in connection with the North Sea affair is the Right Hon. Sir Edward Fry, the well known lawyer, who has lately been presiding over the Court of Arbitration appointed to adjudicate as to the purchase of the London Water Companies by the newly-created Metropolitan Water Board. From 1883 to 1892 he was a Lord Justice of Appeal, and previously he sat for six years as a Judge of the High Court, Chancery Division. He is seventy-seven years of age, and a member of the Permanent Court of Arbitration at The Hague.

The British agent is Mr. Hugh O'Beirne of His Majesty's Embassy at Paris, First Secretary in His Majesty's Diplomatic Service. He entered the service of the Foreign Office in 1892, and since then has had a wide range of service in St. Petersburg, Washington, Constantinople, Athens and Paris. His connection with the latter Embassy began in 1900, and in June, 1902, he acted as Charge d'Affaires.

Perils of Pearl Diving.

Pearl diving and ruby mining appeal to the gambling instinct which is part of the Burmese character, says V. C. S. O'Connor in his book "The Silken East." A man may be a beggar one day and the next, through a lucky find at diving or digging, may be rich for the rest of his life. But pearl diving has its perils, some of which may be gathered from the following passage: "They talk of ambergris and whales and ... of two recent deaths from the snapping of the cords. In one case the life tender hauled hand over hand, but not quick enough to save his man, who came up dead and black in the face. Another's helmet, unadjusted, let in the water. He signaled, but was kept down, being supposed nervous, and ultimately came up dead. Still another diver's head swelled up so that they could scarcely remove the helmet. The diver's life in these seas is a risky one, short, riotous, lucrative."

"Eat Plenty of Fruit."

That's what the Doctors say when one is constipated. Because fruit acts on the liver, causing it to excrete bile which aids digestion and increases the peristaltic action of the bowels, thus prevents constipation. But eating fresh fruit alone, won't CURE. The laxative principle is too weak and in too small quantity.

Fruit-a-tives

or Fruit Liver Tablets

are the tonic and laxative virtues of apples, oranges, figs and prunes, many times intensified—by our secret process of combining the juices—and made into tablets.

"Fruit-a-tives" act gently and naturally—tone up the liver—greatly increase the flow of bile—effectively cure Indigestion, Biliousness, Headache and Constipation—build up and strengthen the whole system.

New Names May Change.

How family names change in the course of many years is illustrated by the conversion of "Boteville" into "Thynne." An English deed bearing date in the closing days of the fifteenth century shows three brothers then flourishing—John Boteville of Boteville and Thomas and William Boteville. The trio are distinguished from all other Botevilles by the explanation "of the Inne" or family residence, the title of which had come to their joint possession. John's grandson was known as Ralph Boteville-of-the-Inne, from which the transition to Ralph Thynne is easy. His descendants have been Thynnes ever since.

Mr. Kruger's Fortune.

The value of the fortune left by the late Mr. Kruger amounts to no less than £750,000. In addition to the £25,000 bequeathed to various societies in Holland, the ex-President has left sums to all the funds opened after the South African war for the support of the widows and orphans of Boers who lost their lives. He has also made bequests for the maintenance of the Dutch language.—London Mail.

A TERRIBLE NIGHT.

Cobra Compelled British Soldier to Lie "Dead" for Hours.

The commanding officer of a certain regiment in India had occasion to give a soldier 14 days' "cells" for an offence which in civil life would not be taken notice of. These cells, which stand separately, are about 14 feet high by 12 feet square. There are no windows, but one side is composed of iron bars which reach from floor to ceiling and are about 5 inches apart. In the monsoon season it rains there for three months and snakes are liable to crawl into the cells for warmth.

One night, as the soldier lay in his solitary confinement, a large cobra snake, one of the most deadly reptiles in India, crawled between the bars into his cell and wriggled on his bed to get on to the blankets for warmth. It curled itself upon his chest, and he was just about to turn over, when he opened his eyes and saw the snake's glittering eyes staring into his face. He dare not move for one movement would have meant death, and so he had to lie in that position for four hours, in terrible agony.

At 8 o'clock, when the sergeant came his rounds, he saw the position the prisoner was in, and at once drew back and went for a long stick. With another soldier he entered the cell, and together they drove the snake into a corner, where they killed it. The commanding officer released the prisoner the same day, as he thought that he had suffered enough punishment in the terrible experience he had gone through. The man's hair had turned quite white with the great mental strain which he had endured.

A Masterpiece Sold for a Song.

The pathetic story of Goldsmith's distressing poverty is recalled by an episode described in a recent book called "Familiar London." Dr. Johnson is quoted as saying to his friend Boswell:

"I received one morning a message from Goldsmith that he was in great distress and, as it was not in his power to come to me, begging that I would come to him as soon as possible. I sent him a guinea and promised to come to him directly. I accordingly went as soon as I was dressed and found that his landlady had arrested him for his rent, at which he was in a violent passion. • • • He then told me that he had a novel ready for the press. • • • I looked into it and saw its merits, told the landlady I should soon return and, having gone to a bookseller, sold it for £60."

The novel thus dealt with was "The Vicar of Wakefield."

Traveler Worked Too Hard.

During the hearing of a case at the Blackburn County Court in England it was stated that a commercial traveler had been dismissed because he secured too many orders.

Frederick Oliver, who is now a traveler, but who was formerly in business as a soap manufacturer, sued Messrs. Wilkinson & Co. for damages for wrongful dismissal.

Mr. Carter (for the defence)—Why did you dismiss your traveler?

Mr. Oliver—Because he was bringing in more orders than I could deal with.

There was incredulity on the faces of judge and jury.

Mr. Carter—Do you mean to say that you dismissed him for that?

Mr. Oliver—Yes. I had not much capital at the time, and he was bringing in orders that were too large for me, such as 5 cwt. at a time, and I was unable to supply them. I preferred smaller orders.

Mr. Oliver lost his case.

Kidney Cells Destroyed

BY REPEATED ATTACKS OF DISEASE—SURPRISING RESULTS OBTAINED BY USE OF

DR. CHASE'S KIDNEY-LIVER PILLS

Because it is sometimes a slow and lingering malady, people are prone to overlook the destructive tendencies of kidney disease.

They forget that the wasting process brings about a change in the cellular tissue, which practically renders the kidneys useless as filtering organs.

Continued paleness and loss of flesh, pains in the back and loins, dry, harsh skin, severe headaches and backaches; scanty, highly coloured urination, stomach troubles and irregular bowels are among the symptoms of kidney disease.

As a cause of downright suffering few diseases are to be compared with kidney disease, and the results are frequently, the end coming suddenly and unexpected.

By their direct and wonderfully prompt action on the kidneys, Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills call a quick halt to the advance of kidney disease.

By their combined action on kidneys liver and bowels they prove effective in complicated cases, in which ordinary kidney medicines bring little or no relief.

Mrs. H. Trollope, 850 Water street, Peterborough, Ont., states: "I have used two boxes of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills and found them an excellent medicine. I had very severe pains across the back which came from my kidneys being out of order, and since using Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills for a time, I began to feel a wonderful improvement in my health.

"I have no more pains in my back now and am feeling as well as ever I did. Consequently, I am glad of an opportunity to recommend Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills."

Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills have thoroughly proven their genuine and indisputable merit, and you can use them knowing of a certainty that you will receive all the benefit that would be derived from attention of the most skilful physician. One pill a dose, 25 cents a box, at all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Toronto.

In the world, perchance, there are sin and sorrow,
But we turn with faith to the sweet to-morrow—
The life to be
In eternity!

In the world, perchance, there is tear blind vision,
But we turn with faith to the land Elysian,
Where there are no tears
All the endless years!

In the world, perchance, there are sounds of sighing,
But we turn with faith to the life undying—

INDIAN LACE MAKERS.

Secret of Their Arts Kept Alive in Oral Traditions.

The hand-woven, hand-dyed and hand-embroidered laces of India are a revelation of decorative possibilities dear to the heart of the artist. The Hindoo weaver may be illiterate and stupid to everything else, but in the matter of lace-making he is an expert whose work is not to be successfully imitated by any machine-made textile.

A writer, who has been carefully viewing these laces in all their subtle coloring, says that "the eye of the trained critics finds an individuality and a soft blending of colors and weird designs in the hand-wrought fabrics which no machinery can duplicate.

"The Indian weaver and dyer lives where human life and labor are most superabundant and cheap, and time almost valueless. He is an illiterate man; and all the rules of his art, all the minutiae of web and woof, all the secrets of his dye pots, all the formulae for his fabrics and designs, are oral traditions, memorized and repeated in a monotonous sing song as he performs the prescribed manipulations in his slow, careful and absorbed manner. You would think him performing some mystical religious rite as you hear him singing his directions to himself while preparing his various dyes, or twisting around his cloth the knots and wreaths of thread that are to shield it in spots from the dye and produce the wonderful pattern of his dream after a succession of plunges in the different colors.

"The beautiful lace dye is made of myriads of minute insects and never fades. The printing of silks and cottons by means of hand blocks is another Indian industry, producing prints artistically superior to any machine printing. While the men do this exquisite weaving and coloring the elaborate and much-admired embroideries of India are the work of women. The designs and stitches are handed down as a precious heritage from mother to daughter, and the expert can easily tell where each product hails from."

Lord Strathcona Never Takes Lunch.

The statement imputed to Lord Strathcona, who is in his 85th year that he has not taken lunch for 60 years, is substantially correct, says The Daily Express of December 6.

"For sixty years it has been my custom to go without lunch," he remarked yesterday.

"That does not mean that I have never taken a mid-day meal. But as a rule I have only two meals a day—breakfast and dinner. Of course, if there is any one whom I particularly wish to meet I am prepared to take lunch with him.

"I should not like to recommend every man to dispense with his lunch. Everything depends on the individual. Some may be better with, some without, lunch.

"I do not know that this custom has made me more vigorous than other men. If I am so, it may be due in part to the wonderfully invigorating climate of Northwest Canada.

"I see no harm in smoking a little and no harm in drinking a little, but I believe in temperance—yes, temperance in all things, whether food, drink or tobacco. At the same time, in my opinion, there are none more intemperate than those who insist on total abstinence.

FROM HEAD TO FOOT

you feel the good that's done by Doctor Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cleanses, regulates and invigorates Stomach, Liver and Bowels and so purifies the blood. And through the blood, it cleanses, repairs, and invigorates the whole system.

In recovering from "grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other exhausting diseases, nothing can equal it as an appetizing, restorative tonic to build up needed flesh and strength. It rouses every organ into natural action, promotes all the bodily functions, and restores health and vigor.

For every disease that comes from foul or Weak Stomach, a torpid Liver or impure Blood, Dyspepsia, Indigestion, Biliousness, and the most stubborn Skin, Scalp, or Scrofulous affections, the "Discovery" is a sovereign remedy. Don't be hypnotised, wheedled, or over persuaded into accepting a substitute only that some selfish medicine seller may make a greater profit on the inferior article. The "Discovery" has a great record of nearly forty years with thousands of cures behind it.

Dear Sir—Several years ago my blood became impoverished and I became run down in health. I had no appetite, could not sleep, and was practically unfitted for work. Suffered from innumerable boils and was in bad shape. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery relieved me of my wretched condition. The medicine built up my system and restored me to a normal condition of health. I can speak most highly also of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription, as it has been used in my family for years in cases of female trouble.

Production of Iron.

Production of raw iron, which in 1901 was 39,940,000 tons, increased to 48,480,000 tons in 1902, and reached 45,480,000 tons in 1903. The United States stands at the head with a production of 18,010,000 tons, against 17,820,000 tons in 1902 and 15,800,000 tons in 1901. Germany wrested the second place from Great Britain in 1903, its production being 10,000,000 tons, against 8,400,000 tons in 1902 and 7,790,000 tons in 1901. Great Britain occupies third place, with an output of 8,810,000 tons, against 8,520,000 tons in 1902 and 7,850,000 tons in 1901. The output of France, which in 1902 amounted to 2,830,000 tons, has increased by 400,421 tons, as compared with 1902, and by 427,428 tons, as compared with the production of 1901. Belgium produced 1,300,000 tons in 1903, an increase of 196,301 tons over 1902 and 533,701 tons over 1901. Spain's production amounted to 380,284 tons. The output has decreased in the following countries: Russia, 2,400,000 tons, or 118,404 tons less than in 1902 and 882,065 tons less than in 1901; Austria-Hungary, 1,320,000 tons, or 108,814 tons and 82,165 tons less than in 1902 and 1901 respectively; Sweden, 489,700 tons, a decrease of 84,300 and 23,600 tons from the amounts produced in 1902 and 1901 respectively.

PROLIFIC HUDSON BAY.

Expedition Which Is Taking Steps to Assert Canada's Authority Finds Wealth There—The Whaling Industry.

Canada has for twelve months been confirming her hold upon her vast sub-Arctic territories and the region surrounding Hudson Bay, and the first news has recently reached here from the expedition she despatched there a year ago to reannex the lands and warn aliens from the waters. That expedition was conveyed by the Newfoundland sealing steamer Neptune, chartered for the purpose, and she wintered in the northern section of Hudson Bay, a favorite resort of the United States whalers who operate there. A sister ship, the Erik, was sent from here to coal and provision the Neptune anew, meeting her at the mouth of Hudson Bay for the purpose. By the Erik returned here Major Moodie, of the Northwest Police, who, as Governor of Hudson Bay, had charge of the military side of the expedition, its scientific side being directed by A. P. Low, explorer and geologist.

Canada holds that under the treaty of Utrecht in 1713 France ceded Hudson Bay to Britain as a closed sea; that under the treaty of Washington in 1818 the United States acknowledged this sovereignty, and that under the royal decree of 1870 the authority of the British Crown over the region was transferred to Canada. But for seventy years the United States whalers had been frequenting the bay, and have been claiming portions of the shore for fishery purposes, so that with the example of the Alaskan Boundary award before her Canada deemed it wise to obviate the possibility of any dispute hereafter by officially asserting her position now, and requiring all visitors to this northern waste to recognise her rule by accepting her laws and paying customs duties on all articles brought there. Hence the despatch of the Neptune last year and the return of Major Moodie to confer with the Ottawa Cabinet and report the results of the twelve months' stay in the wilderness.

According to him the whaling industry there, though by no means of the magnitude it once attained, is still highly remunerative to those who engage in it. In Baffinland, which forms the northern boundary of Hudson Bay, are three whaling stations, two owned by Scotchmen and a third by a United Statser, while a fourth Scotch concern is being established this season.

In Hudson Bay itself is a fifth Scotch post, while United States whalers from New Bedford visit there every summer, remaining two or three years on each cruise. The Scotch stations are all permanent ones, established on the shore, and the big fish are killed by whaleboats armed with small cannon, discharging an explosive headed harpoon. These are manned by Esquimaux and all the work of hunting, killing and cutting up the whales is done by them, the manager attending to the trade part of the business.

The United States use their old time whalers to reach the bay and cruise about there, but they also employ the natives for the actual hunt, and these have become expert in handling the boats and weapons, while their hire is a mere bagatelle, they being paid weekly two pounds of ship biscuit, four ounces of coffee, three pints of molasses and four plugs of tobacco, trading off their peltries by the same kind of barter. There is a small settlement of about thirty families at each whaling station, and they find work about the posts or on the ships most of the year, occupying themselves in hunting otherwise.

Until now they have not regarded any Canadian or other laws, but, looking at it as a no-man's-land, have been plying their craft without reference to Canada. It is now proposed by Canada to promulgate rules whereby license fees will be obtained from United States and Scotch whalers and from fur trading adventurers who have been invading, without payment of any tribute to Canada, for thirty years the valuable whale schools and musk ox herds of the Hudson Bay district.

Of the value of the whale fishery an idea is afforded by the United States Fish Commission's reports, which show that in eleven years the whale fisheries of Hudson Bay yielded a total of $1,371,000 worth of oil and bone for fifty voyages, or $27,480 a voyage. A single adult bowhead or Greenland whale is worth nearly $20,000, bone being now $14,000 a ton, so it is easy to understand what this means to the Yankee whalemen and their Scotch competitors.

According to the strict interpretation of the treaties United States should not fish in Hudson Bay at all, it being a closed sea, and one of the points which Major Moodie has submitted to the Ottawa authorities is whether these "poachers" are to be expelled by armed force or are to be allowed to remain and fish provided they subscribe to Canada's authority. This they are willing to do, and the Era, the one ship of their fleet which was found there, readily paid the customs duties demanded of her.

But there is a growing sentiment in Canada against allowing any latitude to the United Statsers, on the ground that they would not reciprocate, and it may be that in deference to this feeling their expulsion will be ordered. If so it will be a serious blow to them, for sometimes eight or ten ships winter there and make good catches, one leaving there the season before last with a catch worth nearly $70,000.

The mighty bowhead is not the only profitable prize in these waters. White whales are also found in such abundance that they are killed by hundreds and at the Hudson Bay posts on the southern side their flesh is packed away for food for the dogs during the winter.

The adult is about fourteen feet long, and the hide and oil are both of commercial utility. They are hunted by the whalemen as an auxiliary.

"POLICYLESS POLICY" OF THE ONTARIO CONSERVATIVES

Railway, what the Conservatives were clamouring for, another government-owned railway.

The results have shown that the Government was right in the action they took, although it was necessary to fight the influence of the United States Steel Trust, who were trying to make it impossible to obtain the money in the United States to re-organise the Soo Company, and had they succeeded the plant would have been closed.

The same arguments used by the Steel Trust were used by the members of the Opposition in Toronto, when the bill was being debated in the House.

At present there are 4,000 men employed in the Soo industries, and 500 tons of steel rails are being made each day. All this would have been impossible had the Government not given the assistance they did. (Applause.)

The record of the Government was one upon which they appealed to the electors with every confidence. The platform was one which the people had made themselves and upon which the leader stood, and expected to be returned on January 25th. Mr. McWilliams stands on the record of the Government, and the people of West Peterborough should elect him, as he had no doubt they would.

Mr. Graham's speech was heartily applauded, and he was given an ovation when at its conclusion.

Hon. Mr. Stratton's Speech.

Hon. Mr. Stratton on rising to speak, was enthusiastically applauded. He complimented Mr. McWilliams on the excellence of his first speech to a Peterborough audience in this campaign, in support of his own candidature. He cordially welcomed Hon. Mr. Graham, and his reference to the Provincial Secretary, was heartily cheered. Mr. Stratton referred to his own retirement from politics, as necessitated by his business, and remarked that while Mr. Graham, his successor, might not till his (Mr. Stratton's) clothes physically, he had shown during his short term of office that he was able to creditably and ably fill his late official position. Mr. Stratton said the people of West Peterborough had stood loyally by him, and that he had tried to do his duty faithfully by West Peterborough. (Applause.) He asked that a continuation of the cordial support that had been given him be extended to the Government of which he had been a member, and which was so deserving of their support. He knew much of the Ross Government, and had no hesitation in asserting that it had been, and was, the most progressive government in the world. Skill in financial management was the true test of efficiency for service. Where would we find a state or a province in the sound and satisfactory position in which Ontario was to-day, with over three millions to its credit in cash in the bank, and with a surplus of assets over liabilities of $3,747,967. No state or province's finances had been managed so thriftily. All the public buildings of Ontario had been built out of current revenue, while those of the other provinces had been built by the Dominion, or with borrowed capital, which went to swell the big debts these provinces were staggering under, while Ontario had no debt, and paid no interest on its debt, but had its funds available to expend for public services. A Conservative charge was that the Liberals had increased the expenditure, but they had only done so in proportion to the growing population and needs of the province. It could not be shown that any of the expenditures had been extravagant or improper. In his own department, he had in six years, had to superintend expenditure of six millions, and though he said it, it could not be shown that one fraction of a cent of these large sums had gone astray. (Applause.) He had left the officials of his department behind him and he invited them to speak if they knew of anything wrong. He did not mention these things by way of boast but as a tribute to the honest management of the financial and other affairs by the Liberal Government, against which there was such an out cry made by their opponents.

Forward Policy of Liberal Government.

Charge was made that the Liberal Government had increased the expenditure. The expenditure certainly had been increased but it had been done in the interests of the good government and development of the resources of the country. Mr. Stratton referred to the action of the Government leading to the revival of the Soo industries, a course which was justified not only on account of bringing these industries that had cost millions into active operation, but to show that the Government had faith in the resources of the province and the public spirit to realise upon these resources. It was justified because it brought into operation these previously dormant industries and gave employment to Canadians as represented by a payroll of over $1,500,00 per year, paid out in producing from raw material, products of a commercial value of nearly ten millions per year. It was also justified in the interests of Canadian creditors of the Soo Companies in the sum of $1,200,000 whose money would have been lost had not the Government assisted the revival of the Soo industries by a simple guarantee of a loan of two million dollars which in all probability would not cost the province anything. The security had been ample as Mr. Grahm had pointout—100 miles of completed railway 600,000 acres of earned land grant, a lien upon the Dominion subsidy earned but not paid over, of $300,000, and a first mortgage on works that had cost over 30 millions of dollars. Mr. Stratton emphasised the advantages of the operation of these industries. The most important of which was the steel rails branch of the works which was turning out 500 tons of steel rails daily and would be able to supply the rails for the Grand Trunk Pacific and the ordinary requirements of the other railways of Canada—making this country independent of the United States Steel Trust. (Applause.) The Government had acted upon the policy of building up the industries of the province. This had not only been done by the aid to the Soo Works, but a mighty development process had been set up by the building of the Temiscamingue Railway by the Government which opened up for settlement and development a tremendous stretch of country with large areas of farming lands, rich deposits of minerals and great timber resources.

Aiding Development and Progress.

Railways were a necessity in the satisfactory opening up of the new country. In addition to the Temiscamingue the Government had aided the Algoma Central, Manitoulin and North Shore, the James Bay Railways and others, lines whose operation permitted the opening up and settlement and development of a new country which would be useless without such facilities. No Government in any country in the same space of time had done so much to open up new country and promote settlement and development as had done the Ross Government. (Applause.)

Another form of development of our raw resources that had been helped by the Government, was the pulp industry, an action that had been attacked and opposed by the Opposition. During the premiership of Mr. Hardy, Mr. Stratton said he had made a speech in the House advocating a forward policy in the direction of the utilisation of our great natural resouces. The Government had helped the pulp industry, and the result was that we had now over three millions of dollars of capital invested in the production of pulp and paper, and paying out in wages large sums, which went into circulation in Ontario, producing commercial prosperity. The Government had watched our pulp interests carefully. They had provided for a reasonable revenue, which must increase as the industry increased, for for every cord of pulp wood cut the Government got 40 cents per cord, and the Government had provided that all pulp wood in Ontario must be manufactured in Canada—not a cord could be exported in an unmanufactured condition. (Applause.) This was quite different from the practice in Quebec, where it was allowed to export the pulp wood in the raw state, thus depriving the province of the profit to capital and labour employed in manufacture. The Government in these concessions did not give a foot of land nor a stick of pulp wood big enough for a bird to perch upon. The lands were open to settlers for entry, and every cord of pulp wood had to pay its dues of 40 cents. All good judges said that the policy of the Liberal Government of Ontario was the right and business-like policy. The short-sighted Opposition had opposed this policy, and Mr. Marter, an ex-leader of the Conservatives in the province, broke from his party on this point, and espoused the policy of the Liberals.

Providing the Sinews of Enterprise.

It was good business on the part of the Government to see that the raw resources of Ontario were developed. But the Conservative Opposition did not seem to grasp the significance of the situation. They seemed to be unable to rise to the occasion. Instead of aiding, they had opposed and tried to hinder the forward progress of the Government. They had opposed the pulp development policy of the Government, and had also obstructed measures for the increase of the revenue of the province, which was necessary to the application of a policy of progress. We must have money for these purposes, and the speaker detailed the various sources of revenue which went to make up the financial income. He pointed out that the Liberal Government, to acquire more more revenue to assist in meeting the increasing needs of the province, and to carry out a policy of progress, had sought to find new sources of revenue. The Succession Duties Act only affected the estates of the very rich, estates under $100,000 being exempt. This duty made the estates of rich men pay a certain percentage, estates that had, perhaps, been able to avoid municipal taxation. The Conservative Opposition had tried to defeat the object of the duty, and deprive the province of half of the revenue from this source. If they had succeeded the province would have been robbed of one million of the two millions that had been derived from this source. The Liberal Government had been accused of being the friends of corporations, yet in the face of Conservative opposition, the Government had imposed on corporations of various kinds, taxes that brought into the public chest an annual revenue of over a quarter of a million dollars. A special tax had also been placed upon breweries and distilleries. At Lakefield, Mr. Burnham had charged the Government with depriving the municipalities of license fees, but if must be remembered that if the Conservatives had succeeded in their attempt to rob the province of the licensing power, neither the province nor the municipalities would have had their share of the eleven millions that had been collected in license fees by the Liberal Government. In this connection Mr. Stratton referred to the enforcement of the license laws, and read from a report of the speech by Rev. Dr. Chown heartily approving of Mr. Stratton's success in enforcement of the law. Speaking in St. Paul's church, Peterborough, on Dec. 29th, Rev. Dr. Chown said:—

"This local option movement he (Dr. Chown) was in favour of, but he would not be in favour of it unless the law could be enforced. He said he was forced to tell the truth and that the late Provincial Secretary, Hon. Mr. Stratton, did lend his energies and put behind his efforts all the forces of the Government, and during the last eight months the license laws have been well enforced, and he thought Mr. Stratton deserved credit for his efforts in this particular. Since the re-organisation of the Government, he had been assured by the chief officer in the department that the policy inaugurated by Mr. Stratton would be continued by Mr Graham."

Mr. Stratton said no one wished to restore the licensing power to the municipalities. Under the Government, since 1875 there had been a steady reduction of the number of licenses, at the rate of 130 per year. Many hotel keepers were anxious for a strict enforcement of the law, which could be much facilitated by the people helping to support the law and putting a moral force behind it.

Reference was also made to the policy adopted at the Liberal Convention of permitting local option bylaws to be submitted upon a petition of 25 per cent. of the ratepayers.

22 Niagara Falls Power.

Mr. Stratton then referred to the development of Niagara Falls for electric power, something he had favoured, though even the Globe had opposed it. He was not to be diverted by newspaper criticism from a course he thought right. If he were so easily influenced there would have been no development of power at No. 5 dam, and no competition like that which had resulted in cutting in two the price of electric power for power and lighting the homes of the people of Peterborough. (Applause.) He had been abused in the press in that connection but he was justified in the course he took, as events proved. In the development of power there were three companies at Niagara Falls expending twenty-five million dollars to furnish $75,000 horse power, which would be distributed to Toronto, and other towns in Western Ontario, to give light and power to develop industries. The Government was getting a revenue of $275,000 a year from this power. Mr. Whitney who posed as the champion of political purity spoke in a bye-election at Niagara Falls, and to get votes for his candidate made the corrupt offer to furnish this power free—to make it free as air. Thus to gain votes he was willing to sacrifice a provincial revenue of $275,000 per year.

Mr. Stratton said there was no town in Canada that should more heartily sympathize with the progressive policy of the Government than the progressive town of Peterborough a great manufacturing centre, where the working men was a chief factor. He said that no Government anywhere had done more to improve the condition of the working men—had made more or better laws, than the Liberal Government of this province. He could not go into details but would briefly intimate a few of the chief laws that had been enacted.

The Labour Disputes Act of 1902 (the Preston Bill,) under which no less than thirty-five trade disputes have already been amicably settled by the provincial bfficer appointed for that purpose.

It has recently established a Provincial Bureau of Labour in charge of an experienced and able representative.

It has passed labour legislation that is regarded as the most advanced and progressive of any self-governed country.

It has passed the Mechanics Lien Act, the Employers' Liability Act, the Factory Act, the Railway Accidents Act, the Act for the Relief of Co-operative Associations, the Creditors' Relief Act, the Masters' and Servants' Act, and the Act to Secure Compensation to Workmen for Injuries.

It has enabled trades unions and labour organisations to become incorporated. It passed an important Act regulating bake-shops, an Act relating to truancy and compulsory school attendance, the Woodmen's Lien for Wages Act, the registration of manhood suffrage votes, and the Conciliation and Arbitration Act.

It exempted from taxation living incomes up to $700.

It has regulated the closing of shops and the hours of labour therein for children and young persons.

It has protected the claims of workmen on contracts for public works.

It has legislated on behalf of the employees of street railways.

It has provided that in a contract for printing and binding certain work, union or equivalent wages shall be paid by the contractor.

It has permitted municipal bodies to pass bylaws regulating the hours of certain persons, such as those employed in livery stables, and drivers generally.

In addition to the laws already passed it was the policy of the Liberal Government to place the interests of labour under a Minister of its own by the establishment of a Labour department in addition to the present Labour Bureau, and to appoint a Minister of Colonization and Labour. (Applause.)

Mr. Stratton went on to deal briefly with the Conservative cry of corruption. He depreciated the wholesale abuse of public men irrespective of any reason except to make political capital. In regard to his retirement Mr. Stratton said, that as the province of Ontario was rolling in wealth and that as a member of the Government he had had some little share in bringing it to that condition, he felt that he wanted a chance to better his own financial position by retiring to give fuller attention to his business. Though he was out of public life for the present, he would not say that he was out of it forever—he might be in politics again. (Cheers.)

After paying a hearty tribute to the high character and progressive spirit of Premier Ross, and referring to the great resources of Ontario, Mr. Stratton concluded his speech by saying that Mr. McWilliams, the Liberal candidate, was a young man who should have a great future. He felt sure that if they elected him he would try to look after their interests as faithfully as he (the speaker) had tried to do. He asked the electors to give Mr. McWilliams a chance, to elect him and they would be satisfied. (Loud Applause.)

A highly successful and enthusiastic meeting concluded with cheers for the King, Hon. Mr. Graham, and the candidate, Mr. McWilliams.

HARVEY RALLY FOR M'WILLIAMS

Large Turn-out of Electors on Saturday Night.

Addresses by the Candidate and Mr. D. O'Connell.

One of the most successful meetings in the campaign was that held by the Liberal candidate at Buckhorn Saturday night. Over 50 of the electors of South Harvey and North Smith gathered in the True Blue Hall and listened under the able chairmanship of Mr. Harrison, to two excellent speeches. It is evident that the people of this part of the Riding as well as in the other parts realize what has been done for the Riding by the Liberal Government and intend to show their appreciation in no uncertain manner on the 25th.

Mr. Daniel O'Connell opened his address with a reference to the splendid services which have been rendered to the Riding by the late representative. He pointed out the advantages of sending to the Legislature a young man with the training and ability that would fit him to take a leading place there and with the energy and ambition needed in a successful representative and he predicted that if they sent Mr. McWilliams there on this occasion he would emulate the great services of the Hon. Mr. Stratton. He then proceeded to discuss some of the leading issues in the province at this time, dealing especially with the statesman-like policy of the Government in the development of New Ontario. In the matter of the guarantee to the Soo industries they had shown a faith in their own province which had revived the confidence of the financial world and already the results have abundantly justified their course. Mr. O'Connell also dealt with the charge of corruption and showed the utter hypocrisy of the Conservative attacks upon the Government.

He closed an able and eloquent speech with an appeal to the electors to show their appreciation of the Government's work by putting up their share of the majority which the energetic young candidate would certainly have on the 25th.

Mr. McWilliams devoted his attention to the financial interest of the electors of this Riding in the management of the Provincial affairs. Taking up each department in turn he showed what the Government had done and just what that had meant on the taxes of every elector in the County of Peterborough. The Liberal Government had handled the natural resources of the province in such a manner as to make the most out of them and had also very largely increased the revenues by the new taxes on the wealthy corporations and that in spite of the opposition of the Conservatives. These taxes had netted over half a milion dolars a year, not a cent of which would have been received had the Conservatives been in power. The present policy of the Government deserved their hearty support as well as did its splendid record. It had handled the great problem of the development of New Ontario in a manner which showed a high degree of statesmanship and the conditions of settlement which they were now establishing were particularly favourable to the pioneer settlers. Against such a policy the Conservative party had absolutely nothing to offer. He invited them to attend the Conservative meeting next week and find it they could one item of large public policy which would justify them in turning out the Government which had done so much for them. We have a magnificent province and now is no time to take the direction of affairs out of the hands of those who have shown the ability and foresight necessary to build it up upon a basis that will redound to the lasting benefit of the people.

The meeting closed with the singing of the National Anthem and three hearty cheers for Mr. McWilliams.

MR. STONE WINS SUIT.

Galt Reporter has to Pay $2,500 for Libel.

Interesting Case in Which Former Peterborough Man won out.

A despatch from London, Ont., tells of the verdict given in a libel case, in which Mr. E. B. Stone, formerly, of Peterborough, wins $2,500 from the Galt Reporter. The despatch says:—

At the Assize Court here yesterday, the case of Stone vs. the Galt Reporter was brought to a conclusion by the rendering of a verdict for the plaintiff of damages to the extent of $2,500. The trial lasted for two days, and some sixty witnesses were called. The interest in the outcome was widespread, the binder twine interests concerning themselves in that they apparently wish to put a stop to the formation of companies that they say have a disquieting effect upon the market, and bring loss to all who embark in them. The jury evidently took the same view as did the defendant newspaper publishers, and the binder twine interests, in holding that it was not a libel to expose the impossibilities contained in a prospectus which the plaintiff was using in his endeavour to form a company, for in rendering their verdict the jury stated expressly that they found no libel in the one feature of the case. But in that the defendants had incidentally stated is one of their articles that the plaintiff, Stone, who is a practising barrister, had endeavoured to foist a botel scheme upon the citizens, the jury found a verdict of $2,500 for the plaintiff.

IMPROVEMENTS TO CEMETERY

Annual Meeting of Little Lake Cemetery Company.

Reports Show the Work of Last Year—The Board of Directors.

This afternoon the annual meeting of the Little Lake Cemetery Company Shareholders was held in the Council Chambers, Mr. W. H. Moore, the president in the chair.

The principal business was the reception of the different reports covering the work done during the past year and the election of the Directors for the present year.

The Directors who have served during the past year are:—Messrs. W. H. Moore, president, J. J. Lundy, Jas. Stevenson, Chas. Stapleton, Benj. Shortly, R. M. Dennistoun, Dr. Geo. Burnham, T.A.S. Hay and E. H. D. Hall.

DIRECTORS' REPORT.

Mr. W. H. Moore, the president, presented the report of the Board of Directors as follows:—

To the Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery,

Your Directors are gratified to report continued progress made during the past year in beautifying the cemetery, and in making various improvements to the grounds, some of which are referred to in the Superintendent's report. The most important was the erection of a Green House in the rear of the new office. The previous green house had never been more than a temporary contrivance. Last spring when your directors examined it, the furnace was found to be burned out and the building in a state of collapse. The new house is a substantial one, well suited for nuturing and maturing plants and flowers and has all modern improvements for heating and ventilation, with capacity six times greater than the old house. Your directors are confident this improvement will add a very attractive feature to the Cemetery as well as prove a good investment for the company, and a great convenience to all who take an interest in the grounds.

The first burying ground in Peterborough only contained about four acres of land, and when the Little Lake Cemetery was established, and for many years after, it was thought we had grounds, so large, that they would be ample for a very long period of years. But after the expiring of fifty-five years, a different view is being expressed, and regret is felt that the company had not secured a larger area. Having regard to this circumstance your Board would suggest that in future, in opening new blocks for burial purposes, economy be exercised in laying them out, and that most, if not all, walks, usual in the older grounds, be nor placed between parcels, but that the boundaries be marked by stone or concrete monuments. For some time grass walks have been adopted instead of open earth ones. The change has been found to be an improvement, and has enhanced the beauty of the grounds, and given them a more park-like appearance. Your Board believes this proposal should receive your careful and favourable consideration.

A detailed statement of receipts and expenditures, for the past year, is shown in the Superintendent and Auditor's reports, which will be submitted to you.

THE IMPROVEMENTS.

Mr. F. Wise, the Superintendent, submitted his report of the improvements made to the Cemetery during 1904. The report follows:—

Peterborough, Jan. 12, '05.

To the President, Directors and Shareholders of the Little Lake Cemetery Company.

Gentlemen,—I beg to submit the following report of improvements made in your cemetery during the year 1904.

A large circular bed, thirty feet in diameter has been cut on Windmill Point and planted with spruce and small shrubs and the appearance of this part of the cemetery has been much improved thereby.

Block number four of the single graves section has been graded and seeded down and is now in a condition to bury upon.

The work of cleaning and renovating the block known as free ground has been completed and is now in as good condition as any other part of the cemetery.

The grading of section R has been commenced and put in condition for sale.

About 300 feet of extension of water system was made in section "D".

At the Superintendent's residence a concrete walk from the street to the kitchen entrance was laid, 35 feet long and 3 feet 4 inches wide, making a total of 113 feet 6 inches at a cost of $16.00 the grading of the lawn has also been completed, and a concrete floor laid throughout the whole of the cellar.

A green house has been erected 45 feet by 20 feet and heated with a Daisy Hot water boiler at a total cost of about $500.00. This building will till a long felt want, as previously our plants were largely grown in hotbeds, causing a great amount of labour and also requiring the best of weather in which to perform it, now we can take stormy and rough days in which to do the same kind of work.

I append my financial statement.

Respectfully submitted,

F. WISE,
Superintendent.

GREEK FIRM GETS PREMISES

Will Open Business in Peterborough in a Short Time

Has Purchased Leases of Cyrille Wilhelmny and Geo. Carton.

Some important business changes are imminent in Peterborough, and will be made in the near future.

A Kingston firm of Greeks, which is doing a big business in that city, is about to open operations in Peterborough, and it is probable that three stores will be opened at once.

This firm conducts confectionery and shoe blacking establishments, and has been so successful in Montreal that from a very small beginning, with a small capital it has grown to such an extent that there are in Montreal to-day fifteen branches of this firm's business, the proprietor of the chain being Mr. Mehail Pappakeringes.

In all the large cities in Canada the firm conducts stores, and the first in Peterborough will be opened in the course of a few days in the premises recently vacated by Mr. Cyrille Wilhelmy, on George street.

Arrangements have also been made with Mr. George Carton and the owners of the building, to open a store in those premises in the course of a short time. Mr. Carton will probably retire from business.

The Greek firm has also made overtures to Mr. W. Jobe to induce him to vacate his lower George street store to them. Representatives of the firm will be here this week to arrange for the opening of the business.

Killed By a Train.

Copper Cliff, Jan. 16.—While walking the railroad track this side of Wahnapitae, John McMillan, aged 60 years, was struck by the second section of No. 2 and instantly killed. The unfortunate man's head was entirely severed from his body. The train crew immediately backed their train and the body was taken to the handcar house, pending the arrival of Dr. Struthers, the coroner. The victim of the accident was hard of hearing, and the wind being high, it is thought probable that he did not hear the train.

Fire Destroys Whole Family.

New York, Jan. 16.—William W. Mason, a lawyer, and his entire family, consisting of wife and two children, Ellen, 4 years old, and Marion, 6 months, with a servant, Annie Wells, lost their lives in a fire which partially destroyed the brown stone dwelling occupied by them in West 130th street yesterday morning.

Died From Exposure.

Rockton, Ont., Jan. 16.—John Smith, an old man, known as "Clockie" Smith, from the fact that he went about the country cleaning clocks, took refuge in Adam Thompson's Implement House, near this village, Friday night. He died from the result of the exposure a short time after being found Saturday.

Diavolo May Die.

Havana, Jan. 16.—Dr. Clark, known as "Diavolo," a bicyclist, during a performance at Cienfuegos Saturday, was probably fatally injured While alighting after a leap his bicycle broke, smashing "Diavolo's" face and fracturing his skull.

Newspaper Mulcted $2,500.

London, Jan. 16.—The suit of Stone v. The Galt Reporter was decided at the winter Assize Court here late Saturday afternoon. Damages to the extent of $10,000 were asked for, and the jury found a verdict for $2,500 for the plaintiff.

Haydn.

Haydn was fond of imitating animal sounds in his symphonies. In these compositions will be found imitations of the cat, horse, cow, cuckoo, grasshopper and donkey.

Parish of Spinsters and Widows.

Spinsters and widows comprise the majority of the inhabitants of Askern, near Doncaster, England, according to evidence given before the local government board inspector. The population has been practically stationary for the last thirty years.

Flirting in church was one of the many weaknesses of Charles II. It is recorded that he was given to playing "peep" with Lady Castlemain through the curtains which divided the royal

A National Salute.

Twenty-one guns is a national salute. The number is supposed to have a mystical origin. Three and seven were mystical numbers, and their product is more mystical and most perfect. So the salute to a sovereign or the representative of a sovereign nation is made as perfect as possible.

More Men Than Women.

Egypt is the only country in the world where there are more men than women. The male sex in the dominion of the khedive exceeds the female by 100,000.

Ocean Islands.

There are about 100,000 islands, large and small, scattered over the oceans. America alone has 5,500 around its coasts. There are 365 in the bay of Rio Janeiro, 10,000 between Madagascar and India and some 1,200 off the eastern coast of Australia, between its mainland and New Guinea.

A Rule of Health.

In order to be in perfect health one must be temperate in eating. The meals also should be regular. Regularity is one of the golden rules of a well ordered life.

Odd Foods.

In France the sea anemone is used as food. Stuffed like peppers and boiled it calls to mind crab or crayfish. The echini of various species is also used, cooked in the shell, like an egg, and eaten with a spoon.

A Ten Hour Swim.

A well known Belgian swimmer named Janssens made a wager that he could stay in the water ten hours, swimming the whole time. He won the wager, performing the feat in the Antwerp baths.

A Feather In His Cap.

The origin of "a feather in his cap" is thus explained: In Hungary in 1500 it was decreed that only he who had killed a Turk should wear a feather, and he was permitted to add a fresh feather to his cap for each Turk whom he had slain.

Postage Stamps.

Few know that there is a difference between winter and summer postage stamps. In the cold months the gum on the stamps is a little thinner and softer, while that on these to be used during the summer and in southern states is not so easily affected by heat.

The Mestiza Girl.

The mestiza girl of the Philippines is noted for her beauty and for her graceful dancing. In her dress she affects bright colors. She will wear a skirt of burning red, with a gorgeous undergarment, over which she dons a waist of silken texture, dark and ornamented with the gay and beautiful "pina," which is thrown over her shoulders.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Eight days more to work for McWilliams.

The "Standing Room Only" sign was hung out at McWilliams' Committee Rooms on Saturday evening. Coming events cast their shadows.

The Liberal candidate has held fifteen meetings in the riding; his opponent five. Those who want an energetic representative will vote for McWilliams.

Mr. Bradburn and his chosen champion, invited Mr. McWilliams to hold a joint meeting. It was held in Lakefield last Thursday. We have not heard of any second invitation.

Mr. Sam Clarke has invited Rev. D. C. Hossack to go down to Cobourg, where everybody knows him, and have a heart to heart talk. Mr. Hossack prefers writing four-column "fillers" for the newspapers. Is the reverend gentleman's massive brain afraid of Sam's eagle eye?

It's always easy to say a thing is a lie. Where are the Review's proofs for its statements concerning the Liberal literature? It objects to "The Story of a Big Political Barrel," but Mr. Whitney is really rather proud, you know, of his "Purity Fund." It is only another name for the same thing.

The Conservatives are very severe on corruption in their own party. It will be remembered, says the Hamilton Times, that the chief manipulator of the Conservative corruption fund in this city a few years ago, was, after being reported by the election trial judges, elevated to the bench! In South Ontario William Smith, M.P., was said by Mr. Justice Ferguson to have been guilty of the most brazen act of corruption he had ever heard of, in that he confessed of having spent $1,200 of his own money in buying votes to defeat Hon. John Dryden. Subsequently Mr. Smith was banquetted, given a presentation and nominated for Parliament. Thus do the Conservatives discourage corruption.

THE VALUE OF BLUSTER

Noise not a Necessary Element of Success.

The Review claims lack of noise at the big Liberal meeting last Friday night. Once upon a time there lived a wise man whose name was Aesop. This wise man wrote some fables which clearly weren't included in the school diet of the Review. In one of these fables was set forth this wise man's idea of the value of noise compared with work. A careful perusal of the fable which follows is recommended to the Review. At the same time a cordial invitation is extended to the public to watch "Boreas" Whitney try to bluster the electors' votes from them!:—

Old Boreas and the sun, one day
Espied a traveller on his way,
Whose dress did happily provide
Against whatever might betide,
The time was autumn, when, indeed,
All prudent travellers take heed,
The rains that then the sunshine dash,
And Iris with her splendid sash,
Warn one who does not like to soak
To wear abroad a good thick cloak,
Our man was, therefore, well bedight
With double mantle strong and tight.
'This fellow, (said the wind, 'hast meant
To guard from every ill event;
But little does he wot that I
Can blow him such a blast,
That, not a button fast,
His cloak shall cleave the sky.
Come, here's a pleasant game, Sir Sun!
Will play? said Phoebus, Done!
We'll bet between us here
Which first will take the gear
From off this cavalier,
Begin and shut away
The brightness of my ray,
'Enough!' Our blower on the bet
Swelled out his pursey form
With all the stuff for storm.
The thunder hail and drenching wet,
And all the fury he could muster;
Them with a very demon's bluster,
He whistled, whirl'd and spashed,
And down the torrents dashed.
Full many a roof upturning;
He never did before,
Full many a vessel bearing
To wreck upon the shore,
And all to doff a single cloak,
But vain the furious stroke,
The traveller was stout,
And kept the tempest out,
Defied the hurricane,
Defied the pelting rain;
And as the fiercer roared the blast,
His cloak the tighter held he fast,
The sun broke out to win the bet;
He caused the clouds to disappear,
Refreshed and warmed the cavalier,
And through his mantle made him sweat,
Till off it came, of course,
In less than half an hour;
And yet the sun saved half his power.

MOUNT IRWIN

(From Our Own Correspondent)

Mount Irwin, Jan. 14th. — We are having severe weather here at present, as it is snowing and drifting, every day, and the roads are becoming badly blocked.

Mr. Gillis is moving his portable saw mill. He is going to erect it on a creek near the Read road, north of here.

A quiet wedding took place here recently, Miss Mary Beckett and Mr. Andrew Henderson being married.

Mr. Cornelius Hickey had a hard tussle with a bear last week, but he brought bruin down, and the only signs of the struggle are some torn clothes.

A Letter From the Rockcroft Church Acknowledging Donations.

Mr. S. H. Pickup, the student in charge of the Rockcroft church has written a letter, in which he expresses the thanks of the members of the church to the Ketchecum Hunt Club in the following terms:—

"On behalf of Rockcroft Church and its interests, I wish, through your columns, to thank the members of the Ketchecum Hunting Club for the kind way in which they remembered us at Christmas time. For several years they have showed themselves interested in our work by sending us gifts of money and good things for all of the children during the festive season and we would like them to know that there interest in us and our work is gratefully appreciated."

A FAIR QUESTION

By agreement with the Provincial Government some American capitalists undertook to develop a large water power and establish the largest pulp mill in America at Sault Ste. Marie.

Having ample power and abundant natural resources in the way of ores and timber, the American company rapidly extended the works to include a steel rail mill, machine shops, sulphide pulp mill, chemical works, furniture and veneer factories, railway and steamboat and opened iron and other mines.

The company expended over thirty millions of United States capital in the enterprise before there was a chance to get any profits. 5,000 hands were employed.

More capital was needed to keep things going till the various industries began to pay.

Hard times struck the United States; the money was not available and the works closed down.

Five thousand hands were out of work with their wages in arrears and winter coming on. The Government, having ample security, advanced the money to pay these wages, and the loan has already been repaid.

To have these works permanently closed would have been disastrous to the credit of the Province, and put the development of New Ontario back.

The directors of the Soo companies tried to raise money to reorganize the industries, but came short of the amount required by two million dollars. The Ross Government pledged the credit of the Province to raise this money, taking a first mortgage on the industries for security. The industries are now re-established, the Government loans are being repaid, nearly 4,000 men are employed receiving wages of over $150,000 a month.

It required courage to take the course followed by Premier Ross, but the splendid results have justified him.

WOULD WHITNEY HAVE HAD THE COURAGE TO TAKE THIS COURSE?

He said last fall at Massey Hall that the money might as well have been thrown into Lake Superior.

AN INSTANCE OF NEW ONTARIO DEVELOPMENT.

AND A QUESTION.

On his accession to the Premiership in 1899, Mr. Ross found that some years before twenty-four townships along the north end of Lake Temiskaming had been surveyed and seven of them opened for sale to settlers.

He also found that although the land was well suited for farming, only a few settlers had bought land, owing chiefly to the fact that for several months in the year they were shut off from the rest of the country for want of railway communication.

Premier Ross saw at once that what was most needed to settle this country was a railway, and decided that the railway must be built.

A charter to build a railway to this district had been given years before, but the holders of the charter seemed in no hurry to build

If no private company was prepared to build it, then the Province would do so, and with characteristic courage and promptness Premier Ross asked the Legislature for authority to build the road as a Government enterprise, which was given.

The road is built and in operation.

You can leave Toronto at midnight and reach the Temiskaming district the next morning.

The land in the original twenty-four townships has been sold to settlers. Eight new townships have been surveyed in the district, also all sold, and to afford expansion in this direction sixty odd townships have been surveyed over the height of land ready for settlement as soon as the railway now building reaches the new district.

The building of this railway has caused the discovery of a new silver mining district near Temiskaming, one of the most important in Canada, and the pine timber along the road south of the farming district sold for probably a million dollars more than if the railway had not been there.

WOULD WHITNEY HAVE HAD THE COURAGE TO BUILD THIS ROAD AS A PROVINCIAL PROPERTY, or would he have given the road and large sums in money and land to a private company?

CROWN LANDS OPENED FOR SETTLEMENT.

The Liberal Government have been true to their policy of opening up Ontario, in the facilities afforded bona fide settlers in making homes in new Ontario. Thus there have been surveyed and placed on the market up to the present:

Number of free grant townships	176
Number of townships in which Crown Lands are for sale (at 50 cents an acre)	77
Number of persons located free grant lands since 1872	81,855
Number of acres sold and located since 1872 under the Free Grant Act

Cured Kidney Disease

Mrs. Fred Hills, Walton street, Port Hope, Ont., states: "I was troubled for some time with kidney disease, and though I tried a great many different remedies I never succeeded in obtaining relief until I began the use of Dr. Chase's Kidney-Liver Pills. By the regular use of this preparation for a time I was completely cured of kidney disease"

WHITNEY'S BAD VOTES

The Legislative Record of J. P. Whitney, M.P.P.

A NON-PROGRESSIVE AND REACTIONARY PUBLIC MAN.

Mr. Whitney's Legislative record has been one of unreasonable opposition to everything proposed by the Liberal Government. He has opposed many of the best legislative features of the Government, which have since been sanctioned by public opinion. He has initiated nothing. He has proposed nothing new. The following extracts from his legislative record will prove the truth of the above statements and show how ill-fitted he is to become Premier of this great Province of Ontario.

Opposed the Early Closing of Shops.

By reference to page 137, Journals of 1888, it will be noticed that on the third reading of the Government Bill "to regulate the closing of shops and hours of labor therein," Mr. Whitney entered his vote against it.

Opposed the Appointment of a Minister of Agriculture.

During the session of 1888 a Government Bill was brought in "respecting the Department of Agriculture and other industries." It was moved by Mr. Meredith, seconded by Mr. Creighton, that "while this House concurs in the proposition to give greater attention by the Executive Government to the agricultural interests of the Province than has hitherto been done, it is of opinion that that end can be attained without incurring the expense of adding another member to the Executive Council, and the inevitable additional expense which will be consequent on such addition, and that therefore the said bill be not now read the third time, but be forthwith referred back to the Committee of the Whole House, with instructions to amend the same by striking out the third section thereof." (Page 136, Journals.)

The section of the bill which it was proposed to strike out reads as follows: "The Act respecting the Executive Council is further amended so far as the same restricts the Executive Council to six members."

Had Mr. Meredith's resolution prevailed there could not have been a Minister of Agriculture.

Mr. Whitney voted for this amendment and by doing so opposed the appointment of a Minister of Agriculture. By this vote he clearly put himself on record in opposition to one of the most important and most beneficial moves the Government ever made.

Wanted to Abolish the Office of Minister of Education.

Mr. Whitney voted for the abolition of the office of Minister of Education in the following amendment, moved by Mr. White, seconded by Mr. Clancy, on April 30th, 1891 (p. 163 Jls): "That the said bill (consolidating and revising laws respecting the Education Department) be not now read the third time, but that it be resolved that it is expedient to place the Education Department under the control of a non-political head and that the bill be referred back to the Committee of the Whole House with instructions to amend the same by providing for the abolition of the office of Minister of Education after the dissolution of the present House." Mr. Whitney was, therefore, then and is now in favor of an irresponsible oligarchy to control our educational interests instead of the present system of Governmental responsibility. Again in 1894 (p. 148, Jls.) Mr. Whitney voted for a similar amendment.

Opposed the Appointment of a Drainage Referee.

During the session of 1891 a Bill was introduced by the Government "respecting disputes under the drainage laws," and providing for the appointment of an expert drainage referee. Mr. Whitney opposed this under an amendment introduced by Mr. Meredith (p. 173, Journals). Mr. Whitney also repeated his vote on March 29th, 1899.

Opposed the Appointment of Superintendent of Neglected Children.

Mr. Whitney opposed the appointment of a Superintendent of Neglected Children— a branch that has fully justified its establishment and existence. Mr. Meredith moved an amendment to the bill "for the prevention of cruelty to and the better protection of children" and Mr. Whitney joined with the Opposition in voting against it. (p. 150, Journals).

Voted Against Much Needed Accommodation for the Insane in Eastern Ontario.

On April 12th, 1892, (p. 199, Journals) Mr. Whitney voted against a resolution respecting a new Asylum for the Insane for Eastern Ontario, afterwards located at Brockville, although it was soon filled with patients, showing the wisdom of increasing the accommodation for the insane at that time.

Unreasonably Opposed to the Ontario Agricultural College.

Mr. Whitney's attitude towards the Guelph Agricultural College has never been one of blind and unreasonable opposition, though his views on the establishment has been again and again proved by the farming community. On page 196 of the Journals of 1893 it is recorded that Mr. Marter moved, seconded by Mr. Kerns, "that the resolution respecting grant (in aid of agriculture) be not concurred in, but be forthwith referred back to a Committee of the Whole House, with instructions to strike out the proposed vote of $1,500 for the salary of an assistant in Librarian, etc., for the Ontario Agricultural College." Mr. Whitney voted for this motion, and in so doing evidenced his antagonism to this most useful and well conducted institution.

Voted Against a Plebiscite on the Temperance Question.

On May 2nd, 1893, (p. 98, Journals) a vote was taken on a resolution of the Government to take a plebiscite on the temperance question. Mr. Whitney recorded his vote against this method of ascertaining public opinion on the subject referred to.

Opposed to a Survey of Our New Territory

Mr. Whitney is on record as voting against the yearly surveys of new townships in Northern Ontario—surveys that were absolutely needed as settlement advanced. On May 26th, 1893, Mr. Clancy moved, seconded by Mr. Miscampbell, "that a resolution (respecting the expense of the Crown Lands Department) be not now concurred in, but be forthwith referred back to a Committee of the Whole House with instructions to strike out the item of $35,000 proposed to be voted for surveys of townships in new districts." (See p. 197, Journals, 1893.)

Opposed Appointment of Clerk of Forestry.

Almost every new departure by the Government, which the country has again and again approved, was voted against by Mr. Whitney. On April 30th, 1894, Mr. Monk moved, seconded by Mr. Preston, "that the resolution respecting grants (in aid of agriculture) be not now concurred in, but be forthwith recommitted to a Committee of the Whole House with instructions to reduce the item by $2,000, being the salary and disbursements of the Clerk of Forestry, which office was now vacant, and in the opinion of this House should be discontinued." (See p. 181, Journals, 1894.)

Mr. Whitney joined with the opposition in voting for this resolution, and yet no branch of Government was more needed or has proved itself more valuable than the Forestry Branch of the Department of Agriculture. Mr. Whitney has never grasped the importance of the great subject of forest preservation and reforestry.

On March 29th, 1899, for the third time Mr. Whitney voted to abolish the office of Clerk of Forestry.

Opposed School for Training of Teachers.

A vote was taken in the House on April 30th, 1894 (p. 179, Jls.) to grant a certain sum for the Ontario School of Pedagogy. Mr. Whitney opposed the grant and voted against it.

Opposed to Good Roads.

True to his old-fashioned and non-progressive ideas Mr. Whitney, during the session of 1896, voted for the following resolution, which was moved by Mr. Meacham and seconded by Mr. Magwood: "That all the words of the motion after the word 'that' be struck out and the following substituted—'this House views with alarm the tendency of the Government to create new offices and is of the opinion that the office of Provincial Highway Commissioner with a salary of $1,500, exclusive of expenses, is unnecessary, and places an additional and useless burden on the Province.'" (See p. 185, Journals.)

The creation of a new office of Provincial Road Commissioner has been more than justified by the subsequent experience, and the Government has received more praise for their advanced policy in this than almost any other one act. And yet, as had been said, Mr. Whitney did all in his power to block progress in this direction.

Voted Against the County Council Bill.

The public will recall the excellent and much needed legislation of 1896 to reduce the number of county councillors, thus effecting a great saving in time and expense in this realm of Municipal Government, besides simplifying the election and procedure. Mr. Whitney moves a six months' hoist of the bill, thus opposing another legislative reform demanded and since sanctioned by the people. (p. 144, Journals.)

Opposed to the Proper Audit of Municipal Accounts.

On April 9th, 1897, on a resolution in Committee of Supply to vote $2,100 for the purpose of a Municipal Auditor's salary and expenses, Mr. Whitney voted against it. The published reports of this officer are the best evidence of the need of such appointment, which has saved municipalities thousands of dollars and effected a much needed reform.

Voted Against the Encouragement of Poultry Raising.

Page 152 of Journals, 1897, records the following motion: "Mr. Carnegie moved, seconded by Mr. Kidd, that the resolution (respecting grants in aid of agriculture) be not now concurred in, but be forthwith referred back to the Committee of Supply with instructions to reduce the item by $2,000 for the farm proper of the Agricultural College and $1,400 for the Poultry Association." Mr. Whitney's name is among the supporters of this motion, which is indicative of his attitude and that of his party toward agricultural interests.

More Opposition to Agricultural Interests.

The Journals of the House of 1899 (page 264) show that Mr. Carnegie moved, seconded by Mr. Little, "that the resolution (respecting grants in aid of agriculture) be not now concurred in, but be forthwith referred back to the Committee of Supply with instructions to reduce the item by $8,100, being $2,500 voted for instructions in fruit spraying, $1,000 Pioneer Dairy Farm and $2,600 Western Dairy School, and $2,000 reduction in vote for printing." Here again Mr. Whitney proved himself to be an obstructionist in much that pertains to the development of our agricultural interests.

Again on April 20th, 1899, Mr. Whitney voted for Mr. Carnegie's motion to strike out of the estimates the sum of $2,600 for the Western Dairy School at Strathroy.

Mr. Whitney talks of establishing three or four Agricultural Colleges in Ontario; still, he has voted for the abolition, practically, of a Dairy School which costs the Province a trifle and which has been the means of giving instruction in butter and cheese making to a large number of people.

The Public Works Department Also!—Wanted to Wipe It Out.

As late as the session of 1899 Mr. Whitney voted to do away with the Public Works Department, thus wiping out of existence this important branch of Government, which for 25 years has been under the control of a Catholic Minister of the Crown. On March 29th, 1899, (p. 249 Journals) a resolution of the Committee of Supply was opposed by an Opposition amendment, which read, "that the resolution be not now concurred in, but be forthwith referred back to the Committee of Supply, with instructions to reduce the item by $18,750 being the salary and expenses of the Public Works Department."

Voted Against Immigration.

By reference to page 262 of the Journals of 1899 it will be seen that the Leader of the Opposition supported a Conservative amendment "that the resolution respecting immigration be not now concurred in, but be forthwith referred back to the Committee of Supply with instructions to reduce the item by $4,825, being immigration vote for agencies in Europe."

Voted Against the Victorian Order of Nurses.

The Government brought in a resolution on March 29, 1899, voting $2,500 for Lady Aberdeen's Victorian Order of Nurses (p. 259 Journals) to [illegible] Mr. Whitney voted against it.

BRITISH ELECTIONS

Will Find Fiscal Question Paramount When They Are On.

IMPERIAL "HIGHFALUTIN"

Too Much of It Upon Public Platforms of Great Britain Lately, Says Lord George Hamilton—He Describes Mr. Chamberlain's Campaign As An Unhappy Agitation—Free Trade Will Win.

London, Jan. 14.—(C.A.P.)—That the fiscal question will be paramount at next general election is made perfectly plain by a speech of Austin Chamberlain of the Exchequer. In refusing the request of a deputation to remit the sugar tax, he said they were well aware of the intention of the Government to make a change in the fiscal policy. This question would settle the issue at the next general election, but the Government could not anticipate any fundamental changes in the fiscal question during the present Parliament.

Herbert Gladstone, addressing the farmers of Hawarden, told them they would not find salvation in 5 two-shilling duty on corn. It was madness on the part of the British Government to propose measures which would have the effect of diminishing the world's wheat markets, to which we had rapid access. The limitation of foreign markets exposed ourselves to the great danger of fluctuations in the wheat trade and a possible shortage.

Leonard Courtney, unveiling the bust of Charles Buller at Liskeard, referred specially to his work in the Durham report as an illustration that he always went forward.

Prophecies Free Trade Win.

Lord George Hamilton, M.P., Unionist free trader, addressing a meeting of two thousand citizens at Blackburn said the reason for his leaving the Government was because he saw that Mr. Chamberlain's motive unless given a check would degenerate into pure protection. They had been told to think imperially. He had been an Imperialist all his life. He learnt Imperialism from Lords Beaconsfield and Salisbury, who taught that though Imperialism in the abstract might be admirable in the concrete it must be regulated by the burden which it entailed. There had been, in his judgment, too much Imperial "high falutin" on public platforms lately. His complaint against the tariff reformers was that they had made no wide general survey of the industrial position or of the complexity of the Imperial connections abroad, before embarking on this unhappy agitation. With regard to the colonial offer he thought the tariff reformers did not deal fairly with their audiences. The measure of benefit we could derive from such an offer was simply the extent to which we could displace foreign goods now going to the colonies. He expressed his strong belief that free trade would win "hands down."

Will Go With Mother Country.

London, Jan. 14.—(C. A. P.)—Speaking at the Colonial Exhibition at Liverpool, Lord Strathcona said the colonies even now possessed resources which made up a very great Empire. Speaking for Canada, he could say that it was ready to go with the mother country in everything that could be of advantage to the whole Empire. Whatever their political views, all must admit that Mr. Chamberlain had been the colonies best friend and had done more than any other man to knit the different parts of the Empire together.

Lord Strathcona has consented to receive the thousand guests invited to an international ball promoted by the City of London Commercial Association, of which he is president. The Lord Mayor and Lady Mayoress and the sheriffs will attend in state, while the French, German and American Ambassadors will be represented officially.

English Cotton Trade.

London, Jan. 14.—Commenting on Mr. Chamberlain's Preston speech, the president of the Federation of Master Cotton Spinners says: "Mr. Chamberlain does not understand the cotton industry at all." Sir William Holland, M. P., says: "Mr. Chamberlain has thrown up the sponge, so far as the cotton trade is concerned." Alfred Emmett, M. P., thinks Mr. Chamberlain utterly failed to disprove the statement that the cotton trade must be injured under his scheme by the increased cost of manufacture. D. J. Shackleton, M. P., thinks Mr. Chamberlain's speech will not help the protectionist cause.

Liked Our Apples.

London, Jan. 14.—Mr. and Mrs. Chamberlain, when visiting the Colonial Products Exhibition at Liverpool, made a long stay at the Canadian exhibit. Mrs. Chamberlain showed particular interest in the show of apples, which she thought the finest she had ever seen. A basket of Canadian fruit was presented to her. Lord Strathcona went yesterday to inspect the Canadian exhibit at the Colonial Products Exhibition.

Took Her Own Life.

Milverton, Jan. 14.—Mrs. Wettzel, about 60 years old, who was married the second time a few weeks ago, cut her throat with a razor Thursday night severing the wind pipe. The local doctors consider her in a dangerous condition, but think she may recover.

Decree For Bishop.

London, Jan. 14.—A special convocation of the Western University, held at Huron College last evening, at 8 o'clock conferred the degree of D.D. upon His Lordship Right Rev. Bishop Williams. The bishop delivered an address.

Fix Rates By Agreement.

Chicago, Jan. 16.—With the exception of the Michigan Central, all the railroads extending from Chicago, have decided to fix passenger rates absolutely by agreement. The Michigan Central has withheld its vote until the opinion of the general counsel regarding the legality of the agreement can be had.

MOSCOW STUDENTS HATE HIM

Incurred Their Enmity By the Severity With Which He Put Down Their Demonstrations of Dec. 18 and 19, 1904—Was Bidding Farewell to Grand Duke Sergius When Attempt Was Made.

Moscow, Jan. 16.—At the Nicholas Station last night, while Gen. Trepoff was bidding farewell to Grand Duke Sergius on his departure for St. Petersburg, a young man wearing a student's cap fired three shots from a revolver at the general. All the shots missed Gen. Trepoff. Grand Duke Sergius proceeded on his journey.

Gen Trepoff, who recently was relieved of the office of chief of police of Moscow, and ordered to the front, as head of the Red Cross Society in Manchuria, incurred the special enmity of students of Moscow by the severity with which he put down their demonstrations of Dec. 18 and 19, 1904.

MASSACRE BY CUAMATOS.

945 Out of the Portuguese Expeditionary Force Return Out of 500—Main Column Ruined.

Mossamedes (Portuguese Southwest Africa), Jan. 16.—The disaster sustained by the Portuguese expeditionary force at the hands of the Cuamato tribe is the greatest suffered by a white power in Africa in modern times.

The force, 500 strong, with two guns, after marching for four hours through high thornbush, was suddenly attacked by a big mass of Cuamatos many thousand strong. When the native troops saw this huge host of the enemy they became frightened, broke the square, and threw themselves on the white troops for protection.

Fearful disorder ensued. The officers exerted themselves heroically to withstand the attack of the enemy, but ammunition ran short, and when a sergeant and some white troops were sent to the main column to ask for more they were only given three rounds for each man.

As was natural, these cartridges were soon used up, and the white troops, in desperation, charged the enemy and killed many with the bayonet, but were overpowered by numbers.

Of the 480 men and 19 officers who set out in the morning, only 248 men and two officers returned to camp, and of these 50 men and one officer were wounded and the two guns were in the hands of the enemy.

Not a single shot was fired by the main column, consisting of 1,300 men, with 28 guns, in defence of their slaughtered comrades, but three shells were fired at their own men, whom they mistook for the enemy.

The entire countryside is in revolt.

"GESSLER ROSSEAU" ARRESTED.

Infernal Machine Man May Be Karl Dullman's Brother.

Philadelphia, Pa., Jan. 16.—"Gessler Rosseau," who was arrested in this city on Thursday with an unloaded infernal machine in his possession, admitted to the police yesterday that he is the man who attempted to destroy the statue of Frederick the Great in Washington last Tuesday, and that it was he also who sent the trunk containing an infernal machine to the Cunard Liner Umbria, at New York in May, 1903. The prisoner, whose right name is not known, made these admissions in the detective bureau after he had been identified by persons brought here from New York and Washington for that purpose.

He gives no reasons for the attempted outrages, except "there are too many foreign affairs in this country."

Is He Dullman's Brother?

Toronto, Jan. 16.—It is thought here that Rosseau may be a brother of Karl Dullman now serving in Kingston as leader in Welland Canal conspiracy. A picture of Rosseau received here last night might well be a photograph of "Dullman" taken ten or fifteen years ago. The same heavy features, broad nose and large mouth would be recognized by anyone who saw the dynamiter, but the similarity is far from making it certain that the men are brothers.

THE FRENCH CRISIS

Combes Will Resign and New Cabinet Will Be Formed.

AFTER RIOTOUS DEBATING

Premier Was Sustained in the Chamber of Deputies By a Majority of Ten, and He States That His Retirement Is Purely Voluntary.—The Questions Which Have Caused the Upheaval in France.

Paris, Jan. 16.—Premier Combes' Cabinet weathered another storm after a session of the Chamber of Deputies, lasting until 1 o'clock yesterday morning, and secured a majority of ten on a motion supporting the declaration of the Ministers and approving the policy of the Government. The result was reached after a debate in which there were frequent violent altercations which threatened a free fight and, during the course of which an Opposition Deputy flourished a saucepan in the face of the Premier. The majority, although not large, is considered sufficient to insure the retention of the Ministry.

It was generally expected that the session of the Chamber of Deputies yesterday would culminate in the overthrow of the Ministry of Premier Combes, and the doors and galleries were packed by persons who desired to witness the final struggle. The contest against the Ministry has been slowly gaining ground. The principal elements of opposition were first, those combatting the policy of Premier Combes for separation of church and State; second, those denouncing the Government's collection of secret reports regarding the lives of army officers, and, third, those complaining of the tardiness of the Ministry in passing a law creating an income tax.

Confronted By Rebellion.

These various elements sapped the strength of the majority until Premier Combes on Saturday found himself confronted by rebellion in his own ranks. His speech in closing the three days' debate on the policy of the Government was a vehement defence of his Ministry and a denunciation of his detractors.

"They are the same men who sought to protect Esterhazy, who glorified Col. Henry, and who now seeks to arouse the army to the pitch of attempting a 'coup de stat,'" said M. Combes.

The Premier referred to the calumnies which had not spared his white hairs. He wished time to complete the work against the religious associations, and if the Ministry were retained, he said it would proceed to consider the income tax, workingmen's pensions and the separation of church and State, but that the latter would be modified so as to avoid any spirit of intolerance. In closing, Premier Combes said:

A March Forward Or Reaction.

"I hope the majority will be maintained in order to carry out this policy. If there is to be another Ministry, it will be one of reaction. The Chamber must choose between marching forward or lending itself to reaction."

The speech was interrupted by noisy demonstrations of applause and disapproval.

MM. Ribot and Bos attacked the Ministry, the latter declaring that M. Combes' policy was one of falsehood and dissimulation. An indescribable tumult followed. The Socialists endeavored to scale the benches to attack members on the opposite side of the Chamber, and amid cries of "Traitor," "Coward," "Assassin," the Premier temporarily suspended the session.

The violent scenes were renewed when the session resumed its sitting, and a preliminary vote showed the Government had a majority of fourteen. The decisive vote was taken on a motion of Bienvenue Martin approving the declarations and program of the Government, and was adopted by a vote of 289 to 279.

Premier Combes Will Resign.

The Ministry of M. Combes, after emerging successfully from its bitter midnight struggle in the Chamber of Deputies, has decided to abandon the field while some portion of its prestige still remains, and has signified its intention of resigning. Official announcement of the resignation has not yet been made, but M. Combes has definitely stated the intention of himself and his colleagues, and the termination of the Ministry after a tempestuous career of three years, only awaits the formal submission of the letters of retirement.

M. Combes considers that his departure will facilitate the realization of the program instead of interrupting it, since his successor will be able to unite the discordant elements which have become personally hostile to him.

It is conceded that M. Combes' voluntary withdrawal will permit him to exercise a powerful and probably a decisive influence in the choice of his successor.

Owing to the death of Mme. Loubet the presentation of the resignations of the Ministers has been deferred until Wednesday morning. President Loubet will begin on the same afternoon consultations for the formation of a new Ministry.

M. Rouvier appears to be practically decided upon as the future chief of the Ministry, and it is understood that he has asked M. Delcasse and M. Berteaux to retain the Foreign and War portfolios respectively.

Mother of the President Dead.

Paris, Jan. 16.—Mme. Loubet, mother of the President, died at Marsanne yesterday from congestion of the lungs, aged 92. The President's son, Paul, and other members of the family were at her bedside when she expired. President Loubet had expected to leave last evening for Marsanne, but the announcement of the death of his mother came before he was able to depart. Mme. Loubet contributed much to the President's prestige, as she was a type of the simple country class. The funeral will take place on Tuesday, and President Loubet will leave Paris today in order to attend. Many officials and members of the diplomatic corps have called at the Elysee Palace to express sympathy with the President.

DAMAGE BY FIRE.

Lord Strathcona Will Bear the Cost of Rebuilding Burned Portion of Royal Victoria Hospital

Montreal, Jan. 16.—Lord Strathcona has cabled to the authorities of the Royal Victoria Hospital that he will bear the cost of rebuilding the burned portion of the hospital.

Montreal was alarmed at an early hour Saturday morning by the report that the Royal Victoria Hospital was on fire.

It is unfortunately true that a portion of the grand collection of buildings suffered to the extent of several thousands of dollars, and there was much excitement among the patients; but, thanks to the admirable methods adopted in building the centre and east and west wings, there was at no time any danger whatever of the fire reaching the patients. Those who are in a position to know say that they think that $50,000 will cover the loss. Not a patient was hurt or even disturbed, with one exception, and forms the greatest cause for rejoicing.

The Royal Victoria Hospital has been occupied about 12 years. It was founded by Lord Strathcona and Lord Mount Stephen, who gave half a million dollars each towards its establishment.

EATEN BY CANNIBALS.

Five Priests and Five Nuns Slaughtered By South Sea Islanders.

San Francisco, Jan. 14.—The Rev. M. L. Stimson, South Sea missionary, who arrived Saturday on the steamer Doris, brings the first details of the murder of five Catholic priests and five nuns of New Britain last October. After the murders the savages ate the bodies of the victims, within sight of the German Governor's residence.

Mr. Stimson is settled at Penapi, Caroline Islands, and he got the details from the Vice-Governor of New Britain. He said the nuns and priests were surrounded by a mob of natives whose fanaticism had been aroused. The priests fought for their lives, but all were soon killed. Then the cannibals proceeded to hold a feast on the bodies of the victims near the residence of Dr. Hahl, the Governor. He has organized a punitive expedition.

ANSWERS DEPUTATION.

Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman Favors Freedom For Canadian Cattle.

London, Jan. 16.—A deputation convened by Mr. Pattullo, secretary of the Canadian Cattle Importation Association, has interviewed Sir Henry Campbell-Bannerman, M. P., Opposition leader, as to his attitude regarding the re-opening of British ports to Canadian cattle, which they said would benefit both the agricultural and shipping interests. Replying, Sir Henry said as for himself he was in favor of Canadian cattle being admitted into this country, and had no idea the case for free trade was so strong. He hoped the public would understand the question, and he would do what he could to get the ports re-opened.

Poor Maude Gonne.

Paris, Jan. 16.—Maude Gonne MacBride arrived in Paris Saturday with the unhappy story of her divorce suit against the major, which is coming before the London courts in a few days. Mrs. MacBride desired for the sake of her child, which is one year old, to ask only a separation, and not an absolute divorce, but finding Major MacBride's terms too hard, a divorce was decided on. Mrs. MacBride charges drunkenness, infidelity and cruelty. The major keeps the $14,000 which Maude Gonne settled on him when they were married. He also wants the child for six months of the year, letting its mother keep it the rest of the time. To this she objected on the ground that the major's mother keeps a barroom in Paris.

Principal Shelaire Dead.

Regina, N.W.T., Jan. 16.—Rev. J. A. Sinclaire, principal of the Indian Industrial School here, died at Victoria Hospital yesterday afternoon. Deceased had been suffering from appendicitis, and was operated on Saturday. He had been for a number of years in charge of the Indian institution here, and was well known in the east. His sudden demise will prove an irreparable loss to the Indian population, among whom he was an ardent and successful worker. Before receiving his appointment at the school here, Mr. Sinclaire was a Presbyterian missionary in the Yukon.

H. H. DEWART AT WARSAW

Splendid Rally for Mr. Anderson on Friday.

Excellent Address by the Candidate and Mr. Dewart— Opposition Effectively Answered.

Mr. William Anderson, Liberal candidate for East Peterborough, held a most successful meeting at Warsaw on Friday night. Mr. Anderson was ably supported by Mr. Hartley Dewart, K. C., of Toronto, who made a most excellent address on the provincial issues of the day.

The chair was occupied by Mr. Dennis Moloney, who opened the meeting with a few well-chosen words.

Mr. Anderson, who was the first speaker, referred to his long connection with municipal matters, and thanked them for the honour they had done him two years ago in electing him to the Legislature. He asked for a renewal of that confidence on the 25th of the present month, and judging from the warm greeting Mr. Anderson has received, he will have that confidence renewed.

Dr. Meacham, Warsaw, was allowed three quarters of a n hour in which to speak in favour of Mr. Anderson's opponent. The doctor made an effort to show that the province was under direct taxation, and in support of this he claimed that the taxing of railways and corporations was direct taxation. He also claimed that taxing the estates of dead men was a "form of direct taxation." He stated that when he left the Legislature, (having formerly represented Lennox) eight years ago, the province was eight millions of dollars in debt. He had not kept track of the provincial accounts of late, and he did not know where they now stood.

Mr. Hartley Dewart, who was the next speaker, was warmly received. He first referred to the kindly feeling he held for the township of Douro in view of the fact that it was the township where his late father had spent his boyhood days. Turning to the questions of provincial politics, he referred to the arguments of Dr. Meacham in a most convincing manner. He ridiculed even the suggestion that the taxing of dead men's estates was a form of direct taxation, and showed the large revenue the province had derived from Succession Duties since the Act came into force. He good naturedly enlightened Dr. Meacham on the financial condition of the province, stating that the province had got along splendidly since the doctor left the House, and if the province were in debt when the doctor left the House, it had now a cash surplus in the bank.

Mr. Dewart reviewed the records of the two parties as to corruption. He showed how every honest effort had been made to stamp out corruption, which might exist in the Liberal party, while the Conservative party had made no attempt whatever to clean their door steps, but were putting such men in the field as Dr. Beattie Nesbitt and others of a similar calibre. Mr. Dewart made a thorough review of the various departmental branches of the Government, and closed by a strong appeal for the support of the electors of Dummer, on behalf of Mr. Anderson.

Mr. Dewart's address was at intervals enthusiastically applauded. The meeting closed with cheers for the King, the candidate and Mr. Dewart.

SOME DEALS IN REAL ESTATE

Mr. T. C. Elliott Purchases a Good Business Block.

$12,000 Paid for Premises now Occupied by Mr. H. H. Edmison.—

The last few weeks have been lively ones in Peterborough real estate, and some good sales are reported. One of these is the purchase by Mr. T. C. Elliott, of the Beehive and Port Hope Knitting Works, of the premises at present occupied by Mr. H. H. Edmison, and directly south of his Beehive store. It is understood the price paid for the property, which was purchased from the Toronto Savings and Loan Company, was in the neighbourhood of $12,000.

Mr. Edmison has a five years' lease of the property and it has still about four and a half years to run before it expires.

The price paid for this property, $12,000, is a good one, and shows that Peterborough real estate is increasing in value rapidly.

FOUNTAIN PEN FOR MR. HARDING

Members of Strangers' Fellowship Club Presented him with it.

There was a largely attended and deeply interesting monthly business meeting of the Strangers' Fellowship Club at the Y.M.C.A. on Saturday, the members as usual enjoying tea together at 6 o'clock.

At the conclusion of the business Mr. Jas. Gerrard, the first Vice-President, took the chair, and in a unique, inimitable way introduced the subject for which the members had been anxiously waiting, namely showing the great appreciation of the members for the faithful work of Mr Harding, whose efforts have made the club the greate uccess it has been.

Mr. E. L. Galley followed in a well-worded speech, and Mr. Rupert McClennan also spoke, and in concluding, presented Mr. Harding with a handsome fountain pen on behalf of the club.

Mr. Harding was so taken by surprise that it was with difficulty he found words to express his gratitude to the members, and also the great pleasure it was to be associated with them in the work of helping strangers.

The meeting closed with the Y.M. C.A. hymn, "Blest be the Tie that Binds."

MISSIONARY SPOKE OF INDIA WORK

Miss Dr. McKellar Addressed Large Congregation at St. Andrews.

Work is Making Satisfactory Progress. Music at the Service.

Mrs. Dr. McKellar, a returned missionary from Central India, spoke to a large congregation at St. Andrew's last evening. Miss McKeller has spent nearly fifteen years in India, and is home on furlough, with the intention of returning again next September. She is a very interesting speaker, and gave most encouraging reports of the progress of the work in that far-away country.

Before speaking of India, the missionary referred briefly to two classes mentioned in the New Testament those who were engaged in every manner of good work, and those which like the salt had lost its savour, were good for nothing. She hoped that all would strive to be classed in first group, and whether they went to foreign fields or remained at home, they would do all in their power to spread the Gospel of Christ.

It would be a great disappointment to Miss McKeller were she not privileged to return to India, for the work there was most interesting, and her heart was in it. The reason why Christ was not reigning throughout the world was, because we, as Christians, and those who have gone before us, were not faithful in carrying out the Divine command. The world would have been evangelized long before this had Christians done their duty. At the present time there were 88 million Greeks, 194 million Roman Catholics, 198 million Mohammedans, 10 million Jews, and 850 millions who knew nothing of Christ. There were 300 million souls in India, and but a very small percentage of these were Christians. There were more Mohammedans at present in King Edward's Empire, than there were Christians. There were 50 million Christians, 60 million Mohommedans, and 240 million heathen in the Empire.

In order to successfully carry on work among the native of India, it was necessary to know them and know their habits. The Hindoos were idol-worshippers and some of their customs were shockingly barbarous. The speaker referred to the terrible hardships and suffering during the recent famines and plague, which carried off thousands of the natives. During these trying times the missionaries took many orphans and helpless parents under their control, and numbers were converted to Christ. The missionaries were looking to the orphans as future helpers in the cause of Christ. Recently 61 of the older girls had been baptized.

The terrible effects of the plague were shown by the fact that where it was most prevalent, 200 people died daily, and these included two missionaries who were most zealous in the cause. Nevertheless, great advances had been made, and many souls were brought to Christ.

The speaker referred to the work in Neemosh, where she was stationed during the greater part of her stay in India. A fine new church had been built there, the funds being all collected in India. The speaker hoped that there were some in the audience who would decide to lead the life of the missionary, for the work was a glorious one, and was carrying out the command of Christ.

The anthem, which was very effectively rendered by the choir, was "Calvary," Miss Miller taking the soprano solo. Miss McCutcheon, of Toronto, sang "The Holy City," in a very pleasing voice.

ADDRESSES AT THE Y.M.C.A. HALL

Interesting Programme will be Given To-morrow Night.

Edwards, president of the Y.M.C.A. and Mr. Kenner, of the Collegiate Institute. After the addresses light refreshments will be served.

We want to get every member here, so that we might create within him a new interest in our physical department. A special invitation is given to all ladies and gentlemen to attend the class work, and see what we do. The gallery is always open to visitors, and seats are provided.—Opm.

Stratton and Mr. R. H. Hall, M.P. This will be the last meeting of the campaign.

Mr. Willis is a native of somersetshire, England, and Mrs. Willis, of Hamilton Township. They came to Cobourg 30 years ago. The children are Mrs. Williams (Lena) Cadillac, Mich.; Mrs. (Rev.) BOARD OF TRADE ASKS ASSISTANCE

Wants Montreal Chamber of Commerce to Help Secure Better Freight Rates.

At a meeting of the Montreal Chamber of Commerce a communication was received from the Peterborough Board of Trade drawing attention to certain correspondence which has passed between that body and the president of the American Cereal Company of Chicago, which had a factory in Peterborough. The board had written asking why the operations of the plant at Peterborough had been curtailed.

The president of the American Cereal Company replied that up to present season conditions had favoured Peterborough owing to the two successive crop failures in the United States, which had placed the American wheat market above export basis. But this year the conditions had returned to their natural level and both markets were at present on an export basis. As the profit of manufacturing depended on the cost of transportation, the president of the American Cereal Company finally thought that the railway grain in the United States being cheaper, the company could deliver their product to the seaboard at a lower cost than in Canada.

The Petrborough Board of Trade thought that the railway grain rates should be so adjusted in Canada as to encourage home manufacture. With this aim in view, they solicited the co-operation of the Chambre de Commerce in obtaining such concessions through the Railway Commission as will enable large manufacturers of cereals to secure reduced rates so as to encourage them in the manufacturing for foreign markets.

LAID AT REST.

Funeral of the Late Walter Johnston [illegible] Yesterday Afternoon.

The late wrarter Johnston, the son of Mr. and Mrs. Joseph Johnston, of Chamberlain street, was laid to rest last Friday afternoon. The pall bearers were four youths from the Park Street Baptist Sunday School, viz, Charles Barrie, H. Lincoln Brace, Douglas Lomis, and Norman Barrie. The beautiful white casket was literally covered with flowers one wreath being conspicuous above all others with the solitary name, "Walter."

The deep respect of the membership of the church and the neighbors was shown by the fact that every room and available spot where a hearing could be obtained of the funeral sermon, which was preached by their pastor, the Rev. A. H. Brace, was filled.

The entire family connections were largely represented.

A memorial service will be held on Monday night in the Park Street Baptist Church, when the class and the teachers and a number of the Sunday School children will be present.

REINFORCEMENTS FOR OYAMA

200,000 Men Ready to Start From Tokio.

More Soldiers to Oppose Kuropatkin—50,000 Already on Their Way.

Special to the Examiner

St. Petersburg, Jan. 16.—It is admitted in official circles that anarchy prevails throughout the Empire, including St. Petersburg itself. Russian statesmen, it is further admitted, are casting about for some means to bring the war to an end. At Lods yesterday, rioters fired fifty shots at the police, wounding one officer. The police replied with a volley, killing the standard bearer of the rioters. Sixteen of the disturbers were arrested.

London, Jan. 16—According to the Rome correspondent of the Central News, a despatch has been received in the Italian capital, from Tokio, announcing that 200,000 reinforcements are ready to be sent to Field-Marshall Oyama, who is operating against General Kuropatkin at the Shahk River; 50,000 troops have already been started on their way.

THE CHAIRMEN GAVE ADDRESSES

Splendid Liberal Rally on Saturday Night.

Ward Chairmen Told of the Work of Organization—Successful Meeting.

The regular weekly Liberal rally held on Saturday night in the Simcoe street committee rooms, and there was a splendid turn out, particularly in view of the fact that there had been a political meeting the night before, which the great majority had attended. There was the same, if not an increasing enthusiasm shown among those who were present, and the meeting was in every respect a thoroughly satisfactory one.

Mr. Garrow was, as usual, the chairman of the meeting, and stirring addresses were given by the different chairmen of the ward committees, and their messages were cheering. They told of the state of the work in each of the wards, and it was found that the organization work had been proceeding apace, and was in splendid shape. As it is in the work of organization that the most effective work is done, the information that this was in good shape was pleasing to the audience.

Mr. F. D. Kerr followed in a rousing campaign speech, and the last address of the evening was given by Hon. J. R. Stratton.

The last rally will be held next Saturday night, and in the meantime the workers are urged to make every moment of the time count.

MR. ANDERSON IN THE NORTH

Successful Meetings in the Northern Townships.

The campaign in the East Riding of Peterborough is going merrily on, and Mr. Anderson, the Liberal candidate, who is prosecuting a vigorous contest, is meeting with great success, both in his meetings, and in his personal canvass. Mr. Anderson, accompanied by Mr. G. K. Martin, just returned from a very successful campaigning trip to the north country, having held enthusiastic meetings in Haultain, Apsley, Lasswade and Clydesdale.

Mr. Anderson will hold a meeting at Cottesloe on Thursday night of this week, and another at Westwood on Friday night. Mr. Anderson is arranging for good platform speakers for these two meetings.

On Monday night a grand Liberal rally will be held at Havelock, at which the candidate, Mr. Anderson, Mr. Daniel O'Connell and others, will be present and deliver addresses.

LACK OF LITIGATION IN PETERBOROUGH

A Paucity of Pickings for Legal Practitioners.

There are pessimists billous enough to say that the world isn't growing any better, but the dwindling spoil of the lawyers, in the matter of litigation, would indicate that millennial conditions are coming, when warriors shall beat their swords into ploughshares, and lawyers convert their gowns into grain bags. It would seem that the Peterborough public is becoming so pacific, that the earnings of lawyers from litigation hardly serves to give food enough to afford a toothpick employment.

A legal gentleman informed the Examiner this morning that last year there were only 39 Superior Court writs issued, that in respect of the cases that went on trial, judgments for less than $10,000 were given, and that the total costs taxed amounted to only $1,000. Now dividing $1,000 in a whole year amongst about thirty lawyers of Peterborough, suggests the parable of dividing two small fishes amongst the five thousand hungry people of the parable. Litigation in Peterborough is certainly not a gold mine for the lawyers. If the people won't be scrapping, there will be no scrape.

From the County Court during the year, one writ was issued.

As an offset against this condition, the prosperity of the town the transfer of property, the incorporation of companies, etc., etc., turn the activities of our lawyers, into, happily, more profitable directions, in which they become agents for producing wealth, instead of mere dividers of litigious spoil.

—To-morrow afternoon at 3.30 in the church parlours, the Women's Foreign Missionary Society of St. Andrew's will meet. Miss Leah McCutcheon will assist on the programme.

LAYMEN'S ADDRESS CHURCH MISSIONS

Yesterday was Missionary Sunday in English Churches

Addresses by Messrs. Kirkpatrick and Saunders of Toronto.

Yesterday was Missionary Sunday, at St. John's, Church of England. The special feature for the morning and evening services, which were invested with a missionary character by the hymns, lessons and prayers, was addresses, in place of the usual sermons, by two laymen, deputed by the Synod and Mission Board, to present to important congregations of this diocese, the claims of the missionary cause, especially from the laymen's point of view.

In the morning Mr. G. B. Kirkpatrick, of the Survey Branch of the Crown Lands Department, Toronto, spoke in the morning to a large congregation. He dealt with the general subject of missions, and the relation of the laity to them. He spoke of the greatly aroused interest of the Church, and dealt largely on the spiritual side of the work.

On the other hand, the evening address, given by Mr. D. W. Saunders, dealt more fully with the, so to speak, business side of the subject, which specially commended itself to the interest and activity of the laity. He mentioned the points at which foreign missions were maintained, by the church, Japan, China, India, Persia, Africa and South America. The domestic mission field included the diocese of Algoma, and all the western dioceses. The rapid way in which these were filling up with new population, threw a special responsibility on the Church to provide for their spiritual needs. Diocesan missions were a field that specially appealed to us. The question of the work was not so much a matter of money as of men to do the work. One mission covering 500 square miles was served by three men who had to travel 100 miles a week in their work and the amount of work, and the hardships could be imagined. The speaker spoke of the responsibility of the laity — these people, in these sparse districts, were their people in respect of which their baptismal vows enforced a solemn responsibility.

Mr. Saunders, who gave a thoughtful address, closed by an appeal to the laymen of the Church to strive to arouse within themselves a greater sense of their responsibility to the great cause of missions.

Mr. Kirkpatrick and Mr. Saunders also delivered addresses in All Saints, morning and evening, very similar in character to those given in St. John's.

RUSSIA'S WARNING

Formal Notification to the Powers of Danger From China.

RESULT OF JAP PROPAGANDA

Considers Danger Imminent of General Uprising in China, and That Time Has Come For Civilized Powers to Butt in For the Protection of Their Own Interests—Hints By the Cossacks.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 14.—Russia's formal notification to the powers of the imminent danger of a general uprising in China as the result of a Japanese propaganada, which will threaten all foreign interests, coupled with a general protest against China's repeated violation of her neutrality in operations, is really a warning to the powers that Russia regards the situation as extremely serious and considers that the time has come for joint action by the powers for the protection of their own interests.

For herself, Russia considers that Japan has broken the pledge she made with respect to Secretary Hay's note at the beginning of the war, and further persistence in this course will, she considers, absolve her from further observance and leave her free to act for her own protection. The present note followed the two preliminary warnings addressed to the powers, one in October and the other in November, "neither of which was heeded." It has an entirely different tinge, setting forth breaches of Chinese neutrality by including the Ryeshitelni case and also the use of the Minotao Islands, belonging to China, as a base for the Japanese fleet, the constant despatch of contraband from various Chinese ports, the employment of Chinese soldiers in the Japanese army and the hiring of Chinese bandits to attack Russian communications.

Should General Ma or any Chinese troops now move, Russia will feel herself free to cross the Liao River into the neutral zone. As for the powers, Russia believes the situation has become serious owing to the stimulus given anti-foreign agitation in China by the fall of Port Arthur.

In diplomatic circles importance is attached to the note and to the general opinion it is designed to induce Secretary Hay to bring joint pressure to bear in order to prevent the extension of the zone of hostilities and to compel Chiba to adopt drastic measures against the present agitation in the interior of that empire.

CAVALRY RAIDS.

Cossacks Menacing the Japanese Lines of Communication.

Tokio, Jan. 14.—The bodies of Russian cavalry raiders actively operating southwest of the Liaoyang are evidently desirous of harassing Japanese railroad communication and interrupting the transportation of Gen. Nogi's army to reinforce Field Marshal Oyama at Liaoyang.

The Japanese army headquarters, reporting Thursday, says:

"On Wednesday at 10 in the morning a Japanese cavalry detachment encountered four companies of Russian cavalry west of Tangmases, southwest of Liaoyang, and fiercely engaged them. At 2.30 the Russians were repulsed with heavy losses. Subsequently they were reinforced by several companies of cavalry and eight guns. The Japanese drew the Russians to Liuerhpao and engaged and pursued them."

On Wednesday night a small body of Russian cavalry reached the railroad line and tore up the tracks between Anshantien and Haicheng and Tatchekiao and Yinkow. They were immediately repaired and the line was re-opened to traffic.

"On Wednesday afternoon 2,000 Russian cavalry with guns attacked Newchwang. The Japanese were forced to retire temporarily, but were reinforced and attacked and are still pursuing them.

"The Russians also attacked Muchiatun, but were repulsed."

A report from Japanese army headquarters on the Liaotung Peninsula, received yesterday, says:

"A body of Russians, evidently from Gen. Mistchenko's cavalry brigade, with the Second Infantry Regiment, railroad guards and guns, recently surrounded the Japanese post at Niuchatun, north of Yinkow, on the line of communications, and assaulted it from the direction of Siantsiatzu. The Russians were repulsed, losing at last 80 men."

Stoessel a Fair Minded Man.

Tokio, Jan. 14.—It is announced here that Gen. Stoessel, in bidding farewell to the Russian troops at Port Arthur, thanked the officers and men for their heroic defence, and said he considered that the Japanese terms were the best it was possible to have offered. He added that he would take all the blame of the premature surrender of the fortress.

Russian Sailors Sentenced.

Shanghai, Jan. 14.—The naval court-martial at the Russian Consulate here yesterday sentenced the two sailors of the Russian cruiser Askold, charged with the murder of a Chinaman on Dec. 15, as the result of a quarrel over the hiring of a jinrikisha, to four years' imprisonment and the loss of all civil rights.

Mirsky Still There.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 14.—The rumor that the resignation of the Ministry of the Interior by Prince Sviatopolk-Mirsky had been accepted is without foundation. The entire ministerial situation remains unchanged.

PRESIDENT TO SENATE.

Roosevelt's Reasons For Desiring Us to Have Arbitration Complete Ratified.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The Senate yesterday made public the letter of President Roosevelt regarding the arbitration treaties sent to the Senate, Dec. 13, 1904.

"These conventions do not go so far as I would wish in scope and object, but they form, taken together, a very important step in the progress of the world toward a policy of peaceful solution of such differences as cannot conveniently be settled by diplomatic negotiations," says Mr. Roosevelt in the letter. "The limitations which seem objectionable to many advocates of a policy of arbitration are not without compensating advantages. They commit none of the contracting parties to any action in opposition to their national interests, their policy or their aspirations. Their value is that they constitute an advance in the direction of the purpose so ardently desired—of the reign of universal peace and good will.

"No discrimination has been made among the powers signatory to The Hague convention who have desired to enter into these friendly relations, and it would be undesirable from the standpoint of what this Government is striving to accomplish to make any such discrimination. I should not willingly exchange ratifications with any of the powers unless the series of conventions as a whole should meet with the favorable consideration of the Senate."

SOO'S OPINION OF ROSS.

Remarkable Reception Given to the Hon. A. G. MacKay.

Sault Ste. Marie, Ont., Jan. 14.—Evidence of the manner in which the people of new Ontario, and the Soo in particular, appreciate what the Liberal Government has done for this part of the Province during the last few years was given last evening in a magnificent reception tendered Hon. A. G. MacKay upon his first visit to this town since his acceptance of the portfolio of Commissioner of Crown Lands.

Mr. MacKay addressed a meeting held in the local Opera House in the interests of the candidature of C. N. Smith. Long before the hour set for the meeting, and before the speakers had entered, the building was filled with people anxious to hear the brilliant young Minister.

The announcement of most interest in Mr. MacKay's address was that it is the intention of the Government to create a new portfolio to be placed in charge of a new Minister, to be known as the Minister of Colonization and Labor. The conditions particular to this section of the country make the wisdom of such a move on the part of the Government quite apparent, and it is recognized as being in line with the progressive policy the Liberal party has ever followed in connection with the development of new Ontario.

Mr. Whitney At Chatham.

Chatham, Jan. 14.—Mr. Whitney arrived here 40 minutes late. He was met at the station by a crowd of supporters, besides a large number of Liberals down to see Mr. Evanturel off, who had spoken at Pain Court Thursday evening. Mr. Whitney was driven to the Hotel Garner, where he dined and held a reception. A bumper house greeted him last night, fully half of whom were Liberals. A large number of the fair sex lent attractiveness to the balcony. Mr. Whitney was accompanied by Matthew Williams, K.C., Jas. Clancy, Phil Bowyer, the two candidates, and was greeted with a few scattered cheers. Mr. Wilson acted as Chairman and introduced the speakers in a short address. Mr. Whitney was received with applause. He did not ask support merely on party grounds, but on the platform propounded two and a half years ago, which he attempted to explain at some length. The rest of the speech was a politic appeal to Liberals on the ground that they were wronged and their interests not consulted by Mr. Ross and the machine.

W. L. Edmonds Nominated.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—The Liberals of East Toronto last night nominated W. L. Edmonds as their candidate in the approaching contest with Dr. Pyne for membership in the Local House.

MR. BORDEN ACCEPTS.

Conservatives Once More Have a Director —A Constituency Has Yet to Be Found For Him.

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—R. L. Borden has accepted the leadership of the Conservative party, tendered him by the Conservative caucus last Tuesday night. He will resume his old position in the House as soon as a seat can be provided for him.

Mr. Borden arrived in Ottawa at midnight Thursday night, having left Halifax a few hours after the desire of the Conservative caucus had been communicated to him. He attended the adjourned caucus which met at 10 o'clock yesterday morning and definitely accepted the offer of the party leadership.

One condition Mr. Borden stipulated, was that he held himself free to resign if he did not receive that party support which he had a right to expect. Aside from this condition he placed himself at the disposal of the party and promised it the fullest benefit of his energy and ability.

Edward Kidd of Carleton, offered Mr. Borden his seat. He said the local executive had approved of his action, but it would be necessary to obtain the sanction of his constituents at a general meeting. This meeting will be held at an early date, and it is not expected that opposition will be offered. The Government, it is understood, will issue the writ for the bye-election with all possible speed.

A brief discussion took place on the question of holding a national convention. Mr. Borden said the suggestion had been made to him, and he thought it should be considered. No decision was reached yesterday, but the probability is that a national convention will be arranged for before the close of the session.

Election Act Amendment.

Hugh Guthrie has given notice of an important amendment to the Dominion Election Act. His bill aims to prevent employers influencing employes in elections. The act already provides for the punishment of employers who use threats or intimidation. Mr. Guthrie's bill goes farther and makes soliciting and canvassing an offence punishable by fine and imprisonment. The principal clause in the bill is as follows:

"Everyone who, being an employer of labor for hire or reward (including directors, managers, superintendents, foremen and all other officers of any incorporated company) directly or indirectly by himself or by any other person on his behalf, solicits, canvasses or in any way attempts to influence any person in his employment or in the employment of any incorporated company, whereof such person is officer, to vote or refrain from voting for any candidate shall be deemed to have committed the offence of undue influence, and shall in addition to any penalty thereby incurred, forfeit the sum of $200 to any person who sues therefor for costs and render himself liable to one year's imprisonment."

Revision of the Tariff.

Ottawa, Jan. 14.—(Globe Special.)—The commission to investigate the tariff will be appointed at an early date. The Government are anxious that the commission should commence operations as soon as possible, and hence it is expected that the present session will be extremely short, closing, in fact, early in April. It is thought that the Opposition will further this view in order to permit the early commencement of the work of the commission. Of course, if the session is protracted the work of the commission will be delayed and early action in regard to tariff changes will be impossible.

Cars For the Temiskaming Ry.

Toronto, Jan. 14.—The first batch of four passenger cars to be used on the Temiskaming and Northern Ontario Railway arrived in the city yesterday morning from Cobourg, where under orders of the commission they had been built. They will be moved north in a day or two. Robert Jaffray, of the commission, inspected the cars.

Scalded to Death.

Rochester, N.Y., Jan. 14.—Raymond Buck, 13 years old, whose home was in Ithaca, was scalded to death yesterday at the State Industrial School. He was sitting on the edge of a tub of boiling water when he lost his balance and fell into it. He was terribly burned, and died at [illegible] o'clock.

Jew Baiter Sentenced.

Berlin, Jan. 14.—Count Puecklер, Germany's most noted Jew-baiter, was sentenced Thursday in one of the courts of Berlin to six months in jail for public incitement to disobedience of the laws and violence of one class against another.

Peculiarities of Eyes.

The human eye in perfect condition is able to see objects separately that are only one minute of are apart. Put two objects—as, for instance, two black circles on a white ground—just one inch apart and then place them at a distance of about 286½ feet. As seen with the naked eye the apparent space between the circles will be a minute of arc. This space is plainly the limit of detail visible to the unassisted human eye. Now, it might be supposed that an insect, having a compound eye, would be able to see more detail than we can do—in other words, could separate small objects closer together. As a matter of fact, owing to the small aperture of the lenses composing the facets of the eye and the spacing between the facets, insects see less detail than we do. Dr. G. Johnstone Stoney calculated that a dragon fly cannot see separately two objects which are placed less than one degree apart. In other words, to such an insect two silver coins lying on a table three inches apart and viewed from a distance exceeding fourteen and one-third feet would appear as a single object. Bees and flies, according to the same authority, are still more limited in their ability to see the details of objects presented to their eyes. A fly could only see the two silver coins above described separately at a distance not exceeding about seven feet.

PREMIER ROSS AT BRAMPTON

Liberals Give Popular Leader a Great Reception.

THE SPIRIT OF LIBERALISM

Return of the Government Means a Continuation of That Progressive Policy Which Has Placed Ontario At the Head of the Provinces of Canada—Great Meeting in Peterboro.

Brampton, Jan. 14.—Premier Ross has visited larger towns and cities during his tour in this campaign, but in none has he been accorded so enthusiastic a welcome as that which was extended him on his appearance at the Concert Hall here last night, to speak in the interests of Mr. John Smith, the candidate for Peel. The Liberals, who have been working with splendid aggressiveness for a larger majority than ever for Mr. Smith, were confident last night that their most sanguine expectations will be realized, the splendid address of their honored leader having made certainty more certain.

Spirit of Liberalism.

Mr. Ross was in splendid voice and form, and his speech was a well considered, well delivered and effective utterance, which he concluded as follows: "When the time comes that any party fails in its traditions, it is an apostate party and not worthy to continue in power. We have not failed. (Applause.) We trust we shall not fail, and we give you our assurance that if the Government is returned to power that progressive policy will be maintained, so that Ontario can stand in the years to come at the head of the Provinces of Canada, as she has done in the days gone by." (Prolonged applause.)

250 Torch-Bearers.

The Premier reached the town on the G.T.R. train, due at 7.40, but long before that hour a parade, under command of Mr. C. A. Irvine, including 250 torch-bearers, and headed by the Brampton Band, had formed at the station. The arrival of the train was the signal for an outburst of prolonged cheering, which was maintained while Mr. Ross was escorted to a carriage by Mr. Smith and Mr. E. G. Graham, President of the Peel Reform Association. No time was lost in starting for the hall, the route being by way of Main and Queen streets, both of which were lined by citizens and people from the surrounding districts, who joined theirs to the cheers of those in the procession. The following mottoes, which were carried, were easily read by the light of the many torches: "Remember Ross," "Smith is Safe," "Good-bye, Whitney," "Thirty-two Years and Four Years More." "Smith for Peel," "Ross for Ontario."

Hundreds Unable to Get In.

The procession reached the hall shortly after 8 o'clock, and a few seconds thereafter the building was jammed. Scores of men and women stood in the aisles and along the front of the platform throughout the meeting, and many hundreds of people were unable to get anywhere near the doorway, much less get into the hall; in fact, there were more disappointed ones in this respect than fortunate. The entrance of Premier Ross and Mr. Smith was the signal for a prolonged outburst of enthusiastic cheers.

THE KING AS A HUNTER

A DAY WITH HIS MAJESTY AND THE GUN AT SANDRINGHAM.

How the Reputation of Being One of the Keenest of Shots—10,000 Pheasants Bred At Sandringham Every Year—Uses a Cob to Carry Him to the Place of Meeting for the Day's Sport.

The time of year which King Edward likes best of all is that which affords him the most abundant opportunities for the practice of his favorite sport of shooting. Both at Sandringham and the country seats of his friends he is constantly busy with his gun among the pheasants and other game. Among the best sportsmen of the country the King has the reputation for being one of the keenest shots of them all, says Tit-Bits. He likes most of all to bang away at an overhead "rocketer," and rarely misses.

The gun-room at Sandringham is one of the finest in the country. It is lined with glass cases containing a variety of weapons for every conceivable purpose, and yet complete as it is there is rarely a year but the King adds some new gun to it, the special points of which have taken his fancy. The King's guns are, of course, hammerless, and are quite plain and unornamented, while their distinguishing feature is that they have a very light pull on the left trigger.

The game-room, also, where the spoils of the day's shooting are temporarily preserved, is a very wonderful department, and it is said that there is only one in the world—that established by the late Baron Hirsch, which is capable of containing 10,000 head of game at the same time—which is bigger than it. About 6,000 head can be comfortably stored in it at once.

Most elaborate arrangements are made in advance for a good pheasant shooting season on the King's estates. At Sandringham, under the care of the head keeper, 10,000 pheasants are bred every year. The eggs are first of all placed in incubators, and shortly before the hatching time comes on they are removed and laid under 1,000 barn-door fowls. When they are hatched they are arranged in pens and carried on trolleys, especially made for the purpose, all over the estate, each farm being required to keep, rear and grain-feed a certain number of them. So well and thoroughly is this done that when the autumn comes there are no finer pheasants in Great Britain than those which fly on the King's preserves, so white and tender is their flesh and so wonderfully plumn are they.

One of the king's shooting parties usually consists of about eight or ten guns, and every man belonging to it is invariably a first-rate shot, for the King himself, being such a good marksman, finds it difficult to tolerate mediocrity in this respect in others. Besides, it is well remembered that many years ago His Majesty on one occasion received a good many pellets in his clothing from the gun of a very reckless and careless sportsman, who was quite oblivious to the safety of future crowned heads so long as he was permitted to fire away at the game in his own fashion. Never in his life has the King injured anyone, or come at all near to doing so.

When the King and his friends are going out shooting notice is given the day before all over the estate, and farm work, except that which can be quietly and unobtrusively pursued, is then practically suspended for the day. Even the country folk are warned to keep clear of the lanes. The keepers turn out in the royal livery of green and gold, and the hundred beaters wear picturesque smocks, with hatbands of scarlet. Mr. Jackson, the head keeper, finally goes over the whole of the ground to see that all is in apple-pie order, and that the game carts are properly disposed at those points where the guns are expected to be busiest.

On such a morning the King does not usually breakfast with his guests, but leaves everyone to do just as he likes so long as he arrives at the meeting place at the appointed hour, which is most frequently between 10 and 11 o'clock. As soon as the King appears on the scene the shooting begins. Each sportsman works with from two to four guns, two loaders constantly preparing them for him.

The King of late has taken to using a little cob to carry him from point to point when any distance has to be traversed, and he always takes with him a little one-legged shooting stool, for resting during a weary wait, at which times he will usually regale his guests with a good story from his inimitable collection. The lunch in the middle of the day, either taken in the open air, at a farmhouse or in a special apartment at Wolferton Station, is always very substantial, but quite plain, a kind of Irish stew, to which the King is very partial when out shooting, frequently making its appearance on the menu.

The guns cease fire at 4 o'clock. It often happens on the occasion of a really big shoot that from 2,000 to 3,000 head of game will be accounted for. At the close of the day their numbers, down to a single pheasant, are entered in the game book, which has been kept very accurately ever since shooting began at Sandringham. It shows that from 1870 to 1880 between 6,800 and 8,700 head of game were shot every year, and that thenceforth the bags largely increased, until in the winter of 1885 no fewer than 16,000 head were accounted for. After a day's shoot the results of it are always spread out on the lawn for His Majesty's inspection before dinner. Then they are sent to hospitals, charitable institutions, His Majesty's friends and the tenantry.

It may not be generally known that there is scarcely any form of game, big or small, which the King has not shot in his time. He has shot elephants when in Ceylon, and according to the prescribed custom he personally cut off the tail of the first one that he killed. When he was in India he shot leopards, cheetahs and tigers, and was amazingly skillful and daring in doing so.

On one occasion he shot six tigers in one morning, two of them being killed outright with single shots from his gun. He set his heart on shooting a crocodile when he was in Egypt, and in order to accomplish his purpose he spent many days in anxious search for one, repeatedly being out of bed at 4.30 o'clock in the morning, and lying half an hour later in sand holes or in the mud on the banks of the Nile. At last he shot a beauty. He stayed up the whole night through on several occasions in a most anxious endeavor to add a hyena to his bag, but he failed, and it is the only thing that the King has ever wanted to shoot and not shot.

WOLF HUNTING IN ENGLAND.

Animal Escaped From Menagerie Causes Terror in North.

In the wild fell country to the west of Northumberland hundreds of the inhabitants continue to follow the track of the wolf which during the past few days has laid the flocks of the farmers under heavy tribute by slaying their sheep.

Two months ago a wolf escaped from a private collection at Shotley Bridge, twelve miles from Newcastle, and all trace of it was lost until about three weeks ago, when sheep-worrying commenced in the Allendale district.

Raids have been organised, and the wolf chased over miles of the snow-covered fells by men armed with guns and various weapons, but without result. Some of the pursuers are said to have got within range of the animal with their guns, yet the disturber of rural peace has managed to escape. In many a lonely homestead it is a source of dread to the inmates whose imaginations run riot over the wolf as they listen to or retail the latest news concerning its whereabouts.

On Saturday a supreme effort was made to bring him down, but he never allowed himself to get within range of his pursuers' rifles. He was finally chased by horsemen over the snow-covered moors via West Burnhope, and when night fell he had reached Dukesfield, a dense, wild wood covering an area of not less than 700 acres, within the solitude of which he doubtless spent the night.

Intense excitement prevails in the district, and farmers are keenly anxious to see the end of their unwelcome guest.—London Daily Mail.

The Artist and His Ideals.

George Frederic Watts is described by his biographers as the simplest and most humble of men. His personal humility and self-effacement, says a writer in The Monthly Review, formed a striking contrast to the loftiness of his aims and the passionate strength of his convictions.

His daily actions were a living illustration of his belief in the old German motto which the Queen of Roumania, "Carmen Sylva," suggested to him as the text of one of his most touching pictures: "What I spent, I had; what I saved, I lost; what I gave, I have."

"Our little life," he wrote once, "is poor indeed if bounded by our own personal wants and fancied requirements."

Among countless instances of his generosity is one which he often recalled because of its connection with his picture, "Love and Life," now hanging in the White House in Washington, a work which he considered his most important message to the world.

A poor artist's wife, whom he had never seen before, came to his studio in sore distress one day, and begged for a loan of a few pounds to enable her to join her husband who lay dangerously ill in New York. Watts gave her all, and more than all she asked, and she left him with tears of gratitude in her eyes, promising to come and see him on her return. Two years afterward she appeared, accompanied by her husband, who was restored to health and had found work in America, and repaid the money which Watts had lent her.

When the painter asked what had led her to apply to a total stranger like himself, she replied, "The sight of your picture, 'Love and Life.'" She felt that the man who had painted that picture must have a heart overflowing with love and pity for sorrowing humanity, and the issue proved that she was right.

In his candor and guilelessness Watts never shrank from giving his sitters good advice. A thoroughgoing idealist himself, Watts expected his friends to live up to the level of their art, and was pained to see any inconsistencies in their conduct. "Come, King Arthur would not have talked in that way!" he said to Tennyson one day, when the poet was in a more bearish mode than usual. But when the laureate showed him his knotted and swollen fingers, he understood, and felt satisfied that it was "all the gout."

Church Furniture.

At a recent meeting of the Swanley branch of the English Church Union Canon Bristow rejoiced that things were better in the furnishing line throughout the churches. In the old days, Dr. Tait, then Bishop of London, had refused to proceed with the consecration of All Saints, W. Margaret street, unless a linen cloth covered the altar down to the ground. Great was the consternation accordingly, and a table had to be hastily brought across from the clergy house in order to satisfy his scruples. Even choral services, surpliced choirs, crosses and mural decorations of the east wall of a church had a bishop who could not see the use of them, and troubled incumbents were continually worried in endeavors to keep their diocesan in the right humor. But now all was changed. All classes were getting to understand this department better, and the strides which had been made of late years were a matter of great encouragement.

The Great Seal of England.

Something of romance as well as of almost sanctity has always been associated with the Great Seal of England, and many a striking story has been told concerning it. The provision recently, therefore, of the first Great Seal of King Edward VII. is an event of more than merely historic interest; and the Lord Chancellor may assuredly be depended upon to obey both to the letter and in the spirit that statute of Henry VIII. which forbade the "carrying about the Great Seal," inattention to which was largely responsible for costing one of his predecessors the Chancellorship. It was Brougham who in the autumn of 1834 "carried about the Great Seal" to his lasting damage, grave scandal being caused by a report, generally credited at the period, that two good-humoredly mischievous girls had hidden it so effectually at a country house that it could not for a time be found. William IV. was greatly shocked at this, and yet he was the monarch who, in the presence of Brougham himself, had joked over the Great Seal, for, when the Chancellor had intimated that his immediate predecessor, Lyndhurst, claimed half of the old Seal, because he had been Chancellor at the King's accession, the Sovereign exclaimed: "Well, then, I will judge between you like Solomon; now, do you cry 'heads' or 'tails?'" and Brougham took the bottom part. This, of course, was not so bad as when James II. flung the Great Seal into the Thames at Lambeth on his flight from London, and with the desire to embarrass his triumphant son-in-law, William of Orange; and even this was not so deep a degradation for the Seal as when it was stolen from the house of Lord Chancellor Thurlow and never recovered, though some sort of dignity was attempted to be attached to the theft by the Tory suggestion that it was done by the wicked Whigs for the purposes of party warfare.

The Decline of Poetry.

Probably no publisher in England is better fitted to speak on the market for poetry than Mr. John Lane, and if we can credit an interview with that gentleman reported in The London Daily News, the position of poets is deplorable indeed. A portion of the interview we quote as follows:

"Never in the course of my experience of publishing," said Mr. John Lane, "has the demand for poetry been so small as it is now; yet never I believe, has the general average of poetry been so high. I have seen no more striking change in the book world than that involved in the fading popularity of poetry. I would say that a complete revolution has taken place in the last dozen years."

"And you think that ten or a dozen years ago modern poetry was not flouted as it is now?"

"Very much the contrary. It had not then become fashionable to say that England was artistically dead, and it was possible to publish far more volumes of poetry, each of which had a far better chance of being read. And now poetry, poetry as well as 'minor poetry,' is at a discount."

When asked to account for this sudden change, Mr. Lane attributed it to the series of wars which have occupied the public mind since Spain and the United States fought about Cuba.

The white population of the principal towns of the Orange River Colony is as follows: Bloemfontein, 11,429; Bethlehem, 1,023; Jagersfontein, 1,294; Koffyfontein, 1,300; Ficksburg, 1,011; Harrismith, 4,366; Kroonstadt, 3,273; Ladybrand, 2,333; Parys, 1,278; Winburg, 1,105.

The King's Prize Cattle.

The King had remarkable success in the Devon class at the Birmingham Fat Stock Show.

His Majesty won all the three first prizes and the championship with the same beast that won at the Birmingham and Smithfield shows last year. The King's Russell Thrush was second in the same class, while with Red and White and Fragrance His Majesty gained the championship and second place for shorthorns.

As the winning of the championship at Birmingham is not infrequently followed by a like success at Smithfield, it is very probable that the King's beast will win again at the agricultural hall this year.

Elder Brother of Cecil Rhodes.

A Parliamentary candidate who has been sentenced to death by the enemies of his country and afterwards met those enemies on the field of battle has a powerful lever in moving votes to his side, says The London Chronicle. Colonel Rhodes, the elder brother of the great Imperialist, has also the prestige of that brother's name to help him in his prospective campaign against Mr. Rose in the Newmarket division. But Mr. Rose is as popular in Cambridgeshire as was his predecessor, Colonel McCalmont, and the Colonel will need all his prestige. The house in which the Colonel lives, Dalham Hall, Newmarket, was left him by his brother. For his share in the Jameson Raid Colonel Rhodes forfeited his commission, but his services on the field of Omdurman, where he was wounded, were deemed great enough to purge his offence, and the commission was restored.

Spectacles.

There has been considerable discussion as to who invented spectacles and who had the pleasure of wearing the first pair. The honor is generally awarded to an Italian named Salvino Armati, who died in 1317.

Breadfruit.

The breadfruit of Otaheite is the most valuable of this species. Its fruit ripens during eight months of the year, and the prepared fruit, slightly dried, supports the natives during the remainder. The fruit is baked entire in hot embers, and the inside is scooped out with a spoon. It tastes much like mashed potatoes and sweet milk.

Deep Water.

The water at the bottom of the ocean is much colder than at the surface. At the depth of 3,500 feet waves are not felt. The temperature is the same, varying very little from the poles to the equator.

Mayon Horoo.

There is a large promontory in the Aegean sea known as Mayon Horoo, which extends 8,000 feet above the level of the water. As the sun swings around the shadow of this mountain touches one by one a circle of islands separated by regular intervals, which act as hour marks. It is the largest sundial in the world.

A Juggler's Feat.

For a wager Koyoshi Zavetto, a juggler, caught on a fork held between his teeth a turnip thrown from the top of a tower in England, a distance of about a hundred feet.

An Easy Way to Cure Splitting Headaches.
If headache sufferers would do a little hard thinking, they would surely learn that headache of all kinds are simply nerve—warning signals—of serious coming trouble. Usually headache means that the blood and nerves are poisoned by an inactive and sluggish liver. Don't become one of the habitual headache sufferers, who explain their condition by saying, "Oh, I am subject to headache. I always get headache if I get excited, or if it is too hot, or too much of it, either. Stop taking headache powders and powerful drugs that may relieve, but leave you in worse condition in the end. Put your liver in good order, so that it will carry off that accumulated and impure property the bile absorbing from the blood. Use Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills and you won't have headache. Why? Just because these little pills are Nature's own laxative, and a positive cure for a torpid liver. They assist digestion, unload the bile ducts and cure headache by first removing the cause. Smith's Pineapple and Butternut Pills cure headache, constipation and biliousness in one night. Price 25 cents at dealers.

Lobeth Surgeon Defends Appendix.

The students, male and female, attending the medical schools attached to the London hospitals were lately addressed by well known members of the profession, the occasion being the opening of the Winter season.

The fifth Huxley lecture at the Charing Cross Hospital proved remarkable for Sir William McEwen's defence of the much maligned vermiform appendix.

This is the technical term for the worm-like appendage to the caecum or "blind intestine," known as the caput coli, a cul-de-sac about two inches and a half in length, situate at the beginning of the large intestine.

"Some surgeons," he said, "have freely admitted that when making an incision in a patient for some other disease they frequently remove the little organ as a precaution against appendicitis."

But was the appendix entirely useless to man? he queried. In some quarters it might be contended that the lesser intestine could be done without, that the spleen was superfluous and that the stomach itself could very well be dispensed with, because some people have lived after these organs were removed.

Sir William drew a humorous picture of a future race of mankind whose whole digestive apparatus was removed, and the members of which retained but a small incision, down which could be dropped concentrated tablets of nourishment.

"All that would be necessary," he continued, "would be for a firm of chemists to enlarge its premises, and the tablets could be delivered every morning by the postman. No navy would be needed to protect our sources of food supply, and the domestic servant problem would be solved forever."

The appendix itself, Sir William believed, had an important function in assisting digestion. In addition, it was the chief habitat of a certain micro-organism that was most useful in attacking imperfectly assimilated nourishment, and if only as a medium for the cultivation of these bacteria the appendix had its useful mission to perform and should be retained.—London Express.

Spread of English Tongue.

To-day over 135,000,000 people speak English. It has displaced French as the language of diplomacy and is now making great headway as the universal language of trade. All North America, South Africa, Liberia, Australia, New Zealand, Samoa, Hawaii, most of Polynesia, and various small States have permanently adopted our mother tongue, and there is every reason to believe that the 10,000,000 of Filipinos will be using it in the course of time. With the construction of the Panama Canal, Central America also will probably yield to its influence to a large extent.

Actor's Early Experience.

Sir Henry Irving told an amusing story recently in his speech at the Brasenose Club in Manchester. When he was a young actor, and a member of the stock company in that city, a playgoer accosted him one night with this question: "You played Young Norval this evening, didn't you?" "Yes," was the reply. "Well, I've got a boy 10 years old at home," said the playgoer, "and I'd give him a licking if he could not shout 'My name is Norval,' better than you did!" Sir Henry added that he was quite sure the boy never deserved that licking.

Courteous Lord Hardwicke.

We have it on the authority of the Marquise de Fontenoy that the late Lord Hardwicke thus once jilted an American heiress, who was a niece of Lady Anglesey. The latter wrote:

Dear Lord Hardwicke,—I am leaving Vienna with my niece for the Sommering for two or three days. Perhaps you could be at the railroad station at 11 to-morrow morning to bid us good-bye. Yours sincerely.

To the above polite invitation Lord Hardwicke replied as follows:

Dear Lady Anglesey,—Awfully sorry; I cannot be at the South railroad station to say good-bye to you and your niece. Just at the time you name I have to be at the Western Railroad terminus to meet two fox terrier pups. Awfully sorry. Yours sincerely.

How lordly and dignified.

The Belleville Intelligence in writing on the junior prospects for this district says:—"In Peterborough - well, we are not making any prophecies about Peterborough, but the local lads should remember that the different sevens are so evenly matched that the championship of this group depends on the condition of the teams. To tell the truth it would not surprise us much if the four teams in this group broke even, all winning at home and losing abroad. Anyhow, the home team have put up a nice article of hockey, and are improving every day. We have not by any means given up hopes of their winning their group, but to do so they must play hockey all the way.

WHY LINDSAY LOST THE GAME.

Reasons Given in the Lindsay Post, on Saturday.

Same old Story of Abuse of Winning Team—Misrepresentation of the Facts.

Of course it might be expected that the Lindsay Post would have some pretty hard things to say about the defeat of their pet organization here on Friday night, and in this there is no disappointment felt, for it certainly said them. A whole column was devoted on Saturday to an abuse of the Peterborough team and excuses for the Lindsayites' defeat. A portion of this stuff is given below:—

"Over a hundred supporters accompanied the Lindsay Seniors to Peterborough last night by special train and received the same old usage. The game against Peterborough commenced late, and owing to so many stops it was not ended till nearly eleven o'clock. Peterborough has a peach of a rink and the ice was the best we have seen yet, being in fine condition for fast hockey. Of course the Peterborough papers will give about four columns to the game, and tell how gentlemanly their "pets" played, etc., but as our space is limited we can only give a brief account.

"In commencing we will say it was not a fair game, and even Peterborough cannot deny this fact. From the start to finish Lindsay had no defence—one of the strongest points of our team—and what can a team do without a defence? Pringle, for Lindsay, scored the first goal neatly about five minutes after the start, but Peterborough soon evened up. One of Peterborough's "smart" tricks was to put on Chris. Graham. The latter had been on the sick list for the last two or three weeks, and couldn't play— but Peterborough worked the scheme in mind all right. Graham did not last more than ten minutes—then he retired, went down to the hotel, and dressed again. Of course, "Goosie" Taylor, Lindsay's star centre, had to go off to even up. One good man gone—that worked all o. k. Shortly after, big Bill Crowley, who is a good player, but who is getting his name up for rough work, rushed the puck down the ice, and when Reilly, our crack point, went to check him, Crowley gave him a hard check and then gave him a fierce jab in the back with his stick, putting it fully out of the game for the rest of the night. It was a nasty play, but Crowley only got about two minutes and went to the fence smiling, although he was hissed by both Peterborough and Lindsay supporters. "Goosie" came on in Reilly's place, and to-to teams played hard to the finish of the first half, which ended 6-2 for Peterborough. We must say that Lindsay missed some good shots, but they shot many hard ones which were cleverly stopped by Wasson. He put up a magnificent game in the nets.

In the second half the game commenced well and smoothly. Lindsay got down to work and got things going right, and there was some fast combination on both sides, each adding three goals to their tally, makin' the score read 9-5 for the home team. Peterborough have got a good bunch and showed fine form last night, having good combination and good staying powers. Duffus received a black eye from the end of a stick. "Goosie" was hurt and had to retire, leaving five men a side. The next player to retire was Parkins leaving four men against five. Peterborough now had it a little their own way and made some fine rushes, and as there was nobody playing defence—Irving playing rover, Duffus centre, Pringle forward and McGrath in goal— they got past everybody and travelled down to bombard McGrath. As a result of Lindsay's weakness, Peterborough now added seven more goals."

The Post man is mighty inconsistent. He mentions that Parkins retired and that the team played four men against five. The only occasion when they could have played in this proportion would be when one of their men was ruled off for rough play, because if he were injured and had to retire, a Peterborough man would have gone off to even up.

Why can't the team lose like sports?

OPENING GAME IN TRENT VALLEY

Keene and T.A.S. Will Meet To-night at Brock Steet Rink.

To-night the public will have an opportunity of seeing the first Trent Valley League game for the season, when the T. A. S, and Keene will meet at the Brock street rink in what should be one of the fastest games of the season.

It will be remembered that last season these two teams fought it out to the last in the semi-finals and there has always been considerable rivalry between them, consequently the game to-night should be one of great interest.

Both teams are somewhat changed from the personnel of last season, and both are fast and the Keene seven is coming determined to put up a good argument. Everyone should see this, the first Trent Valley game of the season.

T.A.S. TEAM FOR TO-NIGHT

The Prices of Admission will be 15c and 25 Cents.

The T. A. S. team for to-night's game with Keene will be as follows:—

Goal—Clancy.
Point—Meagher.
Cover point—Quigley.
Rover—Deforge.
Centre—McGrath.
Left wing—Keller.
Right wing—Rose.

The prices of admission will be the same as last year, 15 cents for ladies and 25 cents for gentlemen and not 25 cents and 35 cents as advertised on the posters. It is to be hoped that there will be a good crowd for the opening game.

ATHLETICS

To-morrow night a good athletic programme will be given at the Opera House the third of the series arranged by a Toronto man. According to the programme as published there should be some interesting events by both local and outside athletes.

MAY BE SERIOUS WHEAT SHORTAGE

Statement that Americans Have a Corner on Manitoba Wheat.

Local Miller Says no Danger from that Source but Ontario Wheat is Scarce.

A little scare has been experienced by the statement that an attempt was being made in Chicago to corner Manitoba wheat, and it was feared that this would result rather disastrously to Canadian and especially Ontario millers. There seems little reason to suppose that there is any truth in it however.

A local miller, who buys largely of Manitoba wheat said to the Examiner that he did not believe there was the slightest intention to make a corner in wheat. Any large buying that is now going on is purely a matter of supply and demand. The fact is, that our wheat is selling so much below the American market, that the Minneapolis and other buyers are naturally getting all they can of it.

Then, again, the demand for Manitoba wheat has been exceptionally heavy in Ontario recently, on account of the short crop in this Province last year, when there were only about seven or eight million bushels grown altogether, although the Government estimat put it at twelve million bushels. There is now absolutely no Ontario wheat to be had, and he was getting all he could from Manitoba for his mills. All things considered, the Manitoba supply looks like getting rather low before the next crop is in, but he thought the idea of any corner being formed could be dismissed.

NEW BANK FOR PETERBOROUGH

Branch of Sovereign Bank may be Established.

Negotiations for Premises Have Been Conducted—Progressive Bank.

Peterborough is likely to have in the near future a new bank. Negotiations have been under way for some time, it is understood, between the management of the Sovereign Bank and certain owners of real estate here with a view of securing either by purchase or lease, some property suitable for bank premises.

These negotiations are understood to be still pending, but in all probability they will be closed successfully, and the result will be the establishment of a branch of the Sovereign Bank here.

Two corners, either of which would be attractive to the bank management and which were considered, were those at present occupied by the China Hall, and that opposite, occupied by Ormond & Walsh, druggists.

The Sovereign Bank is one of the youngest banks in Canada, but since its establishment it has made rapid strides and is now recognized as an important factor in Canadian financial circles. Mr. D. M. Stewart, the general manager, is the youngest man in Canada to hold that position, and he is considered one of the most progressive and enterprising financiers in the country. It is certain that he has adopted some new, and as the results have shown, effective banking methods in connection with the Sovereign Bank, one of which is the campaign of newspaper advertising.

It is a tribute to the increasing business done in Peterborough that the bank has practically decided to open a branch here.

It is also understood that the Metropolitan Bank, another one of the newer Banks, has been looking around for premises in Peterborough, but it is not known that they have been secured as yet.

JOSEPH GAGNON PASSED AWAY

Early Settler in Peterborough Died This Morning.

The death of another old resident of Peterborough occurred early this morning when Mr. Joseph Gagnon passed away at the age of 59 years, at his late residence, 48 Smith street, after an illness of about three years, during which time he has been gradually sinking, and his death consequently was not entirely unexpected.

The deceased was born in Quebec, and came to Peterborough when he was quite young with his parents, and had lived here ever since. He leaves behind him his widow and seven children as follows:—Mrs. John Murphy, town; Napoleon and Fred Gagnon, of Buffalo, N.Y.; Midas and George, of town, and Mrs. Frank Murphy and Miss Hattie Gagnon, of town.

The funeral will take place on Wednesday morning at 8 o'clock from his late residence, to St. Peter's Cathedral, and the Roman Catholic Cemetery for interment.

Plan for Students' Concert opens Tuesday morning at Ormond & Walsh's.

THE TOWN COUNCIL IS PREACHED TO

Mayor and Members of the Council Attended St. Paul's Church Last Night in a Body.

Sermon was Preached on Behalf of the Ministerial Association by Rev. Doctor Crothers.

The Duty of Citizens Outlined—How the Council may Benefit the Town—Some Suggestions.

The Ministerial Association of Peterborough at one of its meetings prior to the close of last year decided to invite the Mayor and members of this year's Council to St. Paul's church and there to listen to a sermon which was to be preached to them by Rev. Dr. Crothers. It was decided that this event should take place, and, the Council accepting the invitation thus given, the sermon was delivered.

The members of the Council with his Worship, Mayor Best, were given special seats in the centre aisle of the church, which they attended as a body, and the sermon was one an which the duty of citizenship was sought to be impressed, not only upon the Aldermen themselves, but also upon the citizens generally.

The text was Acts, 21; 39:—"I am a man which am a Jew of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city." There are three things, the speaker said, of which we should be proud and which we should hold aloft: Our Church, our country and our town. Christian citizenship is a fit and proper thing to discuss from the pulpit on the Lord's Day. St. Paul gloried not only in the Gospel but he was also proud of his citizenship in the Roman Empire, and on more than one occasion availed himself of the privileges which that citizenship gave, and as the text shows, he was also proud of his own city. Most of us, the speaker said, are British subjects, and as such we have much to be thankful for. We are ruled over by Edward, the best King that the British Empire has ever had, and the Empire is the best in the world. It is greatly in extent and wealth than that ruled over by Alexander. In area it is a little less than one-quarter of that of the whole world, while its population it numbers more than one-quarter of the world's population. It does one-third of the trade of the whole world, and its revenue is about one-fifth of that of the world. It is vast in extent, including the great Colonies of South Africa, Australia, India and Canada, the greatest of all the possession of the Empire. All this was something to be profoundly thankful for, not to say proud. Speaking of the Dominion of Canada, we might well say we were "of no mean city." It has a larger wheat area than the United States and has well been called the "granary of the Empire," for in a short time it will be in a position to supply the Empire with all the wheat required for its consumption. It has also great wealth of fisheries, forest and mines. Canada is a country of of boundless possibilities, and we may well ponder long on this subject. Its development has been nothing short of wonderful, the scattered provinces having been gathered into one stable Dominion by men who served their generation well, and many of whom have gone to their reward.

That our Province of Ontario is one of which we may be proud. Its cities and towns are prosperous and growing, and the country homes are contented. Our fathers came here from the south and from the east and west, and developed the magnificient province out of the virgin forest, and striven hard and fought for the privileges which we now enjoy.

Then, coming still closer home. This town is one of which its citizens may well be proud. This generation and many of those gone before have done much to make it beautiful, and the public parks and beautiful residences are a credit to it, and them. It is well supplied with schools and churches. Its population is steadily increasing, and it is bound to be a large city in the near future. It is a town of which no man need be ashamed, and if anyone is ashamed he should move out to some place else.

But with all these privileges come responsibilities. It is and everyone should recognize these responsibilities. Authority is God-given, and from the King to the humblest policeman each has authority but it is traceable in the last analysis to God, while smartly in a manner to God's Divine Law.

Problems are continually coming up for solution, and it should be the duty of every citizen to consider these problems, one of the greatest of these is the question of intemperance, which is said to be the cause of three-fourths of the crime, poverty and suffering in the land. We have laws, but in the opinion of the speaker, they were not enforced as they should be. Speaking of the license law, he said it was a good law, as laws go, but questioned if it was carried out as it should be. He believed that it was enforced, in a short time it would be impossible to gather together a corporal's guard of men who at a temperance convention, would ask for prohibition.

The immigration question, too, was one of the problems seeking solution. Foreign population is crowding to our shores; a few years ago they were going to the United States, but now the bulk of them are coming here, and thousands of men and women from the Western States are coming into this country as well. He would welcome these from the British Isles, but what of the hordes of Italians, Doukohobors and Galatians? He did not say, keep them out, but it was a difficult problem to solve. They come here with very loose ideas of British law, and he did not think naturalization should be made too easy for them.

The Mormon question, too, is looming up in the Northwest. No doubt, as is urged in their defence, they are thrifty and industrious, but the question will have to be grappled with in a few years. We must apply drastic measures when the laws are broken.

Political corruption, and impurity, also demand attention. The Gospel has nothing to do with party politics. The country must, however, be governed by party, but the Gospel has, he thought, something to do with political questions. There are men who would interfere with the will of the people as expressed by the ballot, and we read of bogus ballot boxes. It is time, said the speaker, that the pulpit spoke out on this question.

Speaking of local conditions, he said that the responsibility should not rest entirely with the aldermen whom the people had elected, although the latter, directly or indirectly, had to do with the actual working of the public municipal affairs. But the citizens should remember that they are but men, and cannot do the work properly unless they have the assistance of the citizens generally. The council of this year should not confine themselves simply to the work of this year's needs, but should plan for the future, when Peterborough shall have grown to a large city, which, with the completion of the Trent Canal, will be a realization of the near future.

There are three features which the council should consider, and develop: The physical, mental and moral, and anything for the welfare of the town or its citizens along either of these lines, should be carried out.

"We want our aldermen to be examples," said the reverend speaker, "and be able to point to them with pride." If they manage the affairs of the town as they manage their own private business, he thought that no fault would be found. He assumed that they would guard well the interests of the town and the public franchises would not be given away. They should protect the health of the citizens, and he mentioned the question of sewerage and bylaws against expectoration on the sidewalks, mentioning the fact that 200,000 persons die every year in the United States from consumption, contracted largely from disease germs from the expectoration.

The council should guard, he said, the most valuable asset of the town to-day, the boys, and this could be done in one way by enforcing the law against selling cigarettes to minors, and by not allowing gambling.

The great need to-day is for men of absolute incorruptibility. It is a grand thing to die for one's country but there is a call, to men to live for their country, which is also a noble life. No man should feel that he is too good to go into politics, or municipal life. The strength of a city lies in its good men, its laws, and its laws enforced, and educated public opinion.

The speaker, in conclusion, assured the council of the interest which the Ministerial Association feels in its success.

FIGHT SAYS THE EMPEROR.

Czar's Latest Rescript to the Army and the Navy.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 16.—Emperor Nicholas has addressed the following rescript to the army and navy:

"Port Arthur has passed into the hands of the enemy. During eleven months its noble defenders had been cut off from the rest of the world. Without any positive assurance of relief, they continued to fight and did everything in their power to check the progress of the enemy, sparing neither life nor heart's blood to uphold the honor of the Russian people.

"Russia, with pride and admiration, followed each move in the contest. The whole world was astounded at their gallantry, but daily their ranks were thinned, their powers of resistance diminished, and, under repeated attacks by the enemy, they were obliged to give way. Peace, honor and undying memory will be the portion of your Russians who have fallen in the defence of Port Arthur. Far from home you have laid your bodies upon alien soil, a sacrifice to the dictates of your own honor and the demands of your Emperor.

"Peace and honor be your portion. Always will you be so held in our hearts and memory. Honor to the living, may God restore you to health and strength and give you patience to face this disaster with which you are confronted.

"My gallant troops and sailors: Do not let this sorrow dismay you. Our enemy is strong and daring. This fight against them occurs 7,000 miles from our home, but Russia is powerful. In the thousand years of its existence there have been still heavier trials, worse and more threatening dangers, but Russia ever arose from trial with renewed force and strength. Do not let your souls be troubled by lack of success and heavy losses. Russian strength grows with adversity.

"With all Russia I join in the belief that the time is coming when God will give strength to our glorious army and navy to arise and break the forces of the enemy.

"(Signed) Nicholas."

JAPANESE DRAGOONS WERE DEFEATED

Kuropatkin Reports That Japs Suffer Great Loss---Skirmishes Damaged the Rail way Line Six Miles From Yinkow and Captured Big Supplies—Retreat of Gen. Mistchenke's Raiding Force After a Loss of 300 Men---Exchange of Prisoners Arranged For.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 17.—General Kuropatkin has sent this report to the Emperor: "During the evening of Jan. 10, one and a half companies of Japanese infantry and half a squadron of Japanese dragoons were defeated with great loss.

"On Jan. 11, a Japanese company and two squadrons, which were occupying Newchwang, were driven out by our Cossacks, who occupied the place and afterwards pursued the company, defeating it and inflicting heavy loss. The same night our patrols damaged the railroad line, telegraph line, a train and two locomotives. During these two days our cavalry defeated several small detachments and captured one officer, 14 soldiers and 500 carts with stores. Our casualties were three officers killed and 10 wounded, and 15 soldiers killed and 49 wounded.

"On Jan. 12, our patrols damaged the railroad six miles from Yinkow. At 4 p.m., Jan. 12, a Russian detachment reached Yinkow. Our artillery cannonaded the station, set fire to the stores and stormed the station. The Japanese opened fire with rifle and machine guns, and our men sought shelter in ditches and again attacked, until they reached the railroad line, when a strong force of Japanese cavalry appeared, advancing from Tashikiow. Our forces, being inferior, retired, carrying away nearly all the killed and wounded. The stores at Yinkow were ablaze the whole night."

Russ Losses Were 300.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 17.—A telegram from Siakhotan states that Gen. Mistchenko's raiding force, learning that five Japanese battalions had appeared near Tashikiowa, retreated northwards, and succeeded in regaining the Russian lines. Their losses were about 300 killed or wounded, all the latter being brought away.

Will Exchange Prisoners.

St. Petersburg, Jan. 17.—Japan's consent to an exchange of prisoners according to classes and rank has just been received here. Consequently in the near future three Russian officers captured on the Russian volunteer fleet cruiser Ekaterinoslav by the Japanese will be exchanged for three Japanese officers captured on the Japanese transport Kinshin, sunk by the Russians in the Sea of Japan, and Sado, driven ashore by the Russians in the Sea of Japan. The question of an exchange of prisoners on this basis was raised by Russia last summer.

China Asked to Keep Neutral.

Washington, D.C., Jan. 17—China's attention has again been indirectly invited by the American Government to the necessity for a faithful maintenance of her neutrality not only in her personal interest, but in the interest of the world's peace. United States Secretary of State Hay on the receipt of full text of Count Lamsdorff's note expressing Russia's belief that China's neutrality had been repeatedly violated, yesterday prepared instructions for the American charge at Pekin, directing him to make inquiry of the Chinese Government regarding the situation.

Woman Posed Disguised As Russian.

Tokio, Jan. 17.—It is reported that a Japanese gendarme discovered a woman about 20 years old, disguised, among the Russian prisoners brought to Nishim. She was much embarrassed at the exposure and is now located in special quarters.

Aim to End the War.

Barcelona, Spain, Jan. 17.—A curious method for terminating the Russo-Japanese war was initiated at a meeting here yesterday. Delegates representing 100 labor and other societies telegraphed to the international anti-militarist committee of Holland, demanding that a general strike be proclaimed in all countries with the object of ending hostilities in the Far East.

JAPS ENTER PORT ARTHUR.

Triumphal Procession Was Five Miles Long—How It Was Composed.

Headquarters of the Third Japanese Army at Port Arthur, Jan. 14, via Tientsin, Jan. 17.—The victorious Japanese army yesterday formally entered Port Arthur. Gen. Nogi with his staff entered first through the old town and took his staff in the public square of the town.

The army was represented by one regiment from each brigade. The procession, which was five miles long, was three hours passing the saluting base, after which the troops passed out of the city through the new town. The correspondents then visited the captured city for the first time. The old town buildings were badly smashed by shells, but in the new town the damage was slight. All the shipping in the harbor was badly damaged.

ECLIPSES STRIKE OF 1889.

Coal Miners Strike in Germany Interests All Classes.

Berlin, Jan. 17.—The strike of coal miners which began yesterday is the most formidable affair of the kind that Germany has ever had. There had been no serious trouble in the coal industries since the strike of 1889, but this strike far eclipses the one alluded to, all labor organizations taking part, whereas in 1889 only the Socialist unions were concerned. The present movement has been largely engineered by the so-called Christian unions, which otherwise oppose the Socialist element.

Commercial and financial classes are greatly concerned lest the strike is speedily settled. The Government is also deeply concerned and the Ministry is keeping the wires busy in communicating with the military and police authorities in the mining country. Chancellor Von Buelow had a long consultation on Monday in the Diet with a Government Commissioner who had just returned from Dortmund.

MINERS' AGREEMENTS EXPIRE.

John Mitchell Says Any Advance Depend On Miners Solidarity.

Indianapolis, Jan. 17.—In his address, Mine President Mitchell referred to the approaching termination of the joint agreements, saying: "It may not be amiss at this time to call your attention to the fact that one year from next April our joint agreements expire in practically every coal-producing district—both bituminous and anthracite—in the United States. Reference to the reports of commercial agencies and trade journals seems to indicate an approaching revival of business and a period of industrial activity. If these predictions are realized, we should be able to regain the loss in wages sustained one year ago, and to improve conditions of employment in those districts in which no reductions were forced upon us. It is, of course, necessary to say that our ability to make further advancement, or even to retain our present standard of living and wages, will depend in no small degree upon the strength and solidarity of our union."

BOTH SCHOOLS NOW CLOSED.

Bishop O'Connor Rebuked Those Who Opposed Separate Schools.

Lindsay, Jan. 17.—Both the Separate and Public Schools at Dow- preached in the village church Sunday by Bishop O'Connor, in which the bishop severely rebuked the Catholics who opposed the Separate School movement. A further result of the sermon is the desertion of the Public School cause by almost every Catholic who up till then endorsed it.

Mr. Fielding Heard From.

London, Jan. 17.—The Hon. W. S. Fielding, in the course of an interview to The Standard correspondent at Vienna, stated that, with the exception of a comparatively few protectionists, all Canadians favor British preferential tariff, at all events, for the present. Mr. Fielding is expected in London at the end of this week.

Strathcona Re-Elected.

London, Jan. 17.—Lord Strathcona was unanimously re-elected president of the City of London International Commercial Association.

The Glasgow Chamber of Commerce has passed a unanimous resolution, supporting Chamberlain's preference plans.

Three Miners Die.

Decatur, Ill., Jan. 17.—Three miners are known to be dead and a score of others are entombed in a 600-foot shaft of the Decatur Coal Company, cut off from rescue by dense smoke, produced by a fire that started yesterday in a mule stable.

Costly Dish of Fudge.

St. Cloud, Minn., Jan. 16.—A fire which is said to have been started by the overturning of an alcohol lamp, over which some of the girls were cooking a dish of "fudge," totally destroyed Lawrence Hall, the ladies' dormitory, at the St. Cloud Normal School, Saturday night. The loss is $85,000; insurance, $13,000.

Three Martyrs Beatified.

Rome, Jan. 16.—Three Hungarian maryrs—Boucres, Grodzes and Christino—were beatified yesterday at St. Peter's, in the presence of 1,000 worshippers. This is the last function of its kind in connection with the festivities incident to the Jubilee of the Dogma of the Immaculate Conception.

They're Civilized Now.

Colon, Jan. 16.—The canal dockmen and other laborers at San Cristobal, numbering 200, have struck. The men have refused to work for $1.50 per day, demanding $2 in silver, which is equivalent to $1 in Semi-Ready Dress Suit.

The essentials for a satisfactory dress suit are fit, style, proper balance and fabric.

The dress suitings we buy are from Sir Titus Salt, Bart., Saltaire, England, and Joshua Garnett & Sons, Idle, near Bradford, England—so much for the fabric.

Fit, style and proper balance are the result of artistic designing — expert cutting and thoroughly knowing hand workmanship throughout.

Semi-ready dress suits fit better than those custom-tailored, because every process of tailoring is in the hands of the best tailors of the craft — men who are instinctively, intuitively and naturally artistic tailors.

That's why a Semi-ready dress suit becomes your personality—possesses style—fit and permanent shape retention.

SAM CANNON, EX-FIGHTER.

Cuts His Throat With a Razor and Resisted Constable.

Winnipeg, Jan. 17.—With a gaping wound in his throat, inflicted with a razor, which he still held in his hand, Sam Cannon, ex-prize fighter and former sparring partner of Frank Slavin on the Pacific Coast, lay on his bed in his lodging house on Main street, at noon yesterday and fought with those who attempted to take the weapon from him. He seemed fiendishly determined to add to the horror of his attempt to terminate his life. The constable called to the scene had a protracted struggle with the muscular pugilist before he could wrest the razor from him. He was suffering from a derangement of the mind, caused by injuries which he had received when very young, and which have been aggravated by blows which he sustained in a fight with a Mounted Policeman at Regina a year ago.

HAVOC BQ FIERCE GALE.

Numerous Wrecks Reported Along the Coast—French Craft Stranded.

London, Jan. 17.—A fierce gale Sunday night caused much havoc along the coasts of the United Kingdom. There were a number of wrecks of small crafts, resulting in loss of life. A French ketch was driven ashore on the Isle of Wight, and her crew of five men were drowned. All arrivals report terrific weather. The harbors are filled with vessels seeking shelter. No less than fifty steamers have sought shelter at Holy Head. Yesterday morning the bitter cold was accompanied by a gale, and the first skating of the winter commenced in Lancashire.

Her side was crushed in and blood was oozing from her ear when she was found. The unfortunate victim of the accident was 19 years old and lived with her widowed mother. She had been employed at the factory for over four years. An inquest will be held to-night.

He is wanted in Baltimore on a serious charge laid by a little girl of 15 years, who is an inmate of an orphanage asylum. The penalty for the crime is death. The alleged offence was committed about two weeks ago. The prisoner, who is 30 years of age, is a dentist, and will fight extradition.

THE INTERESTS OF LABOUR.

It goes without saying that the most important matter that can engage the attention of our lawmakers and Government is the protection and promotion of the interests of the people who work; for it is by them that all true wealth is produced. This is not to say that labour needs special protection — it given a fair chance it was take care of itself. But it has not had always a fair chance. The tendency of capital is to seek its own, and, unfortunately, in many cases, though there are exceptions, complicated conditions arise in which labour gets the bad end of the bargain. Under such circumstances it is the duty of a Government, in the best interests of those it governs, to remedy by legislation the conditions that operate against the interests of labour and to give labour fair play in the fight for equal rights. This the Ontario Government has sought to do and it has, therefore, had placed upon the Statute Books of Ontario the largest amount of advanced legislation relating to labour to be found in any country. Not only in this way has the Liberal Government been true to its guiding principle—progressive reform — but it contemplates a further departure. At the great Liberal convention held in Toronto declaration of a policy was made to give Labour a special department of his own to be presided over by a Minister of Colonization and Labour, at the same time a practical recognition of the special rights of labour, and a promise of great usefulness in its behalf.

It would take a great deal of space to give in detail even a summary of the numerous provisions for the protection of labour, which the Liberal Government has embodied in its labour legislation, but at the mass meeting in the opera house, next Monday night, as will be seen by notice in another column, the subject will be fully dealt with. Mr. R. C. Clute, K.C., who has paid especial attention to the subject, will consider it in the course of his address. In no town in Canada should the progressive spirit, energy and enterprise of the Ross Government, appeal more strongly than to the people of Peterborough, the most progressive and enterprising town in the Dominion, and in no town is labour more largely represented in proportion to population, or more vitally interested in the solution by legislation, of the many problems that affect the welfare and interests of the workingmen. Every workingman, who intelligently appreciates the importance of his calling, and of the matters that affect it, should hear Mr. Clute at the opera house, next Monday night. He will hear a great subject, greatly dealt with — by one who has not only studied the subject, but has been personally engaged in connection with the investigation of several serious labour troubles, and had special opportunities for observation.

EDITORIAL NOTES.

Seven days more to work for McWilliams.

Enthusiastic from the beginning, the Liberal workers grew more so every day.

Mr. Whitney admitted at Chatham last Friday night that perhaps a few men reported in election trials had been punished. It is only a few days since he said positively that "no man had been prosecuted and no man had been punished." Would he manage the affairs of the province by this facts-be-confounded method?

Andrew Mecampbell, unseated because of gross election frauds and now Mr. Whitney's trusted organiser, is likely to have a place in that gentleman's cabinet (if ever he has one,) according to a Conservative organ. This emphasises the peculiarity of Mr. Whitney's method of fighting the "saturnalia of corruption" which he blusteringly charges against the Liberal party.

"For 24 years there has been a Conservative Opposition in Ontario. These Oppositions have been under different leaderships and identified with different policies. We do not remember that any of these oppositions was ever satisfactory to Hon. G. W. Ross."—Toronto World, Jan. 16. Possibly that isn't Mr. Ross' fault. We cannot on our part remember that any one of them was ever satisfactory to the electors of Ontario.

Perhaps it is not such a bad omen to have the Review's prophet against one. That gentleman said some weeks ago in grandiloquent terms that as sure as there was a sun in the sky Mr. Borden would be Premier of the Dominion, after Nov. 3rd. We all know what happened to Mr. Borden. The prophet is working even harder for Mr. Bradburn and Mr. Whitney. Being prophetic after the event is the safer way.

We have a practical tribute to the excellence of the Ontario Agricultural College, in the following fact: The Government of the Orange River Colony has sent a young Boer farmer, Mr. Neethling, over to the Ontario Agricultural College to study Canadian methods. Mr. Neethling says that Mr. Palmer and his Ontario associates, are doing an excellent work in improving agricultural methods in South Africa, and are receiving hearty support from the Boer farmers in both colonies. Thus the newest colony of the empire is wise in sitting at the feet of one of the oldest, and the greatest, of the colonial possessions.

GOVERNMENT'S GOOD RECORD.

Two Elements Which go to Make up a Well-conducted Provincial Business

And this Applies to the Ross Government as well as to Commercial Enterprise.

The Province of Ontario has been and is to-day the richest in the Dominion of Canada. It has afforded the most tempting opportunities for exploitation at the hands of unscrupulous men, and under other auspices it might have made many men wealthy at the expense of its own people.

What are the results of 31 years of Liberal administration? The province of Quebec has a debt of over twenty-two millions of dollars. Nova Scotia and New Brunswick owe more than three millions each. British Columbia has a debt of more than eight millions.

Ontario has no debt.

During 1903 the Province of Quebec paid in interest and charges on her public debt more than one and a half millions of dollars. During the same period Ontario earned nearly two hundred thousand dollars from interest on her investments.

At the end of 1903 Ontario had nearly two millions of dollars in cash on hand and owned assets of over eight millions as against liabilities of between five and six millions. Ontario had according to her last financial statement a net surplus of two and a half millions of dollars.

That sort of financial statement would be well received by the shareholders of any joint stock company.

The Government of Ontario has done more to assist and promote the building of railways within its boundaries than all the other provinces of Canada put together.

The Government of Ontario has afforded employment for thousands of men by a judicious assistance of industrial enterprises.

The Government of Ontario has promoted a system of good roads throughout the province by an adequate business-like method of local assistance for this purpose.

The Government of Ontario has promoted the development of the electrical power at Niagara Falls, thus setting in motion an enterprise which will be of incalculable benefit to a great district throughout the province, and at the same time yielding a provincial revenue of over a quarter of a million dollars a year.

The Government of Ontario has established a Department of Agriculture which is the admiration of other countries.

And the Government of Ontario has done this and other things without scandal, without dishonesty and without display of incompetence. On the other hand it has provided for the people of the province an estate which is yearly growing in value under improvements and in the possibilities of future wealth.

Messrs. McWilliams and William Anderson, the candidates of the Government in West and East Peterborough respectively, ask for the support of the electors on this record. If they go to the Legislature it is believed that they will worthily represent the interests of the county of Peterborough there, and will give valuable service in assisting to promote those further enterprises for the benefit of Ontario, to which the Government is committed.

The electors of the two Peterboroughs are asked, on Jan. 25th, to support the administrative record of the Liberal Government of Ontario, and to return Messrs. McWilliams and Anderson as fitting representatives in the next Legislature of the province.

THE SALVATION ARMY'S WORK.

Detailed Statement of the Work During 1904.

Finances and how They Have Been Disposed of—Local Officers Issue Statement.

The local officers of the Salvation Army have issued a statement showing in detail the operations of the Army here during the last year:—

313 meetings have been held at the street corners, where thousands of people have listened to the music and song. In this way many have heard the Gospel that do not go to any place of worship. They are attracted by the music and singing to our Hall, where they spend their evenings enjoyably, instead of in the bar-room and other places of sin and vice. In some cases the influence of these meetings prevent them committing sins that would blight their whole life.

MEETINGS IN THE BARRACKS.

430 meetings have been held in the Hall, with a total attendances of 26,185. Weekly average of 675 people of all classes. During the year 168 have publicly come forward to the penitent-form for Salvation and Holiness. Some of these were great drunkards, but are now living good Christian lives. 47 have been added to our members' roll during the year.

VISITATION.

The officers have spent 1,151 hours in visiting the poor and sick, in fact all classes of people. Besides this the officers spent 530 hours in selling War Crys on the streets, in the hotels, and from door to door. 11,232 War Crys have been sold by the officers and the War Cry Brigade. In this way a great deal of good has been done and many people influenced to lead a better life.

The War Crys are not sold to enrich the officers or the corps, but for the benefit of those who read them.

SUNDAY SCHOOL WORK.

Our Sunday School and Band of Love work has made progress during the year. In the year 1904 our average attendance at Sunday School was 96 per Sunday; for 1904 the average attendance was 119, and our attendance for the month of December averaged 139; during the year 36 children professed conversion, and many of their lives show the change. We have now 14 classes in operation with a staff of teachers and helpers numbering 20, our new International lessons are being used; they are published in London, Eng., for all parts of the world. A new system of registering the attendance has just been started. Band of Love attendance for the year, 1,629. In these meetings all kinds of work is taken up to interest the children and to fit them for future usefulness. Arrangements have been made to enlarge the Sunday School, hall and class rooms to accommodate the increasing attendance. We take in all kinds of children, whether well dressed or not. All are welcome.

THE BAND.

The band, which is one of the largest and best Army bands in Canada, is certainly a credit to the corps and to the Town of Peterborough. A year ago we had 30 commissioned bandsmen, today we have 27; some of these were drunkards until they were attracted by the band to the meetings, where they got soundly converted, and are now bandsmen themselves, trying to win others to Christ. But more than half the members of the band were junior soldiers, came through the Sunday School, got converted, learned to play an instrument, and became bandsmen. The band played out on the streets on 153 occasions, and played about 43 hymns and selections in the hall, exclusively of their weekly band practice.

The band plays the latest music published by the S. A. in London, Eng., and sent direct to the bandsmen. During the year the band has purchased 23 new instruments, the outcome of the $300 band fund, besides one instrument given; lately two new instruments (Saxophones) have been purchased, which are a great addition to the band, making a total of 16 new instruments.

None of the bandsmen have ever received any remuneration for their services, as is the custom with other bands. They not only give their services free, but contribute towards the support of the band and the corps. Many have testified to the blessing and help received through the Army Band.

LEAGUE OF MERCY.

The League of Mercy is composed of 18 women soldiers commissioned to visit the poor and sick in their homes, to visit the Hospital, Jail and Protestant Home.

Hospital.—The League of Mercy has visited the hospital 53 times this year, reading and praying with from 15 to 20 each time. In that way hundreds of poor sufferers have been blessed and helped.

Jail.—The League conducts a meeting in the jail every two weeks; those who come to the meeting are dealt with personally, after the meeting is over. Eighty-nine prisoners have been dealt with personally and urged to seek salvation. During the last two months some very sad tales have been told of misspent lives. A number have been induced to give up their sins and seek salvation. In cases where these prisoners have to go to Toronto prison their names are passed on to Brigadier Archibald, who looks after them while they are there, and after they come out. War Crys are given to all the prisoners.

Protestant Home.—In this institution a Salvation meeting is conducted every two weeks. Most of the inmates attend and are much blessed and cheered; and some have been converted.

League Visiting.—Six hundred and twenty-four hours spent in visiting the poor and sick in their homes, nearly two thousand calls made, many times sitting up nights with the sick, helping in their house work, giving clothes, food, medicine, etc. During last winter and up to December 31st, 33 poor families have been helped. Another thing which is a great blessing is the writing of letters for the sick, a great many having been written.

Giving Presents.—The League gave a present to each inmate of the hospital, jail and Protestant Home at Christmas. War Crys were given out each week at the above institutions. A lot of parcels of clothing has been given away this winter so far, and many more could be given out, if we had them to give.

A ROYAL RECEPTION.

Premier Ross Addresses South Wellington Electors—Advancement of Ontario Is What Government Appeals On.

Guelph, Jan. 17.—The Liberals of South Wellington last night showed the spirit with which ridings are redeemed when they tendered a magnificent demonstration to Premier Ross, who delivered to a monster meeting a splendid speech full of energy and of argument for the return of the Government. This gathering was confirmation of the happy news sent out from time to time that "Downey is a goner," for the party rank and file are in high fettle, and better organized and united than for years past. The Premier, though worn by incessant campaigning, spoke for nearly an hour and a half, finishing in a fine burst of patriotic fervor, which led an old Scotchman to remark at the close: "Man, but that's the stuff." It was indeed the stuff to make opponents waver, to make friends rally and cheer, and to make every man and woman a better Canadian. In his defence of the Government his attitude might be described as was that of the character of old: "Be thou as chaste as ice, as pure as snow, thou shalt not escape calumny."

Work Yet to Be Done.

Unmoved by the abuse, unswerving from his high purpose to serve his Province, he will work on, not dwelling in the past, but in the future, leaving his opponents to spend their time talking "corruption, corruption, corruption." In reviewing the steps the Government had taken to develop Ontario's industries, the Premier surprised everyone who had not kept the closest account of them, and in his references to the means taken to stimulate Canadian loyalty he was able to show how the Empire Day movement, begun in Toronto, had spread throughout the English-speaking colonies.

The meeting was one of the most successful of the Premier's tour, and its effect will be felt throughout a wide radius.

Mr. Whitney At Renfrew.

Renfrew, Jan. 17.—Mr. J. P. Whitney addressed a large meeting here last night in the Temperance Hall in the interests of Mr. T. W. McGarry, who is contesting the South riding with Hon. Frank R. Latchford. The Opposition leader was given a cordial reception, the Renfrew brass band providing music. He was in good form and, for an hour and a half held the close attention and gained the occasional applause of his audience. Mr. Whitney was preceded by the Conservative candidate, Mr. McGarry, and not a few were heard to remark that the local man more than held his own in the contest of eloquence.

As Liberal Rather Miss Nominated.

Toronto, Jan. 17.—The Liberals of South Toronto last night decided to place in nomination for the Local House John J. Hunter, a prominent labor man, and member of Typographical Union, No. 91. The convention was held in Broadway Hall.

soldiers filled the streets and refused to obey their officers. Many of them destroyed the guns upon the positions they had defended, and came into the city without permission. The infantry loudly protested that the fortress had been given away, threw their rifles and ammunition into the harbor and proceeded to break into warehouses and loot and drink until in a helpless condition.

Surrender Not Necessary.

It was evident that the surrender was not necessary, as there were 31,000 effective men in the fortress. The supply of ammunition was short, but it was not exhausted. Food was scarce, but private stores were not requisitioned by the military. There is no difficulty in getting good meals in the city even now, from the stores in private possession. A portion of the fortress was capable of defence for months longer. It was the opinion of non-combatants at Port Arthur that the surrender was unnecessary, as the troops were willing and able to fight to the bitter end. Gen. Stoessel was much blamed for what was characterized as a disgraceful conclusion of a splendid defence, which ended with the death of Major-Gen. Kondrachenko, who was loved by the soldiers and was the life of the defence.

Services For the Dead.

Memorial services were held yesterday in honor of the spirits of the Japanese dead, upon the plain north of the villages of Shushi, a short distance from Port Arthur. Regiments representing the entire Japanese army were present. A shrine was erected on the crest of a small hill and the troops formed a circle around it. Gen. Nogi and his staff were present. Lunch was served afterwards in the open to all the officers present. It was a splendid spectacle.

Manitoba's Boundaries.

Winnipeg, Jan. 17.—The motion to send a memorial to the Dominion Government passed in the Local House last evening without a dissenting voice. The Attorney-General moved the resolution and, after a few remarks from the leader of the Opposition, Hon. C. J. Mickel, the House passed it unanimously. The idea is to go northward to Hudson Bay to include a seaport where the province can build its own railway and to take in a large portion of the districts of Assiniboia and Saskatchewan.

CHRISTIAN SCIENCE

Four Toronto Demonstrators Charged With Manslaughter.

VERDICT OF CORONER'S JURY

Jury Finds Mrs. Goodfellow, Mrs. Grant, Mrs. Lee and Wm. Brundrette Guilty of Culpable Negligence and Recommends That the Laws Should Be Altered to Meet Such Cases.

Toronto, Jan. 17.—We find that Wallace Goodfellow came to his death, Jan. 4, 1905, at 61½ Vanauley street, from typhoid fever, and upon the evidence it shows culpable negligence on the part of Mrs. Sarah Goodfellow, Mrs. Grant, Edward Brundrette, and Mrs. Lee.

And we believe them to be guilty of gross manslaughter; and we further believe that deceased would have recovered if he had had proper nursing and medical treatment, as shown by the percentage of deaths from this disease.

We further recommend that if the law does not reach this class of Christian Scientists it should be amended to cover such.

We also think that medical men should be more careful in the issuing of death certificates, as many cases are not investigated.

Dr. Carveth Criticised.

The above verdict was returned by Coroner Cotton's jury after midnight after hearing the evidence of Dr. Carveth, who was severely criticised by the coroner for his ready issuing of a death certificate; Drs. Caven and Johnston, who conducted the post-mortem examination, and Mrs. Goodfellow, mother of the deceased.

Crown Attorney Drayton stated that no warrants would be issued, but that summonses would be served on the persons named in the finding, and police court proceedings will follow. The determined wording of the verdict leaves little doubt that the case will result in a bitter fight, as all who believe in Christian Science will be inclined to consider that they are all more or less on trial.

Dr. Carveth's Testimony.

Dr. Carveth stated that Goodfellow was seriously ill when he was called to see him, and was partly unconscious. The people in his room told the doctor that he had been at work three weeks before, and had been attended by Dr. Riordon up to eight days previously. Mrs. Taylor had told him that the death was in the hands of the coroner, and when he met Wallace Goodfellow's brother, who asked him for a certificate of death, he told him that there might be trouble, for if the case was in the coroner's hands, the certificate could not be used.

The coroner questioned Dr. Carveth as to whether he had not given certificates in Christian Science cases before, and he answered that he had attended the Lewis and Frasse cases. He was called in to attend patients who professed Christian Science.

Asked in what diseases Christian Scientists needed a medical practitioner, he answered that he was not called in to treat them as Christian Scientists. He was called in in the regular way. Coroner Cotton stated that in the Lewis case Dr. Carveth had been reprimanded for issuing a certificate, and should not have done so in this case; but should have notified the chief coroner. In defence, Dr. Carveth argued that he knew the case was in the hands of the coroner when he issued the certificate. Dr. Cotton thought this was hardly possible, as he got his information from Mrs. Taylor before the young man died, and, in any event, knowing that it was in the coroner's hand, he should not have issued the certificate.

Gave Wrong Inference.

The certificate stated that death was due to pneumonia, that Goodfellow had been ill two weeks. It was signed by Dr. Carveth as medical attendant.

Coroner Cotton stated that the certificate threw out the inference that Dr. Carveth had been in attendance during the two weeks of illness, whereas he was only in attendance for two days; that he signed the certificate knowing that there was culpable negligence for eight days previous to death, and, being the last doctor in attendance, it was his duty to notify the coroner. This was a death from typhoid, and as such the remains could not leave the city without passing the medical health officer.

Dr. Carveth stated that he filled in the certificate honestly. Dr. Cotton replied that he called it pneumonia, and knowing there had been negligence in this case it was his duty to notify the coroner.

Dr. Carveth asked for instructions in writing.

Dr. Cotton answered that he got instructions in writing in the Lewis case.

What Postmortem Showed.

Dr. Caven read his post-mortem examination, which showed that death was due to typhoid. The system showed an attempt to heal itself. Considering that he was up and walking around, the effect would be to destroy his chances of life. The exertion was making demands on his life that the system was not able to stand.

Dr. Johnston said that he understood the young man did not receive any treatment. The post-mortem showed that he had died from typhoid and was through the worst of it. Had he had treatment to keep his heart going he would most probably have lived. Broths and things of that kind, given as treatment, would increase the danger of the case, and lemonade was the next thing to death.

Mr. Robinette, counsel for the accused, asked what caused death.

"Exhaustion," replied Dr. Johnston.

"What caused exhaustion?" queried the lawyer.

"Want of nourishment," said the doctor.

"He was given nourishment," suggested the lawyer.

"That kind of nourishment would kill him," was the reply. "Had he had reasonable treatment he would no doubt have lived."

Liquor and Other Stimulants.

"Are there not some doctors who don't give liquor?" asked Mr. Robinette.

"I thought that question had been threshed out long ago and that liquor is recognized as a good stimulant," said Dr. Johnston, "but there are men who do not give liquor. They give strychnine, of course."

"Is not beef tea a stimulant?" suggested Mr. Robinette.

"Beef tea is not a stimulant in typhoid."

Mrs. Goodfellow was put through a two hours' examination, in which she gave very little evidence that is new. She said that it was her son's desire that a doctor should not be called in, and that he could have gone to the hospital had he wanted to. Mrs. Lee, a Christian Scientist, was called in and was paid $1 a day for treatment. Brundrette got $1 a day until Mrs. Lee came. Mrs. Grant got nothing.

Mrs. Stewart could not be found, and the subpoena left at her home several days ago is still awaiting her. The officers were informed that she had left the city on a visit and would not be back for a few days.

SOME RUSS ORGIES

Port Arthur Naval Officers Were Generally Drunk.

ANNIHILATE JAP REGIMENT

Murderous Fire From a Masked Battery Into Which Their Impetuosity Hurled Them—Big Doings Presaged By Movements of Gen. Mistchenko's Cossacks — Czar's Rescript Deems Peace Hopes.

London, Jan. 16.—Under date of Jan. 15, the Port Arthur correspondent of The Times says: Gen. Nogi attended by his staff, the divisional commanders and foreign attaches, reviewed detachments of all arms in the new town square to-day. There was a stirring display. The generals afterwards marched through the town, which shows few signs of bombardment. No casualties occurred to women or children, who lived in the houses throughout the siege. Champagne was always obtainable. There was little dysentery or typhus, but much scurvy, owing to the lack of vegetables. It seems that General Stoessel was responsible for the failure to fortify Roju Hill. Many of his military officers were useless, applying for leave on occasions of attack, and leaving their commands to sergeants. The naval officers were useless and generally drunk.

Most Important Action.

Haunchan, Jan. 13.—(Via Mukden.)—Jan. 16.—There has been no serious fighting for several days, though night skirmishes on both sides continue. The most important action recently was that in which Captains Kosinoff and Troitzgki, with 75 Cossacks, drove the Japanese out of the Villages of Mitzi and Tkhangay and captured a large amount of forage at both places. Gen. Linevitch has been inspecting the whole front and finds that the men and supplies are in excellent condition.

Jap Regiment Annihilated.

On Jan. 10 a Japanese regiment advanced in the face of a furious fire from batteries and drove back the Russian outposts, who drew on the Japanese to a masked battery and later allowed them to come on suddenly, when the Russians opened a murderous fire, the infantry at the same time falling on the Japanese flanks. The Japanese regiment was almost completely annihilated and the remainder fled in wild disorder, leaving heaps of dead and wounded on the field. The Russians pressed the pursuit and took the Japanese positions at noon. At noon the Japanese bombarded Liaofentun and Liutsyatun and also Lime Tree and Novgotod Hills, which they appear to be extremely anxious to capture.

Stricken with Paralysis

Mrs. W. R. Sutherland, St. Andrews, Man., writes:—"I was stricken with paralysis and lost power of the tongue and left leg. For six months I obtained no relief either by doctors' prescriptions or other medicines. My husband got me Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, which has revitalized my nerves and given me full power of the paralyzed parts. I am strong and well now, thanks to this good medicine."

The twilight Maids are always through their wash at twelve o'clock.

SUNLIGHT SOAP

With ordinary soap a woman has to work so hard and so long on wash day she has no time for preparing any of the family meals. Wash day is a trial, and the good wife faces each with a sigh of despair.

Sunlight Soap makes all the difference in the world. No toiling—no rubbing—no boiling—less than half the labor with much better results. Most women are all through their wash by twelve o'clock when they wash with Sunlight Soap the Sunlight way. It makes child's play of work.

ASK FOR THE OCTAGON BAR.

ADDRESS IS PASSED

Sir Wilfrid's Humorous Treatment of Mr. Foster.

ONLY FOUR MEMBERS SPOKE

Mover and Seconder Acquit Themselves Well—Mr. Maclean Says Corporations Get Too Much Consideration—The Premier Announces That Northwest Autonomy Is the Most Important Legislation.

Ottawa, Jan. 17.—The debate on the address was completed within two hours and a half yesterday afternoon, and the deck is cleared for the real business of the session. Mr. D. McDonald moved the address, and demonstrated that in his election the historic County of Pictou has made another valuable contribution to the debating talent of the House. Mr. Parent, the clever son of Hon. S. N. Parent, Premier of Quebec, who occupied a seat in the Speaker's gallery, seconded the resolution in an eloquent speech delivered in his mother tongue. Hon. Geo. E. Foster signalized his re-entrance to the House by a speech of an hour, which elicited from Sir Wilfrid the remark that he had heard the same speech many times between 1896 and 1900, and that Mr. Foster had not profited by four years of reflection given him by the electors. His speech demonstrated that, like the true Bourbon, he learned nothing and he forgot nothing. The Premier announced that the only important legislation this session would be the measure granting autonomy to the Northwest Territories, and made an eloquent reference to the new Governor-General. Mr. W. F. Maclean wound up the debate with a general criticism of Parliament for its alleged tendency to give corporate interests preference over the rights of the people.

Petitions and Bills.

The preliminary proceedings were very brief. Mr. Wm. Galliher, the stalwart representative from Kootenay, had the honor of presenting the first petition to the tenth Parliament. It asked for power to extend the Nicola, Kamloops & Similkameen Coal & Railway Company from Osoosos Lake to Grand Forks.

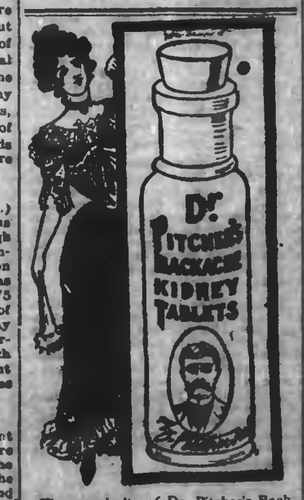
The Speaker read a message from his Excellency intimating that Hon. W. S. Fielding, Hon. L. P. Brodeur, Hon. C. S. Hyman, Hon. E. B. Emmerson and Mr. Speaker had been appointed a committee to oversee matters of internal economy of the House.

Mr. Lancaster introduced a couple of bills to amend the railway act, 1903, and to amend the act respecting certificates to master and mates of ships.

Mr. W. F. Maclean also introduced a bill to amend the railway act, 1903.

More Pay For Police.

Sir Wilfrid Laurier gives notice of the following increases in pay of the Northwest Mounted Police: Commissioner of Police $3,000 per annum, assistant commissioners $2,000, superintendent $1,800, inspectors $1,400, surgeons and assistant surgeons $1,800, veterinary surgeons $1,400, four staff sergeants $2 per day each, other staff sergeants $1.75, other non-coms. $1.25, constables $1, special constables and scouts $4.50, burglers, under 18 years, 50c, working pay to artisans 75c, with extra pay and allowances to the police in the Yukon and unorganized territories.



The superiority of Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets over other forms of treatment is due to the fact that they are the prescription of Dr. Zina Pitcher, the famous specialist—were used successfully and tested in private practice by him for many years before they were given to the public at large. They contain expensive specific ingredients not found in any other Kidney remedy. Is it any wonder, then, that they cure lumbago, diabetes, gravel, Bright's disease, uric acid in the blood, rheumatism, neuralgia, dropsy, irritability of the bladder, and Kidney troubles of old people and children when other remedies fail?

Read what Mrs. W. Martin, Orangeville, Ont., has to say: "Some time ago I had a good deal of trouble with my back, due to a cold that settled in the Kidneys. I was also troubled with dizziness and headache.

I started taking Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets, and by the time I had used one bottle the backache, headache and feelings of dizziness had all disappeared. I consider the Tablets a good medicine."

Dr. Pitcher's Backache-Kidney Tablets are put up in boxes containing 50 chocolate-coated tablets, sold by druggists or sent by mail. The Dr. Zina Pitcher Co., Toronto, Ont.
